REVIEWS—AGAIN

OFFICIAL recognition, and in terms of decision, of the exhibitor's prior interest in information about product and the importance of the rendering of that service of information by the trade press, were still laggard, reluctant, uncertain, evasive in the distributors' discussions of previewings under the Consent Decree, this week.

Some progress was to be noted, in that from more than one home office came notions that perhaps it would be best if the product were to be displayed for trade press review in New York instead of Hollywood. The most immediate consideration seemed to be that this would tend to remove the reviewing operation for the trade away from the high pressures of the lay press, or Churchill Group, in Hollywood. This was said with cognizance that in Hollywood the whole press relation tends to be complicated, if not also obfuscated, by the interests of personalities in quest of a good press without consideration for product or the box office.

The making of Hollywood the reviewing center of the industry has been a relatively recent development, and one decidedly incidental to other developments in the structure and practises of the industry. The Hollywood reviewing function is in fact merely an outgrowth of the Hollywood previewing system which was set up primarily as a clinical service to production, and secondarily for the aggrandizement and glorification of persons who seemed to require it, including both producers and players. Despite criticism of the folderols and vanities of those occasions of sable, pearls and chinchilla, orchids, microphones and floodlights, they served to supply to insular, provincial Hollywood that something that the plaudits of audiences on Broadway had given to the stage and to the inspiration of its people.

That aspect of reviewing, as Hollywood and Production have been "taking over", has tended to color the whole function, to put the emphasis on the lay press and to correspondingly forget the exhibitor's interest and that of the press which exists to serve him.

UNTIL this development and the beginnings of the taking over by Hollywood, the vast preponderance of the product was reviewed for the trade in New York, where the sales were made, where service of the screen was conceived, originated and executed. In that period the pictures and the retail customers enjoyed competent and satisfactory attention.

It has been made more than obvious in the instance of many pictures, some of recent release, that the Hollywood point of view and measure of interest and merit does not coincide in all particulars with that of the practising showmen of the retail field. There's many a picture that is no story at all to the correspondents and columnists of Hollywood which is still significant and valuable product in the theatre. New York is more likely to discover that than Hollywood, for a number of reasons. Outstanding, for instance, is the fact that Gene Autry, one of the largest of box-office facts, was still just another singing cowboy to Hollywood long after he had loomed large on the books of New York, and in face of the fact that he never sees Broadway either. Hollywood tends to associate with itself, talk to itself, play for itself. New York has to serve the customers of the whole land, and all the time.

It is urged upon the distributor that he will not be serving his product by embarassment of his retailer, by telling that retailer's customers first about the product, by sending the customer to the box office with prejudgments or to ask questions to which the exhibitor can have no answer. The selling and the reviewing which scoops the exhibitor and his press renders him no service, makes him defensive.

Among the projected procedures is a suggestion that the trade press shall see the product, at the earliest, at the time when it is shown at the trade showings which are held to comply with the Consent Decree. The fact is that preponderantly, so far as may be discovered now, the showings projected are precisely for that and nothing else—to comply with the Decree. The exhibitor is not expected to attend these showings, will not in most instances be encouraged to attend them. He will be most formally invited.

Meanwhile, it is also more than obvious that for a very large number of showmen attendance at these screenings will be too costly of time and travel. No matter how and when the product is trade-shown, the exhibitor will be looking to the pages of his trade press for information of the product, compactly, conveniently catalogued and collated, under one set of covers. This has been the exhibitor's buying and booking custom for more than thirty years. He will continue it.

FOR THE RECORD

AS set down in our news columns the other day, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, discussing South American criticism of the appointment of Mr. Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., as a cultural commissioner and envoy of sorts to the Latin Americas, handed him over to the motion picture industry by saying:

" . . . Mr. Fairbanks went only as an ambassador of goodwill to study the particular subject of the movie as it affects our relationship with our South American neighbors. He is extremely well fitted to make this study and, on returning, to put his findings before his own industry."

It seems necessary to record that it was the White House, not the motion picture industry, which sent Mr. Fairbanks to South America. The young man has been a week-end and social intimate of the White House family. His connection with the motion picture has been as an actor, and he has never previously been known to be either a student of, or concerned about, the institutionality of the motion picture.

The White House sent Mr. Fairbanks to South America. The State Department has heard a great deal about that.

In fairness to Mr. Fairbanks, it should be observed that, if he had been sent by the motion picture industry, the Latin

Blocks-of-5 Test Near

A "war of nerves" in Minnesota this week was believed by many observers to be the prelude to an actual offensive by distributors against the Minnesota anti-block-of-five law, as a court test by distributors grew near. Papers were completed Tuesday in New York and were forwarded to company counsel in Minneapolis, with United Artists, a non-decree signatory, joining the "Big Five" decree signers in the attack on the bill which requires making all films available for purchase.

Northwest Allied, meanwhile, made it clear that it was taking it upon itself to see that any county attorney would be empowered to move swiftly in case of a violation, by a complaint to be brought by Allied.

L. E. Goldhammer, RKO distribution head in that territory, revealed that he had been given the "go ahead" signal to sell 1941-42 product on any basis he chose, without regard to the law if he sees fit.

Fred Strom, secretary of Northwest Allied, revealed he had encountered 100 per cent exhibitor opposition to any contest of the law in a tour of the territory during which he contacted members not previously sounded out at district meetings.

Americans probably would not have had the line of objection which they have raised against him as a cultural commissioner of the great United States. It seems that the Latin neighbors think that, as a cultural commissioner, Mr. Fairbanks is still an actor.

Mr. Fairbanks has himself given testimony on his view of his position as a representative of, and expert on, the motion picture. It will be recalled (Motion Picture Herald, June 7th) that he made a short-wave broadcast from Buenos Aires, an interview in which he was asked about Hollywood production performance, and replied: "Well, for the past couple of years I have been busy in politics and other affairs and I have been out of the picture. . . ."

Now, this week Mr. Fairbanks turned up in Washington rendering a report and was quoted by the Associated Press as saying he was a special envoy and "fact finder" for President Roosevelt and the State Department.

Local Pride

LOCAL pride in the histories of the great Southwest is colorfully mantained in Enid, Oklahoma, by the famed Cherokee Strip Roundup Club, an organization of skilled mounted riders, whose cooperation was secured by local showman George Limerick on behalf of MGM's "Billy the Kid."

Obtaining permission to block off the entire street in front of the Aztec Theatre, the Griffiths' circuit city manager and 1938 Quigley Grand Awards winner, arranged an elaborate four-hour Horseback Jamboree and cowboy parade in advance of the picture's midnight premiere. Coffee and old-fashioned sourdough biscuits, served from a ranch chuck-wagon out front further distinguished the unusual exploitation, as reported in detail in Managers' Round Table, on page 65.

Sparks to Paramount

PARAMOUNT on Tuesday, in New York, confirmed the sale by E. J. Sparks of his 40 per cent interest in the 100 Sparks houses in Florida, to the company, which had heretofore been a partner. The reported price, not confirmed by the company, is $1,350,000, of which $500,000 is being paid immediately, and of which $85,000 will then be paid annually for ten years.

Paramount said Mr. Sparks was resigning his presidencies in the Florida corporations controlling the theatres, but would continue "in an advisory and consultative capacity."

The company also confirmed the continuation of Frank Rogers, B. B. Garner, M. C. Talley, and Fred Kent in active management of the Florida circuit, and as stockholders.

Esper on Probation

DWAIN ESPER, one-time independent film producer, has been fined $500, and given a probationary sentence of three years, by United States Circuit Court Judge Harry Holzer, in Los Angeles. Esper was charged with sending lewd phonograph records via Railway Express, across the California state line.

Esper has long been associated in Hollywood memory with such ventures as the production of "How to Undress in Front of Your Husband," featuring Elaine Barrie, John Barrymore's ex-wife, and sponsorship of "Marijuana," which had some theatre exhibition.

He was also identified as head of an enterprise called Hollywood Producers, which offered these and other subjects in 16mm and 8mm versions—this outfit offering additionally such subjects as "Seventh Commandment," "Narcotic," "Boys Will Be Girls," and "Strip Poker," all of which have been described in printed matter as depicting "gin inflated youth on the loose," "truth about sex, frankly and fearlessly told," etc., etc.

Tit for Tat

LAST week Los Angeles newspapers joined studios, guilds, every institution in the community, to promote public interest in and sale of tickets to the United Service Organizations all-out Sunday night show in Hollywood Bowl, proceeds of which swelled the fund to provide places of entertainment adjacent to military training camps. (See page 56.)

Newspaper cooperation reached its peak in page layouts informing the populace of talent volunteering its services to make the project an all-time high in entertainment content.

And newspaper cooperation reached its low in the selection of pictorial adornment for these layouts, seizing the opportunity to dig out of office files the hottest publicity stills on the premises, regardless of age, personality or pertinence.

Thus came to light of publication, in the Los Angeles Daily News, a pre-Breen sweater ban shot, torso in profile, of Paramount's "I Wanted Wings" discovery, over the caption: "Veronica Lake Will Sport a Sweater at USO Show. And she'll show the boys that she also can act."

Miss Lake was not in the show, nor billed to be.

Los Angeles city desks never did like the anti-sweater dictum.

This was their tat.

And their answer to protests by the committee in charge of USO publicity was, "You asked for cooperation, didn't you? Well, you got it."

Balaban on Policy

PARAMOUNT is no longer going to have a set number of pictures for a season. From "1941 on," it is to make all the pictures of quality it can, warranted by bookings obtained under the new Federal consent decree blocks-of-five selling system. This was the message delivered Wednesday at the New York home offices by Barney Balaban, company president, returned from Coast studio conferences. Earlier statements of policy by Mr. Balaban are reported on page 27.

Mr. Balaban said the studio was drawing more money than ever before; that some of the drafts "staggered" him; but that the home office, with faith in the administration of Y. Frank Freeman, studio head, was forwarding the sums as requested. He remarked that $2,600,000 more was sent for the first 16 weeks of the year, than for the same period last year.

Trade showings and sales policies, as well as regional or national conventions, were being arranged, Mr. Balaban said, by Neil Agnew, general sales manager, in conference with home office sales heads, with the titles of the first group to be announced Thursday (July 3rd).

The double feature problem may be eased by better pictures coming from studios, by the exhibitors' opportunity to see them at trade showings, so they can determine which can stand singly; and also, similarly a decree result, by the fewer mass commitments of the exhibitors, which make it easier for them to use single feature programs, Mr. Balaban asserted.

Mr. Balaban sees "too much talk" in the industry about bad business. He said such talk comes from local exhibitors; that the general situation is better this year than last.

'Primer' Not Binding

RKO's field selling staff and home office sales personnel—this week was perusing a "primer" on the meaning of the Federal consent decree, prepared by William Zimmerman, of the RKO legal staff. A disclaimer by RKO, of "responsibility" says that the questions and answers in the booklet are not to be thought "binding" in any controversy between it and a third party, "concerning the construction or the language of the decree"; and that if any inconsistency exists between the answers in the booklet and the decree provisions, "of course the provisions of the decree are controlling."

Some opinion: that RKO still has the right to select its own customers; that it has the right to require an exhibitor to take all 1940-41 "regular" feaures, "in order to get any of them"; that it can insist, from an exhibitor operating more than one theatre in the same exchange territory, that he take RKO product for all his houses; that it can require exhibitors to maintain certain admission prices during exhibition of RKO product; that it may sell short subjects in blocks; that it can withhold features from an exhibitor delinquent on a short subject contract, if the standard short subject, or 1940-41 feature-short subject contract is used; and that the company is not required to insert actual number of clearance days into contract.

Bioff Turn-down

FIRST known refusal of a Hollywood labor group to do business with Willie Bioff on labor matters since the court troubles of the IATSE leader began, two years ago, was reported from Hollywood Wednesday. The Screen Cartoon Guild declined to negotiate with Bioff in the Guild's strike with Disnew Studios. Negotiations for settlement broke down, in consequence, Tuesday night when the Guild committee withdrew claiming Bioff was attempting to dictate terms.

Judge Edward A. Conger of the Federal court in New York, Wednesday, denied Bioff's petition for a Government bill of particulars on the charges that he and George Browne extorted $550,000 from four motion picture companies.

Warners Streamline

BECAUSE "under the consent decree, the home office must be in rapid contact with all branches at all times, and, to do this, a certain amount of in-between supervision must be removed," Warner Brothers, Wednesday, in New York, announced that all Warner district sales managers would become field sales managers of their respective territories, and would be added to the branch sales personnel, with fixed assignments in the district office in which they have been operating.

"This means that we are abandoning the now out-moded plan of maintaining sales outposts and are concentrating executive energy in the important market points by having a field sales manager in constant two-way contact with our branch managers and customers," said Gradwell L. Sears.

Mr. Fairbanks Reports

REPORTING directly to Sumner Welles, Acting U. S. Secretary of State, Douglas Fairbanks, who returned early this week from his two-months' tour of six South American countries and the Panama Canal Zone, declared that Latin Americans were "fed up with goodwill missions" and preferred instead greater "practical" cooperation from the United States in economic and cultural fields. He reported that governments of Brazil, Argentina, Chile, Uruguay, Peru and Panama were doing the very best job they could "despite the dangerously effective propaganda of the Nazis." Arriving in New York by plane last Monday, before taking off for Washington, Mr. Fairbanks told reporters he could not "stress too strongly the inroads made by Nazi propaganda. The Nazi strength of resident German groups is not so great numerically," he said, "but their efficiency is tremendous."

Cop Costello Goes

LIEUTENANT Harry Costello, the Chicago police department's oldtime motion picture censor, is scheduled for automatic retirement on July 24th, when he reaches the age of 63, after 37 years on the force. This is according to police regulation.

In his capacity as movie censor, Lt. Costello has been censored many times himself for his activities in closing theatres that showed films he had banned and pressure has been brought on him many times in recent years by organizations who disagreed with his refusal to issue permits for several controversial pictures.

The Los Angeles city attorney has been authorized by the Police Commission to prepare an ordinance governing the licensing of theatres for introduction in the council.

STAR, STORY, PRODUCTION VALUES FACE THEIR GREATEST TEST:—WOBBER

20th Century-Fox Sales Chief Says Company Will Work Singly and in Groups under New Consent Decree Order

From HOLLYWOOD BUREAU

Production with all its numerous facets of star values, types of stories, ability of producers and directors and the like, faces its greatest test under the consent decree, Herman Wobber, 20th Century-Fox general manager of distribution, said last week in Hollywood.

"Under the new sales conditions imposed by the consent decree," Mr. Wobber declared, "pictures will have to stand on their merit alone. We will now find out whether the A's have been carrying the B's, or the B's have been carrying the A's.

There will be no minimum number of playdates for all pictures, good or bad. Good pictures will gross more under the new conditions than ever before; bad pictures will gross less."

Two Announced

Making the first pronouncement of policy by a 20th Century-Fox executive on the new system facing the industry, Mr. Wobber, in a trade press conference in his office at the studio, said, among other things:

The first block of five pictures of the company will be made up and announced at the annual convention, to be held in Los Angeles, July 16-18, and two of the pictures will be "Private Nurse," first of a new series, and one of the "Michael Shayne, Detective," group.

His company is not committed to a policy of adhering to blocks of five, for in some instances, pictures will be sold singly and, in one case, the three western pictures on the schedule will be sold as a block.

Start of the decree-ordered trade showings has not yet been determined but probably will be at the convention, with the company definitely planning to use at first the screening rooms in each of its exchanges for the showings, rather than hiring theatres.

Receipts alone will determine the number of pictures to be made on 20th Century-Fox' 1941-42 program.

Producers will be able to get a much quicker reaction to exhibitor and public tastes in motion picture entertainment via the trade showings.

There is a "crying need" for new faces on the screen and the company has embarked on a policy of building new players.

To Revamp Selling Ideas

In Hollywood for pre-convention discussions with studio executives on product, Mr. Wobber said the company might "entirely revamp its selling ideas" for the new season and that it planned "with blind courage to increase its negative investments to a higher average than ever before."

"Through a more rapid determination of exhibitor and public tastes via the trade showings as to likes and dislikes in entertainment, we can have a more accurate lineup on the boxoffice values of stars, featured players, types of stories, whether they be musical, drama, comedy or what all, and directors' and producers' work," he said.

"Every picture will be on its own, and the individual picture will be the unit of production, and not the entire year's program.

"Elastic" Budget

"The studio will not be restricted to sales conditions in the production of pictures. Budgets will be more elastic on each picture. There is, I firmly believe, a direct relation of grosses to the amount of money spent in the production of a picture. In all but unusual instances, the greater the amount of money spent on a film, the greater is its gross."

Convention delegates will see all or parts of "Charlie's Aunt," "Sun Valley," "Belle Starr," "Wild Geese Calling," "A Yank in the R.A.F.," "Weekend in Havana," "How Green Was My Valley," and some lower budget pictures, Mr. Wobber announced, adding that out of these pictures three would be taken to complete the first block.

Because the company's release season starts August 1st, a month earlier than other companies, Mr. Wobber declared, trade showings will start about the last week in July. Preliminary plans call for the confining of trade showings to be held at staggered periods in the screening rooms of the exchanges in key cities, although arrangements may be made for screenings of the films in cities more convenient to exhibitors in various areas such as Spokane, Wash., and Butte, Montana.

See Need for New Stars

Discussing new personalities, Mr. Wobber said it was his belief that one of the reasons for the current boxoffice slump was the dearth of new personalities. "There is a crying need," he said, "for new faces. Their development has been practically nil for some time, and the old faces are wearing out."

On the 20th Century-Fox agenda is a plan for the nurturing of new screen people, he said, naming contract players Carole Landis, John Sutton, Dana Andrews, Lynn Barri, Laird Cregar, John Shepperd, George Montgomery and Roddy McDowell as the first to be groomed.

"Never before has there been so much money in circulation with the film industry not getting its just share," he said. "Film grosses are running in waves. A picture may alternate from setting records in one locality for high grosses and records in others for low grosses. We have noted that generally business drops upon receipt of bad news from the war zones of Europe."

Tentatively Set for 50

Asked concerning the company's program for the new season, Mr. Wobber declared, "As far as present plans are concerned, our company will make 50 pictures, but I don't think any company knows how many pictures it will make under the new selling program."

Illustrating his contention that good pictures will gross more under the consent decree than previously, he said he believed "Alexander's Ragtime Band" would have brought in 25 to 30 percent more revenue had it been sold under the new terms.

"Chad Hanna," he replied in answer to a query, probably would have grossed less than it did.

COMPARES DECREE TO "BOSTON TEA TAX"

"The consent decree," according to A. C. Hayman of the Lafayette theatre, Boston "is going to work out for us like the Boston tea tax.

"The anti-trust suit was brought honestly with an intention, it seemed at the time, of protecting the independent theatre from the overpowerful competition of theatres owned by producers. The divorce of production and exhibition was not accomplished.

"And by fantastic reasoning the independent theatre was 'protected' with a new system of marketing which penalizes it, takes away the saving recourses of the past, gives the producer-distributor new advantages. The outrageous part of it was that, although the independent theatre man is the one who feels all the cruel effects, he was not a party to the suit and had no voice in the settlement.

"I can't believe that the U. S. Government will permit the thing to stand when its workings are demonstrated. Certainly the Government is keeping an alert eye on the motion picture business.

"When I entered into a pooled operation with the Shea people of our Niagara Falls theatres, Thurman Arnold wrote to inquire if the agreement were voluntary. It was, of course. It just goes to show, though, that the Government is not sleeping."

Convention Plans Set For Schine Circuit

The Schine circuit of Gloversville, N. Y., deciding on a general convention for all managers and executives, has fixed the dates as August 5th and 7th, it was announced after a meeting at the home office. The final banquet at which the delegates will be the guests of J. Meyer Schine, president of Schine Enterprises, Inc., and L. W. Schine, vice-president, will be held August 7th.

Early this year it was originally planned to hold regional meetings.

REDS SEE NEW FILM MARKET HERE NOW THAT THE SOVIET IS AN 'ALLY'

Russian Films, in Disfavor for Years, To Be Reissued; Moscow Reported Buying "Great Dictator", Other Anti-Nazi Films

The end of the Moscow-Berlin axis honeymoon, brought about by the sudden entry of German troops into Russia on June 22nd was reflected this week by the activities of the American motion picture agencies of the two countries. The Red film agency looked forward to prosperous days, aided by new friendship between England and the United States, and Russia, Berlin's film satellite was taciturn as it faced U. S. Government curbs, defended court actions, and denied distributing anti-Semitic propaganda.

The new Nazi-Russo War, bringing immediate recognition by the British of an alliance with the Soviet in the fight against Hitlerism, was followed quickly by declarations both by President Roosevelt and Assistant Secretary of State Sumner Welles that U. S. aid would be forthcoming for the Reds and that Soviet funds here would be de-frozen for buying—all of which catapults the Soviet motion picture into a brand new position in the U. S. market, an opportunity which Soviet agents here apparently were quick to grasp.

As Ralph Ingersoll's PM newspaper in New York put it, "THEATRE OWNERS SUDDENLY FIND THAT SOVIET MOVIE DISTRIBUTERS ARE THE NICEST PEOPLE."

Artkino Bustling

New hope of bourgoise profits, blessed at the box-office by a change in American sentiment towards the Soviet Union, brightened eyes and caused new hustle and bustle in Russian film circles at New York this week. With the U. S. S. R. now a member of the anti-Fascist front and an ally of Britain, and presumably the United States, in the war against Hitler, the left wing film industry executed a quick turn with the party line and prepared for a business boom which it was hoped would equal the palmiest days.

In the public doghouse, and barely subsisting, since the signing of the Moscow-Berlin entente and the invasion of Finland the official distributor of Russian films, Artkino, at New York, prepared to rush every available Soviet picture to the screen to capitalize on the smash-up of Nazi-Communist relations. The distributor and small circle of art theatres throughout the country which formerly presented Moscow product foresaw a boom for Russian films likely to equal the late '20s when Soviet cinema was hailed by fellow travelers and the left wing intellectual fringe as the "greatest in motion picture art."

Nicola Napoli, manager of Artkino Pictures, official agent for Russian pictures in America, announced that the company had five feature pictures on hand and planned to distribute revivals of "Professor Mamlock," "Potemkin," "Ten Days That Shook the World" and others of the "classic" Russian propaganda films. Pictures with an anti-Nazi theme, stored in the vaults since the signing of the alliance with Hitler, will appear first, he admitted.

Five days after the outbreak of war between the two dictatorships, Russian product for the first time in years "made the bigtime" at a Broadway house, the Central. Lately, the tiny Miami theatre on New York's Sixth Avenue has been the only metropolitan house to screen Russian films consistently. Audiences were generally scant and consisted largely of the dyed-in-the-wool adherents to the Communist party line. On June 25th, five days after the Russo-German conflict began, the Central, operated by Harry Brandt at Broadway and 47th Street, opened "Soviet Frontiers on the Danube" and "The Red Army." Compared to its previous homes the Russian cinema suddenly found itself in gilded halls. The films are reviewed on pages 38 and 43.

Party members loyally followed the Red films from Sixth Avenue to Broadway. During the first week many members of the national Communist Party's leadership, and lesser members of the Union Square set, were observed in the theatre. But the public generally also appeared to be on hand, curious to view the propaganda-laden pictures of the vast military machine which currently matches blitz technique with Hitler's Panzer divisions in Eastern Europe.

The Brandt management reported that business, despite a heat wave, ran above the house's average. The picture was held for a second week and further weeks were seen as a possibility. It was reported that Artkino sold the film on a straight percentage deal.

Playing also on current interest, "little" theatres in San Francisco, Chicago and Boston booked the Russian picture during the first week of the new war. It is currently playing the Larkin, operated in the Californian city by M. Michel. The Studio, Chicago, and the Fine Arts, operated by George Krasna at Boston. Artkino was rushing a canvass of former customers of Red film and reported that at least half a dozen other bookings were set. In anticipation of record business Artkino has made 12 prints.

"Soviet Frontiers," Mr. Napoli revealed, was received via South America less than a month ago. Sound scoring and the preparation of English commentary had been completed less than a week before the Hitler declaration of war, he said. Artkino ordered other bookings set for release until Autumn. Other product in the Artkino portfolio was set back and the picture rushed to market. Filmed last year by the Central Ukranian Studio of Documentary Films the 65-minute picture shows the occupation of Bessarabia and Northern Bukovina by the Russian military machine. "The Red Army" is a compilation of official Soviet newsreels depicting various branches of the Russian army and numerous parades of equipment through Moscow's Red Square.

Artkino, incorporated on March 12, 1940, as a partnership between Mr. Napoli and Rosa Madell, succeeded Amkino, official Russian film distributor here. Amkino was disbanded in February, 1940, after the German alliance and invasion of Finland closed most of this country's screens to Red pictures. Dimitri Vassilieff, president, returned to Russia and Mr. Napoli formed a new firm to be the agent for Soviet pictures.

Amkino regularly released about 18 films a year in the United States. Following the outbreak of war only eight films were issued here between May, 1939, and May, 1940. Artkino has received and distributed even fewer pictures. Its first shipment from Russia included only five films, which "Volga, Volga" has just recently reached the screen.

Several additional prints have reached the United States from South America, according to Mr. Napoli. They will be released in the near future, in the hope of reaching the "new market" brought about by the Red alliance with the anti-fascist forces.

Eight pictures, five of them new, are on the product list of Artkino at present. They will be released through the summer and autumn season. The titles and subjects include:

"Soviet Frontiers on the Danube," a documentary on the Russian part in the partition of Roumania.

"Suvarov," a biographical study of the famous Russian marshal who defended the Ukraine and Bessarabia from the French and Austrians in 1790.

"The Returns," a romance based on Soviet Arctic exploration.

"Great Life," a story of miners in the Ural coal and iron fields.

"Musical Story," a musical combining classic Russian and modern music and ballet.

Among the revivals are "Alexander Nevsky," famous anti-Nazi picture suppressed following the Axis alliance; "Shors," a history of the Ukranian revolutions; and "Professor Mamlock," often called the masterpiece of Soviet cinema.

Mr. Napoli confirmed reports that the Russians were again planning to buy more American product. He revealed that he had been commissioned to negotiate for the "The Great Dictator" and several other American pictures.

CBS SNAPS FINGERS AT NAZI RADIO BAN

The Columbia Broadcasting System will not be intimidated by the German Government. Certainly, it will not censor its commentators in this country to please that government. This was the answer Tuesday, of the CBS, to the German ban, Saturday, on broadcasts by CBS Berlin correspondents. The ban came after sarcastic remarks by Elmer Davis, CBS news analyst in New York, on the recent interview given by P. G. Wodehouse, British novelist, to Harry Flannery, CBS' Berlin man.

May Bar Distribution Of Nazi's "Rothschild"

The U. S. roundup of 29 alleged Nazi espionage agents in America early this week and tightening of reins to halt further spread of German propaganda activities here, may prevent distribution by the Nazis of what has been called their "most vicious propaganda film," "Rothschild," an anti-Semitic picture reported to have been made by Ufa in Germany.

Anti-Nazi sources in New York charge that the film is one of many which entered the country by way of the German consulate, and has been stored in the warehouse of Ufa Films, Inc., awaiting release at a "propitious moment." It is reported that the picture is being readied for distribution not to motion picture theatres in German neighborhoods, but through private showings before Bundist and Christian Front groups throughout the country. "Rothschild" portrays the famous European banking family in an unsavory light and seeks to prove that Hitler's prosecution of the Jews is a holy crusade.

George Nitze, president of the Ufa Films,

Soviet Films Here In Force; U.S. Ban On Nazis Tightens

Inc., German film agency at New York, when asked about "Rothschild," said he had "read about it in German trade papers," but denied that his firm had anything to do with its distribution here. Mr. Nitze said, "as far as I know, it has not been shown in this country yet."

John S. Truesdel, Hollywood correspondent for the Boston Post, in his May 26th syndicated column commented on the film as follows: "Either Washington or Hollywood is to blame. Something should be done very quickly, for in New York, ready to show, is one of Hitler's most poisonous propaganda films. A fight is going on as to whether or not this malignant movie should be offered to the public. The name of the picture is "Rothschild." It is an anti-Jewish film. Now, with all of the Washington chest beating and loud talking and with all of Hollywood over press-agented patriotism, wouldn't you think somewhere there would be a politician or a producer with courage enough to prevent this anti-American film from being shown?"

Editors of "News Research Letter," circulated by an independent group of Hollywood writers who banded together to carry on investigation of Nazi propaganda activities in America, reported that "Rothschild" had not been shown in the United States, and they believed it would not be. The film was brought into the country about four weeks ago by Ufa, they revealed, and conversations with the German consulate and the German Library of Information had taken place regarding American exhibition of the picture. The Hollywood group believes that subsequent expulsion of German consuls and similar actions taken by the Government will nullify the possible showing of the picture.

Private Showings Planned

Nazi agents plan to release the film for private showing, the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League and the Anti-Defamation League in New York charged. Yorkville restaurants, Deutsche Halle on 84th Street, and Paul's Restaurant on First Avenue and 82nd Street, have already shown propaganda films for private gatherings. In Boston, early in June, Francis Moran, leader of the Christian Front movement in Massachusetts, hired a hall in Roxbury, a Boston suburb, for a showing of "Sieg Im Westin" to 600 of his cohorts. The Boston Daily Globe, in reporting the event on June 3rd, quoted Mr. Moran as saying he had great difficulty in getting permission for the showing of the film. The Massachusetts department of Public Safety and city authorities approved its release to Mr. Moran, after cutting out certain sections of the picture which showed the British dead at Dunkirk.

Mr. Moran also admitted, the Globe reported, that the rental of the hall had been met "by contributions from anonymous donors," and that he had great difficulty in securing a motion picture machine operator. Boston newspapers scored the Christian Front leader in 1939 for speaking publicly of the President as "Rosenfelt."

Meanwhile, in Albany, the action before Supreme Court Justice William H. Murray, to determine whether "Sieg Im Westen" should be licensed as a feature film by the Motion Picture Division of the State Department of Education, is still pending. Irwin Esmond, director of the division, has contended that the picture is a newsreel, and as such, did not come under the licensing classification. Julius L. Goldstein, attorney for Richard Rollins, director of the Department of Investigation of the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League, who filed the petition for a ban, contends that the motion virtually involves the right of a citizen to challenge the discretionary power of the Commissioner of Education in the exercise of his administrative duties. Mr. Goldstein reported on Monday that Commissioner Ernest R. Cole would ask for a dismissal on the grounds that a citizen who does not have a "property right" in jeopardy has no right to direct the Commissioner in the discharge of his duties; and that since Ufa Films, Inc., owner of the film, which is not enjoined by the petitioner, should enter the case.

Would Change Other Films

If Justice Murray decides that the picture is a feature film, manufactured from bits of newsreels put together, heightened for dramatic effect, as the petitioner claims, the decision will change the status of the "March of Time," it is reported, which would have to secure licenses for release of its issues.

Included in the evidence submitted by Mr. Goldstein was an affidavit from Conrad Woelfel, national secretary to the German American Congress for Democracy, in which Mr. Woelfel charged that there were fights in front of the 96th Street Theatre in Yorkville where "Sieg Im Westen" was shown, and that disturbances occurred when people tried to disrupt the picket line consisting of anti-Nazi sympathizers. This was introduced to prove that the showing of the picture tended to incite Nazi followers and constituted disturbance of public peace.

Distinction on "Support"

Following President Roosevelt's statement last week that America would aid Soviet Russia in its battle against Nazi aggression, the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League announced, through its chairman of the board of directors, Professor Hames H. Sheldon, "the necessity of differentiating between support of the Soviet Union in its present battle against Nazi Germany and cooperation with the Communist Party in the United States." The League warned against the Communist Party line and said, "We must not make the mistake of blindly clasping the Communists to our bosoms now that they have become anti-Nazi. We cannot forget that Communists here refused to support the boycott of Nazi goods immediately after the Nazi-Soviet pact in 1939." The League urged Americans to "wholeheartedly support our government in whatever measures it deems best during the present crisis."

England May Call It An Alliance, But Soviet Films Still Taboo in Canada

by W. M. GLADISH
in Toronto

The Ontario Government is not changing its official attitude toward Soviet films which, along with other pictures of foreign origin, have been barred from the screens of the Province practically since the outbreak of war. Pictures produced in the United States, of course, are not classed as foreign films. In spite of the fact that the British Empire and Russia are fighting a common enemy, there is no inclination on the part of the Ontario Board of Moving Picture Censors, or the Government generally, to change its view or policy with regard to Soviet product.

The last time the Ontario censors referred to Russian films was in the report for the year ending March 31, 1940, which showed that two of the 304 foreign language pictures which had been approved with or without change were of Soviet origin. In that report, Chairman O. J. Silverthorne declared: "With war breaking out in Europe during the past year, the Board felt that extreme caution must be used to avoid the spread of propaganda throughout Ontario. As a result, all foreign language films, with the exception of French talking pictures, have been barred from showing in the Province."

In the previous fiscal year, 23 Russian films were submitted to the Board and one of these was rejected while the statistics for the year ending March 31, 1938, show that 15 Russian films were allowed to circulate in the Province. In the fiscal period ending last March, the Board approved only eight foreign language films, thus showing how the censors had cut down on these pictures because of possible propaganda and a number of the approved prints had been made in the States and were really not of foreign origin.

Until the opening chapter of the war, there had been one company in Ontario which specialized in the distribution of Soviet features and shorts including a topical release but this enterprice quickly folded following the banning order of the Ontario Government. For some time previous, this company had not been able to secure distribution in the Province of Quebec which was the first to take prohibitory action against films from the Soviet Republic, the step having been taken for religious reasons. Russian product continued to be seen in other Provinces of the Dominion, particularly Ontario and Manitoba, until the decision was reached in Ontaria where the bulk of the film business is to be found.

French films continue to be shown in Ontario but there has been a falling off in their public acceptance because of the European developments. No French-language pictures have been shown in Toronto theatres for many months, for instance, although they continue to be presented in Ottawa and various towns of Northern Ontario largely for the entertainment of the French-Canadian portion of the population. Trade with both Occupied and Unoccupied France has been cut off by order of the Dominion Government but it is understood that a number of unreleased French pictures are still available in the Dominion.

RKO SETS DECREE TRADE SHOWINGS IN 32 CITIES FOR 'FIRST FIVE'

Screenings of Entire Block of Five Set for Week of July 14; Home Office Chiefs To Tour Exchanges during Showings

RKO Radio Pictures on Thursday staked a claim to the leadoff spot for consent decree selling when they announced trade shows in 32 cities for the first full block-of-five of 1941-42 season product. The screenings are set to start on Monday, July 14th and all five pictures in the company's first block will be offered for the inspection of exhibitors within the week.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, on June 26th, published the first trade show schedule for pictures to be released under the decree's "new Order" which starts September 1st. The MGM announcement listed screenings for three 1941-42 pictures in 62 cities, but said nothing about blocks-of-five plans. (See MOTION PICTURE HERALD, June 28th)

Times, Places Set

Ned E. Depinet, vice-president in charge of sales, announced that RKO would trade show its films to exhibitors in the company's 32 exchange cities. Most of the screenings will be held in theatres, a few in the company's exchange projection rooms. All the pictures will be shown during morning or afternoon business hours. The majority are listed for the morning. In some instances two pictures will be screened on the same day, but the schedule generally spreads the first block-of-five through Monday to Saturday of the week of July 14th.

The five pictures in RKO's initial block are: "The Devil and Daniel Webster," screen version of Stephen Vincent Benet's short story, directed by William Dieterle with Walter Huston, Anne Shirley and Thomas Mitchell; "Father Takes a Wife," in which Gloria Swanson returns to the screen opposite Adolphe Menjou; "Parachute Battalion," based on the Army's new air arm; the "Lady Scarface," the melodrama with Judith Anderson, Dennis O'Keefe and Frances Neal, and "Citizen Kane," the Orson Welles production.

Mr. Depinet, in announcing the pace-setter block-of-five, urged exhibitors to attend trade showings in order to better sell pictures to their local public. "No one will dispute that the exhibitor is in a better position to sell his pictures to the public after they have been screened and he has learned first-hand of their general merit and specific box-office angles," he said.

Salesmen will be prepared to close licensing contracts as soon as the screenings are completed, it was announced.

Home office and district sales chiefs will be in all the exchange centers during the first trade show week to join the field staff and salesmen in greeting exhibitors, Mr. Depinet said. District managers will be on hand for at least one trade show at every exchange in their territory.

Mr. Depinet, Andy Smith, sales manager, Robert Mochrie, eastern manager and Cresson E. Smith, western manager, will lead home office executives on a tour of exchanges during the week. District heads on this tour include Gus Schaefer, Northeastern; Nat Levy, eastern; C. Boasberg, east central; David Prince, southeastern; W. E. Branson, midwestern; L. E. Goldhammer, prairies; H. C. Fuller, Rocky Mountain; J. H. MacIntyre, western.

Westerns To Follow

Trade shows of three RKO westerns, starring Tim Holt, will follow the first block-of-five screenings. Dates and times will be set shortly. The Holt units will be sold following their showings for release, of the first, starting on October 10th.

Realignment of the production staff at RKO's Hollywood studio, now headed by Joseph I. Breen, former chief of the Production Code Administration, continued this week as Joseph J. Nolan, vice president in charge of studio operations, resigned after 21 years of service.

Mr. Nolan joined RKO in 1920 and rose through accounting, advertising and auditing positions to assistant secretary of the corporation, in 1929, and to vice-president in 1939. Since 1934 he has been in Hollywood, as supervisor of all studio operations.

Sol Lesser reported to the RKO studio Monday, as a producer of "A" pictures, bringing with him Barney Briskin as assistant. Mr. Lesser's release from UA is understood settled, though he will probably make one more picture for that company.

'LITTLE MPPDA' FIGHTS TO CONTINUE DUALS

Independent Producers Join to Defend the "B" Pictures; Seek Aid from Unions and Guilds

Hollywood's independent producers are alarmed at evidences that the industry, activated by exhibitor organizations, is at long last about to do something about eliminating double features. The Independent Motion Picture Producers Association, revived last week, and the 16 independent companies represented, said they would campaign against single features, and would enlist aid from the unions and guilds whose members work in their productions.

They were motivated by the results of the joint conferences two weeks ago, of the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners, and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, at Los Angeles, during which a special anti-duals committee was formed, and at which Warners, Paramount, Samuel Goldwyn, and other producer interests gave their blessings, and hinted aid in the enterprise. They were also motivated, it is thought, by growing sentiment among other exhibitor organizations, amounting to a small rebellion and best represented by the repeated anti-duals blasts by Allied of Illinois, and by the pledge, two weeks ago, by the New York Independent Theatre Owners Association, to stop double features if circuits in that area agree to do the same.

Defends "B" Pictures

The Independent Motion Picture Producers Association was regarded, in its days of activity, as the "little Hays organization" of the independent producers, whose function heretofore has been to fill in the double bills with the "B" pictures of which their limited budgets were capable.

Another reported aim of the association which last week renamed I. E. Chadwick president, was simplification of collective bargaining with studio unions.

In addition to Mr. Chadwick, other current officers are William Hackel and Lindsley Parsons, vice-presidents, and Edward Finney, secretary-treasurer.

The Independent Theatre Owners Association, of New York, pledged two weeks ago to eliminate double bills if the area's circuits will do the same, was regarded by some observers this week as somewhat hopeless and a repetition of similar campaigns not only in that city but in others.

It was pointed out that elimination of duals by the independents hinged on the circuits; and that these have said again and again that if producers in Hollywood make fewer pictures, and better ones, singles might be feasible; but that in the present stage of public taste, duals were favored, certainly in the New York terri-

It was again noted that, as before, no specific duals eliminations were made; the campaign remains a pledge with an "if."

Previously, Harry Brandt, president of the ITOA, had approached Hollywood producers on the question, with a two-page advertisement in Hollywood trade papers. The advertisement stressed the present slump in theatre attendance, and the evils resultant from double features.

A statement by the organization last week asserted:

"Good pictures are used up so fast in the double feature system that the poor product gains undue prominence, and casts a shadow over the entire film industry.

"If the good pictures were shown singly, they would last twice as long; the bad pictures would not be shown in such wide proportions; and the picture-makers would be able to concentrate on fewer—and better—stories."

On the ITOA anti-duals committee are Mr. Brandt, Leon Rosenblatt and Leo Brecher.

The Schoenstadt and Sons' Piccadilly Theatre, Chicago, is experimenting with single features, after requests from some patrons. The Harper Theatre, two blocks away, operated by the same firm, is using duals two days, and single two days, at lower admissions. The experiment was occurring this week, and the operators expected to be able to announce conclusively the public preference, shortly.

Warner Brothers is presenting its anti-Nazi feature, "Underground," in 26 houses throughout the country, singly. The film is playing prerelease at the Hollywood and Downtown theatres, Los Angeles, and at the Globe, New York. It is the only film on the programs at those houses.

Headliners Club Bestows Awards

Fifteen awards for reporting and service to newspaper, radio, newsreels, magazines and news photography were presented in Atlantic City Saturday night, June 28th, at the annual dinner of the National Headliners Club at the Hotel Traymore, attended by 125 leaders in their allied fields.

Originally 14 recipients has been announced, but William L. Shirer, former Berlin correspondent for the Columbia Broadcasting System, was presented a silver medallion for "consistently outstanding radio reporting over a period of years." Eleven of the award winners were present at the dinner. They included, besides Mr. Shirer, Lyle Wilson, United Press; Frank I. Weller, Associated Press; Jay Racusin, New York Herald Tribune; Max Haas, European Picture Service; Ed E. Herwig, Easton (Pa.) Daily Express; Myron E. Scott, Dayton (Ohio) Daily News; Charles H. Sykes, Philadelphia Evening Ledger, cartoonist; Jack Haney, assignment editor of Fox Movietone News, who accepted the awarded on behalf of the company; Howard Davis, managing editor of the Williamsport Grit, and Jan Yindrich, United Press.

Other winners whose awards were accepted on their behalf included Miss Helen Hiett of the National Broadcasting Company; Kenneth Downs, International News Service; B. D. Elliott and T. Harbine Monroe of Tacoma, Wash., of Universal Newsreel, joint award, and Larry Allen of the Associated Press.

Four Companies Chartered

Four new companies recently chartered in Albany, N. Y., are: Glen Theatres, Inc., by Louis Kaplan, Helen Dinowitz and Harry J. Gold; Mayorga, Inc., by James N. MacLean, Frederick M. Thompson and Margaret Mayorga; Monos Theatre Corp., by Joseph and Herma Kingslev and Anna Globes, and Roven Theatre, Inc., by J. B. Meadow, Henrietta Zeichner and Julia Wrobbel.

Kuykendall Urges Producers to Act on Review Timing

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in a bulletin to its membership this week reiterated the demand voiced at its convention in Los Angeles that producers halt advance reviews of new product by columnists and lay press correspondents. Ed Kuykendall, national president, branded the practice "an evil that ought to be corrected by the producers."

Mr. Kuykendall, in writing to the MPTOA members, specifically denied charges voiced in some quarters that the theatre owners were attempting to restrict critical opinion. The question involves only the time of review, and publication of comments on new pictures, not in any way the contents of publications or the opinion of critics, Mr. Kuykendall emphasized.

"When will the producers do something about it?" he asked. "Are they afraid of the Hollywood commentators and columnists?"

Condemned at Convention

The MPTOA, in resolutions approved at its Los Angeles convention in mid-June, condemned the advance screening of pictures for the Hollywood lay press on the ground that their reports, published before release of the film, tend to destroy public interest. Local promotion, advertising and exploitation on the part of an exhibitor is often offset by this practice the bulletin adds.

Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina in convention at Myrtle Beach, S. C., this week similarly hit the advance review practice.

Reviewing activities of the national convention, Mr. Kuykendall's bulletin elaborated on the MPTOA stand against double bills, hit the reduction in the number of prints made available on feature films, and took issue with Walter Wanger's plea for "experimental films, even though they are unsuccessful at the box-office." A report from a sub-committee detailed plans for a proposed national film buying and trade information service to be operated by MPTOA.

To take up slack in off-season business Mr. Kuykendall urged the distributors to embark on more vigorous national advertising campaigns. "Rather than curtailing advertising and relying on publicity and 'free space' to put over their pictures and personalities when business falls off, the producer-distributors should engage in strong genuine advertising campaigns," Mr. Kuykendall wrote. He expressed disappointment on behalf of the MPTOA that none of the advertising directors of major companies attended the MPTOA meeting.

Exhibitors, to do their part in combatting slumps, were urged to "work harder, buy and book more intelligently . . . study patrons . . . and use more effective advertising."

McConnell Rejoins Warners

Robert "Bob" McConnell, who was with Warner Brothers in Kansas City a few years ago, has returned to the company as salesman succeeding Russell Borg, transferred to Omaha as branch manager.

Steiner Company Formed

Charles Steiner, formerly associated with Max A. Cohen in Belle Theatres, has formed Steiner Enterprises, Inc., with offices at 11 Clinton St. for the operation of the Palestine theatre on the east side of New York.

EXHIBITORS CHALLENGE AAA AWARDS APPEAL RUN, CLEARANCE DECISIONS

Arbitrators' Powers Face New Test; Dismiss Salt Lake City Case, New Action Started at N. Haven; Kansas City's First

Activity increased sharply this week in the motion picture arbitration tribunals, after a relatively quiet period, as the system of adjudicating industry disputes started its sixth month of operation. The Appeals Board at New York, three weeks after its first decision, had received two more cases while two new complaints, two decisions and one withdrawal were reported from the local boards administered by the American Arbitration Association.

The second appeal of an arbitrator's decision reached the Appeals Board at New York on June 26th, just two weeks after the "supreme court" of the arbitration system had rendered its first decision in the Chicago Ken case. Ruben Frels, operator of the Normana theatre, in El Campo, Texas, asked a reversal of the arbitrator's decision in his "some run" complaint against the Big Five. Mr. Fels complaint was reported on April 26th.

Action Dismissed

L. M. Jordan, arbitrator of the case, second on the Dallas docket, ruled on June 2nd that the defendant distributors had in fact offered the complainant some run. Mr. Jordan dismissed the action, holding that he had no power to say what run should be offered by the distributors. Costs of the arbitration were divided among the complainant and defendants.

A third request for a review of an arbitrator's decision was received on Monday by the Appeal Board from Washington where Lee H. Homand filed notice of appeal from the decision of Sefton Darr, dismissing the clearance complaint of Mr. Homand's Westway theatre Baltimore against MGM, 20th Century-Fox and Warners. The case was Washington's third, and involved the Durkee circuit of Baltimore. It was reported first in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on February 22nd.

The decision handed down by Mr. Darr on June 9th upheld the right of distributors to protect old customers with clearance in the face of competition from newer, larger and more modern houses in the same competitive area.

Mr. Homand has been trying to reduce the Edgewood's clearance of 14 days since 1939 when he sued seven of the major companies and the Durkee circuit for violation of federal anti-trust laws. The suit was defeated in U. S. District court and on appeal. It is reported in Washington that Mr. Homand will ask a review of the evidence presented at the Washington hearings and will seek a chance for oral argument before the Appeals Board.

New York's first decision, in the fifth case, was entered Wednesday when Francis Adams Truslow, arbitrator, dismissed the clearance action of the River Theatre Corporation, operator of the Central at Pearl River, N. Y. The complaint had asked that all five consenting distributors be ordered to reduce the clearance enjoyed by the Pascack, Skouras circuit house in Westwood, N. J. Costs were assessed.

The decision was in three parts. The first held that the Pascack and Central were within the same competitive area. The second part of Mr. Truslow's award ruled that the clearance between the Central and the intervening Rockland in Nyack is not the period of time between the run in Nyack and the run in Pearl River which the complainant alleged to be 56 to 70 days. The final clause rules that the clearance involved is the seven days set between the distributors and intervenor, the Pascack in Westwood, over the Central and dismisses the complaint.

At Philadelphia the tribunal's second complaint filed by David Silver asking some run for his Earle theatre, New Castle, Del., was granted by Ruppert C. Schaeffer, arbitrator, who ordered Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to license product to the theatre. The award overruled Loew's argument that under section 17 of the decree, and in view of past contracts, it had the right to license exclusively to its affiliated house, the Parkway, Wilmington.

Dismissal in Salt Lake City

Salt Lake City's first arbitration complaint was dismissed this week by William J. Lowe, Salt Lake attorney, who ruled that J. H. Moran operator of theatres in Red Lodge and Lauren, Mont., had failed to establish facts to warrant increasing to 150 days the clearance period held by his first-run house over the second-run theatre operated by Mary Roman at Red Lodge. Paramount, Warners and 20th Century-Fox were the defendant distributors. Costs were assessed against the complainant.

Guy O. Bagwell, arbitrator of Charlotte's first case, the clearance complaint of H. B. Ram, owner of the Patricia, at Aiken, S. C., Monday closed the case by entering a consent award, agreed to by all parties. Costs were equally divided. The Big Five, named in the complaint, under the terms published in the award agree to reduce the first run clearance of theatres at Augusta, Ga., over the Patricia to 14 days during the Aiken resort season, January through March. For the balance of the year a 30-day margin continues in force.

Fred Quatrano, owner of the New Newington Theatre, Newington, Conn., under construction for August 1st completion, has filed an arbitration complaint at New Haven against Loew's, Inc., Paramount, 20th-Fox, RKO and Warners. Alleging that he has tried to buy pictures but that these major companies allow New Britain houses 30 days clearance over Newington, he claims that such clearance would be "detrimental and ruinous" to his business, and that seven days after New Britain is more reasonable. The Strand and Embassy, New Britain, are named as interested parties.

New Haven got its fourth case on Monday when Salvatore Dorno, operator of the College Open Air theatre at New Haven filed a "some run" action against the Big Five. Mr. Dorno said that the distributors had refused to sell him product for his theatre, which operates on a seasonal basis, and asked that they be ordered to do so. The Middlesex, Capitol and Palace theatres in Middletown, Conn., were named as interested parties. They are operated by Middletown Enterprises, Inc.

New York's sixteenth complaint, a twofold action involving both clearance and some run, was filed Monday by the Liberty-Freehold Corporation, operator of the Liberty theatre at Freehold, N. J. All five major companies are named in the action asking some run for the Liberty. In the clearance section the complainant asserts that unreasonable clearance is granted by Warner Brothers and RKO to Asbury Park first-run houses over the Liberty. Interested theatres cited include the Mayfair, Lyric, St. James, Paramount, Savoy, and Strand theatres, in Asbury Park and Freehold.

Kansas City received its first arbitration complaint on Monday when W. A. Weaver operator of the Pic theatre at Iola, Kansas entered a "some run" action charging that all five of the consenting companies had refused to license product to his house. The Pic is a 345 seat subsequent run house. There are three other theatres in Iola.

New Haven

New Haven's first decision, in its initial case, that of Forest Theatre Corporation, operator of the Forest West Haven against the consenting distributors, asking reduction of Rivoli, West Haven, clearance over the Forest. is due by July 25th. Hearings ended last Wednesday. Frederick H. Wiggin was arbitrator.

Distributors and their attorneys contended that the present 14-day clearance is reasonable and should not be disturbed on danger of forcing the Rivoli out of business. The complainant's attorneys characterized the present 14 days as an arbitrary figure, predicated on the old relationship of the Rivoli and Park, run by the same operator, rather than between the Rivoli and Forest. The latter opened December, 1939, charges substantially the same admission, and has the same number of seats. equipment, investment, etc., as its competitor. A reduction to seven days was urged.

In New Haven's second case, distributors have asked that the Deep River theatre be included as an interested party in the Saybrook theatre complaint against RKO, Loew's and Warners, filed June 13th, asking elimination of clearance of the Capitol and Garde theatres, New London over the Saybrook.

Philadelphia

Hearing on Philadelphia Case No. 5, clearance complaint of Morris and Samuel Somerson, operators of the Palm Theatre, Philadelphia, was continued until Wednesday after an all-day session Monday. It is directed against Metro, 20th Century-Fox and Paramount in a situation involving the Warner theatre circuit.

At the opening hearing arguments concerned whether the complaint was one of clearance or better run. Distributors, citing the Ken case in Chicago, maintained that the complaint concerned a run. It was pointed out that the same availability is enjoyed by the Palm, Jumbo, New Broadway and Warners' Imperial theatres and any change would effect the selling to the other houses in the same zone.

However, H. Evans Rhell, Philadelphia businessman serving as arbitrator, ruled that the complaint came under the definition of clearance as defined in the consent decree.

The complainants argued that while there was no objection to Warners' Kent having seven days clearance over their house, they do object to the additional 14 days' clearance enjoyed by Warners' Wishart and Richmond theatres, declaring that the latter two houses are not in direct competition with the Palm, and asked that that clearance be removed.

Arguments were also entered, during testimony, to the effect that film rentals should not effect clearance. The complainants said that they had to cut admission prices in order to meet competition but argued that they should not be penalized on clearance for such a move.

Frank Fogel was counsel for the complainants. Stuart Aarons and Harold Levinson represented the Warner circuit; Herbert Lazarus was counsel for Paramount; and John Caskey for 20th Century-Fox. Metro was not represented by counsel.

Testimony, as theatre experts, for the complainant was entered by David Milgram, head of Affiliated Theatres, independent circuit operating 18 houses here; and from Morris Wax, who operates six houses in the city. Joseph Conway, who operates three suburban houses, testified on Wednesday. Testimony of the experts tended to show that film rentals, physical construction of a theatre or admission prices is not criteria for clearance in Philadelphia.

W. A. Wiedersheim, Philadelphia attorney, was selected as arbitrator in Philadelphia Case No. 6, the clearance complaint of Edward I. Singer, operator of the Hill Theatre, Philadelphia. July 7 was named for the hearing. The complaint, directed at Paramount, Warner Brothers and RKO., asks the arbitrator to set maximum clearance for Warners' Sedgwick Theatre, which has seven days over it. The Rialto Theatre, an Affiliated Circuit house, is mentioned as an interested party. Mr. Singer asserts the clearance constantly exceeds the stipulated seven days.

San Francisco

The second San Francisco complaint, clearance action by A. C. Karsky, Oakland against RKO, Warner Brothers, 20th Century-Fox, filed three weeks ago was answered during the past seven days by five intervening petitions. Fox West Coast and Golden State circuits and the Foothill, Capitol and Diamond theatres have intervened. The last three were named in Mr. Karsky's complaint as holding 45 to 50-day margins.

Cincinnati

The Cincinnati case of Fred W. Rowlands, Columbus operator, against all five, for adjustment of the seven-day clearance held by Neth's Markham theatre over his Main theatre, which was set for hearing June 27, before Fred W. Koch, was postponed until July 10, because of absence from the city of some Cincinnati branch managers

Washington

Hearings on the two complaints filed by L. W. Lea, Danville, Va., operator, naming all five majors in some run and clearance actions have been postponed from June 30th to July 7th. Abram F. Myers, Allied States general counsel is attorney for Mr. Lea. Judge Bolitha J. Laws is arbitrator.

Louis M. Denit, Washington attorney, has been selected as arbitrator in the Apex theatre case, Washington No. 6, a protest against clearance granted by Loew's, Inc., to Warner's Calvert and Uptown theatres.

Boston

The hearing of Boston's fourth case filed by the Waltham Amusement Corporation was postponed this week until July 14th. The postponement came at the request of attorneys for 20th Century Fox who were unable to be present.

J. Noble Braden, executive secretary of the American Arbitration Association on Tuesday addressed the convention of the North and South Carolina Theatre Owners at Myrtle Beach, S. C., describing the mechanics of arbitration procedure and reporting on the cases entered during the first months of the film arbitration system. En route he conferred at Washington with Robert Wright, assistant U. S. Attorney General in charge of motion picture consent decree enforcement. Discussions were understood to have been confined to a revue of the practical application of the rules of arbitration contained in the decree. No comment on the meeting was forthcoming from either party.

Actors Guild Benefits From Radio Show

For the fourth consecutive year, the Screen Actors Guild will receive thousands from the Gulf Oil Company for use of Hollywood "name stars" on the Gulf Screen Guild Theatre, over the Columbia Broadcasting network. The sum is $10,000 per week for 22 weeks, starting September 28th. The $220,000 thus gained will be given to the Motion Picture Relief Fund, which is building a home for the film industry's unfortunates in California's San Fernando Valley with more than $773,350, the sum received from the air show by last December 31st.

The radio program is at 7:30-8:00 P.M., New York time, and over 79 stations.

Stars' performances are gratis, by permission of the Guild, which, however, receives the bulk check for $10,000 per air show.

Fox West Coast Asks Clearance Revision

More clearance protection and revision of the zoning and clearance conditions throughout southern California have been demanded by Fox West Coast Theatres, wherever negotiations with major film companies for next year's product have arisen.

FWC is seeking a week or two additional protection wherever they raise admissions and independents do not. A brief has been presented to MGM and 20th Century-Fox, only companies which have long term contracts with FWC.

Roy L. Walker Dead

Roy L. Walker, 59, attorney who represented the independent theatre owners and specialized in theatrical cases, died in Lamposas, Texas, June 30. He was former mayor of Lamposas and at the time of his death was president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association of Texas.

Variety Clubs Extend Charities

Dedication of a one-story, $65,000 free clinic and health center for the underprivileged of Oklahoma City, was made last week, Chief Barker Louis C. Griffith of the city's Variety Club No. 22, announced. This was one of the philanthropic projects sponsored by the club. The 32-room building will house offices of the Oklahoma County Tuberculosis and Health Association; Salvation Army Dental Clinic; Red Cross Nutrition Project; the Maternity Health Center's pre- and post-natal service; Eye, Nose and Throat Clinic; Mental Health Clinic; Laboratory and X-Ray facilities and physicians' offices.

A banquet given in celebration of the opening of the center, was held at the Skirvin Tower Hotel, attended by 350 persons, at which Carl Magee was toastmaster. Speakers included: Bob O'Donnell, first assistant chief barker of the national tent; Mr. Griffith, Mayor Robert A. Hefner of Oklahoma City and Arthur H. German, executive secretary of the Oklahoma County Tuberculosis Association. Following the banquet, guests were invited to visit the center, at which all patients will receive free medical treatment, it was announced by members of Club. No. 22.

Twin City Milk Fund

The Twin City Variety Club's milk fund project has been expanded this year and probably will necessitate extension of the club's summer program, Ben Blotcky, Minneapolis chief barker, announced this week. The club already has provided 10,000 quarts of milk a month this year to underprivileged children of Minneapolis and St. Paul. A milk fund ball held recently, helped to finance the project, but the club also plans a similar event this summer to keep the program going at its present pace. Announcement has been made that the club will hold its annual shortstop calcutta golf tournament on July 11th, at the Oak Ridge Golf Club in Minneapolis.

The Philadelphia Variety Club will continue its sponsorship of the President's Birthday Ball, through which some $36,000 was raised for the care of infantile paralysis victims. The tent's local board of governors approved Chief Barker Dr. Leon Levy's suggestion to extend this project, and also agreed to assume an additional obligation of $4,000 to pay for services of two more physiotherapists at the Martin School. A contribution of $1,700 was voted by the board to go to the Los Angeles Sanitorium. In addition, it was reported that the Ladies Auxiliary pledged itself to furnish a station wagon, valued at $1,000, for use of the Philadelphia Board of Education in transporting paralysis victims to the Martin School.

July 21st has been set by the Detroit Variety Club for its annual Golf Tournament, to be held at Brooklands Golf Club, under the chairmanship of John Howard, former national Variety champion. The first All-Industry Outing of the club will be held in August, and John R. McPherson, National Screen Service manager has been named chairman of the committee planning the event.

SINGLE SALES, 'TAILOR-MADE' FILMS, TRADE SHOWS IN NEW DISCLOSURES

Balaban Sees Forced Adaptation of Production to New Selling Requirements; Single Sales Policies Announced

Statements of product policy and procedure came forth this week, directly and indirectly, from more of the distributors who will be affected by the new order of selling under the consent decree which officially becomes effective in eight weeks, on September 1st, for the season of 1941-42.

RKO Radio claimed first in the field with advance trade showings on a full block of five (see page 15); Herman Wobber, for 20th Century-Fox, revealed in a Hollywood interview that his company was another of the Big Five which will sell singly and in groups (see page 12); Paramount, too, will sell singles to key accounts, it became known, the while Barney Balaban, company president, cited a new order of "tailor-made" filming under the new decree order.

Warners is getting ready for its first 1941-42 convention, to be held in Canada, and 20th Century-Fox is making similar plans for its convention, at about the same time, in Hollywood, while United Artists this week completed a series of regional conventions, laying before its field forces the identities of pictures, plans and policies for the new season. U. A. is not affected by the decree, being one of the Little Three non-signatories, along with Columbia and Universal.

Improved Paramount Product, Says Balaban

Citing Paramount's program for next season as "tailor-made for the new selling system," Barney Balaban, Paramount's president, announced last Friday just before leaving Hollywood for New York, that pictures for his company's first group of films for decree selling had been selected and would be announced in New York soon. Mr. Balaban was in Hollywood for a week of conferences with Y. Frank Freeman, vice-president in charge of production and other studio executives, discussing general operating problems which had arisen since the executive meeting in the East several months ago. The conferences consumed as much as "12 to 14 hours a day," but Mr. Balaban said he was "very happy" about the details of a "general constructive program" which were ironed out.

Returning to New York, Mr. Balaban, on Tuesday, elaborated on the company's product plans (see page 9) on the eve of the announcement, Thursday, by Neil Agnew, of the titles of the first Paramount block-of-five.

It is reported that a large number of the company's new season's pictures will be sold individually in the larger first-run situations.

Adolph Zukor, chairman of the board, Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee, Russell Holman and Paul Raibourn, other Paramount executives, returned to New York with Mr. Balaban.

Charles Regan, Paramount's assistant sales manager, announced that "Ruggles of Red Gap," starring Charles Laughton, would be reissued for mid-summer release and that prints will be in company exchanges by mid-July. He said the reissue will not affect the company's summer release schedule.

The release for August will be: "Kiss the Boys Goodbye," co-starring Don Ameche and Mary Martin with Oscar Levant, August 1st; "Secrets of the Wastelands," a Hopalong Cassidy pix, August 16th; "World Premiere," with John Barrymore, August 23rd; "Aloma of the South Seas," a technicolor production starring Dorothy Lamour and Jon Hall, August 29th; and "Flying Blind," also for August 29th.

William H. Pine and William C. Thomas of Picture Corporation of America, have signed a new contract with Paramount to furnish six pictures a year, three to star Richard Arlen and three comedy mysteries with Chester Morris. Picture Corp. already has produced three films for Paramount, but will dissolve their company under terms of the new contract. They will operate, however, under their own names.

RODGERS CLARIFIES MGM'S POLICY

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has not decided to sell individually each picture on its 1941-42 program contrary to a statement to that effect published last week. According to William F. Rodgers, general sales manager for the company, "MGM has set no policy as yet calling for the sale of pictures individually or in groups." He indicated that while pictures would be available immediately after the trade showings prescribed by the consent decree, MGM had made no ruling to require either single or group sales exclusively.

Also, Metro has not determined how many pictures will be grouped together. Mr. Rodgers last week announced the first MGM trade shows, listing three pictures for screening in 62 cities during the weeks of July 14th, 21st and 28th. (MOTION PICTURE HERALD, June 28th, page 13).

Sears Says Warners Will First Finish with 1940-41

"Despite any action by other distributing companies to get an early start in selling product for the new season, Gradwell L. Sears, Warner Brothers general sales manager, instructed district managers at a home office conference on Tuesday of this week the company would not be stampeded into following suit but would fulfill its current season's contracts 100 per cent before going after new season's business," said a statement issued by the Warner home office Tuesday night.

Mr. Sears was described as condemning "the tendency in some quarters to 'sluff off' the last few months of a season in order to get the jump in selling the new lineup." He declared that Warners would deliver their full lineup for the year.

Carl Leserman, assistant general sales manager, presided with Mr. Sears at the conference. Also in attendance were Roy Haines, eastern and Canadian manager; Ben Kalmenson, southern and western manager; Norman H. Moray, short subject sales manager; A. W. Schwalberg, supervisor of exchanges; Arthur Sachson, head of the contract department; and the following district managers: Ed. M. Schnitzer, eastern; Robert Smeltzer, central; Rud Lohrenz, midwest; James Winn, prairie; Ralph L. McCoy, southeast; Fred M. Jack, southwest; Henry Herbel, west.

Meanwhile, late Wednesday, Warners announced a complete new setup for its distribution machinery, eliminating district managers, in a move to 'streamline' selling to meet the new local selling conditions under the decree (see page 9).

After attending the "Sergeant York" premiere Wednesday night at the Astor Theatre, the district managers returned to their territories.

Warners' Montreal Sales Meeting

Warner Brothers announced dates of their Canadian sales meeting for July 15-17, at the Mount Royal Hotel in Montreal. Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager of the company and president of Vitagraph, accompanied by Carl Leserman, Roy Haines, Ben Kalmenson and Norman Moray, will represent the Warner home office, with Wolfe Cohen, Dominion manager, presiding.

Full-program selling in Canada and a desire to conserve Canadian currency as much as possible, were the deciding factors which caused Warner Brothers to hold the meeting separately from the later-scheduled American sales convention in Chicago.

Canadian territory representatives who will be on hand for the meeting are Joseph Plottel, Toronto branch manager; Alfred E. Piggins, district booker; Harry Law, salesman, Toronto; Glenn Ireton, district press representative; Lewis McKenzie, St. John branch manager; Philip Sherman and G. Kieley, manager and salesman, Montreal branch; Louis Geller and Frank Davis, manager and salesman, Winnipeg branch; Harry Kohn, manager, Calgary branch; and I. "Babe" Coval, manager, Vancouver branch.

P. R. C. Franchise Holders Meet

Franchise holders of Producers Releasing Corp., were in New York early this week for conferences with O. Henry Briggs, president of the company. They were Jack Adams and Jack Adams, Jr., of Dallas, Tex.; Ike Katz, Atlanta; Leo Goldberg, Cleveland; William Flemion, Detroit; Herb Given, Philadelphia; Milton Lefton, Pittsburgh; Harry Asher, Boston, and George Gill of Washington.

The Little Rock, Ark., franchise of PRC has been taken over by B. F. Bushy, G. W. Jones and Fred Lawrence, according to an announcement by Arthur Greenblatt, general sales manager of the company.

The three new franchise holders, who were formerly associated as distributors of Republic pictures, recently reunited under the name of Central Film Company to handle the distribution of the PRC product in the Little Rock territory. Little Rock has heretofore been a branch operated by Jack Adams of Dallas.

United Artists Winds Up 1941 Sales Conventions

United Artists' final regional sales meeting of the Spring-Summer period of the year, occurred Tuesday, in San Francisco with personnel from the home office, and from the Los Angeles, San Francisco, Salt Lake City and Seattle offices present.

On Monday, Haskell Masters, western sales manager, announced the appointment of David Griesdorf as Los Angeles branch manager. Mr.

Griesdorf had been eastern representative for James Roosevelt's Globe Productions.

In attendance at the San Francisco meeting in addition to Mr. Masters and Mr. Griesdorf were the following: Arthur W. Kelly, Monroe Greenthal and Seymour Poe from the home office; Ben Fish, Western district manager; Guy S. Gunderson, Frederic Gage, Kenneth R. McKaig and W. B. Pollard, Los Angeles salesmen; A. W. Hartford, Salt Lake City manager, W. K. Miller, Joseph Solomon, E. M. Gibson and J. E. Madsen, salesmen.

Also: D. J. McNerney, San Francisco manager, Paul Bush, Jack O'Loughlin, Jack O'Bryan and W. M. Bigford, salesmen; Frank M. Higgins, Seattle manager, A. H. Kleeper, A. J. Sullivan, C. W. Trowbridge, H. W. Landstrom and H. Harden.

The San Francisco regional meeting was the fifth in two weeks. On Friday and Saturday, June 27th and 28th, occurred the third, in Cincinnati, with Mr. Kelly and other home office executives in attendance.

Previous meetings had been held in New York, first, two weeks ago, and then in New Orleans, at the beginning of last week. It was at those meetings Mr. Kelly enunciated the new policy of the company; its refusal to announce a "minimum" or "maximum" number of pictures; its intention to reveal its new product in large blocks at successive and comparatively frequent regional meetings.

From Hollywood, it was reported this week that Frank Capra and David O. Selznick, who are acquiring partnerships in the company, will sign 10 year contracts, which will require them each to make two pictures per year.

Republic New Season Releases

"Mountain Moonlight" and "Hurricane Smith" are two completed Republic films of the company's first releases on its 1941-1942 program. During the month of July Republic will release the following pictures: "Gangs of Sonora," July 10th; "Mountain Moonlight," July 12th; "Sunset in Wyoming," July 15th; "Hurricane Smith," July 20th; "Ten Nights in a Bar Room," July 24th; and "Rags to Riches," July 31st.

J. R. Grainger, president of Republic Pictures Corporation, and J. Myer Schine, of the Schine Theatre Circuit, closed a deal last week covering Republic's 1941-42 product with the circuit, for 128 houses in New York, Ohio, Kentucky and Maryland. George Lynch, Schine executive, Jack Bellman, Buffalo manager for Republic, Arthur Newman, Albany Republic manager and Nat Lefton, franchise holder for Republic in Cleveland and Cincinnati, sat in on the deal.

RKO Begins New Publicity Push

Publicity for RKO features will get under way two or more weeks before actual filming starts, under a new system of publicity for the company, inaugurated over the weekend by George J. Schaefer, its president. The Hollywood studio announced publicity will be planned to create steady interest through production of each film, through its editing and announcement of release; and that it will reach a maximum of intensity at the time of trade showings—an intensity which, the studio said, will be maintained through the film's first run. Hollywood observers said the RKO studio is the first to rearrange its publicity schedule to meet consent decree conditions.

Studios, Labor Still Talking

Coast IATSE unions are still negotiating with producers on wages and hours demands, and other unions and guilds this week were also conferring on new pacts, or drawing up now familar demands.

Meanwhile, in the east, the publicity and advertising workers in the majors' New York home office appear to be headed for substantial wage increases, a closed shop and other items in the demands of their union, the Screen Publicists Guild, as that organization was notified last week by the National Labor Relations Board that a board election would be conducted July 9th.

The Guild had previously won from the board the right to an election, after petitioning for certification as the bargaining agency for such workers.

Disagreement in Guild

Disagreement among the publicity and advertising workers of some companies, on Guild political policies, and evidenced several weeks ago by open letters from some members of Paramount's and MGM's advertising departments, appeared to be somewhat counterbalanced this week by an appeal for reinstatement into the Guild, from six Paramount publicists, who had resigned in May, 1940, protesting alleged anti-democratic government of the Guild. The Paramount persons are Jonas Arnold, Bud Getschal, Adolph Silverstein, Bernard Lewis, Paula Weiss Fraser, and Paul White. They said, in a letter, in part:

"We have no faith in dual unionism as a solution to the problems facing the Guild, and are opposed to dual unionism in principle."

The Guild held a membership meeting Wednesday night, June 26th, and the election procedure was explained by H. N. Glickstein, counsel. The members voted plans for a wide turnout of eligible publicity and advertising workers.

Meanwhile, in the radio world, the dispute between the American Federation of Radio Artists and the Cincinnati affiliate of the Mutual Broadcasting System, station WKRC, has not yet resulted in the strike threatened by the union against the whole system two weeks ago. Mediation meetings occurred last week in Chicago; and the board of directors of Mutual on Monday called a meeting for next Tuesday, in Chicago or New York, to consider the network's position in the matter in event of open hostilities.

The union has taken one action: it has mailed notices to advertising agencies and to the network, advising them union members would not be permitted on programs fed to the Cincinnati station, after July 12th.

The Cincinnati outlet, meanwhile, continued under picketing this week.

Staff of the station has formed an independent union, the Radio Artists Association, which said:

"We feel that our livelihoods are being jeopardized by persons having no interest in us, other than their own selfish motives; and we bitterly resent being picketed by persons who, in the majority, are made up of our competitors, and work at other radio stations."

Producers and representatives of the Screen Directors Guild last week agreed, in Hollywood, on proposals for a new contract.

From Philadelphia, there are observations that higher wages for actors and musicians will be sought by unions for those categories.

Neagle Film Set

Anna Neagle's next picture for RKO to be produced by Herbert Wilcox, will be a melodrama made in Canada and England dealing with the North Atlantic patrol and the British Secret Service, the studio has announced. They will leave for England to start production following a tour of Canada plans for which are now in preparation.

Hammons Short Completed

E. W. Hammons has completed his second short subject at Eastern Service Studios, Long Island, N. Y., a comedy of dog training. His first, "Hands of Destiny," was sold to Paramount recently for distribution by that company. Mr. Hammons is also making arrangements for a feature production.

NEWSPAPERS AID 'DOORBELL RINGING' TO SELL SCREEN AS AN INSTITUTION

Philadelphia 'Bulletin' Runs Series on "Try a Movie Vacation"; Circuits, Independents Take Up Campaign in South, West

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Motion picture promotion by point-of-sale merchandising stressing the screen as an institution, is showing a noticeable gain, aided and abetted in many cases by local newspaper publishers who are giving recognition in print to the screen for its contributions to the community.

Urgings galore have been heard of late by exhibitors from their own leaders and from many distribution executives, to recognize the special economic importance today of the theatre's use of institutional selling, of placing special effort behind the motion picture on a long-range basis rather than on the occasional one-shot concentration on a special production.

"Stop wringing your hands and start ringing doorbells" was this week's keynote of institutional selling, sounded before Carolina exhibitors, in convention at Myrtle Beach, by Henderson M. Richey, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's exhibitor contact. (More about this on page 57).

Screen Value Enhanced

Hardly an exhibitor convention has passed of late without some attention being given to the subject, as described repeatedly in these pages. The state of the nation, reflecting the state of the world seems to have accentuated the position of the motion picture in each community for its value as a mass medium for entertainment and escape.

One of the latest and most significant attentions paid to the screen in this connection came from the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, urging the public, in newspaper advertisements, to "Take a Movie Vacation." This promotion is being taken up elsewhere, by other newspapers and by circuit and independent operators.

Basically concerned, of course, with its theatre advertising space buying business, but, nevertheless unusual, was the series of institutional advertisements voluntarily inserted in their newspaper of some 462,626 daily circulation by the publishers of the Bulletin.

"Ever try a Movie Vacation?" asked a typical ad, adding the message: "Short vacations at the movies will rest and relax you in mind and body . . . and tide you and your family over until you can get away for your long vacation."

One of the eight advertisements, running from six to seven inches deep, on two columns, stressed the value of a "Movie Vacation" as a means of "escape" . . . "Never before has 'escape' been so important to everyone's well-being. . . ."

The Indianapolis Star, among others, will use this summer the "Ever Try a Movie Vacation?" series of institutional promotions originated by The Bulletin.

Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana received copies of The Bulletin's series and Don R. Rossiter, ATOI executive secretary, offered them to The Star's publishers through W. F. Morse, MOTION PICTURE HERALD's Indianapolis correspondent, who is a reporter for The Star.

The Philadelphia Record likewise stressed the screen institutionally in a series of advertisements, tying in with a puzzle contest, as previously reported.

George T. Eager, executive of the Philadelphia Bulletin in charge of the "Try a Movie Vacation" stunt, reported inquiries from many exhibitors and circuits concerning the promotion.

Mr. Eager believes, "the motion picture industry has not capitalized on the fact that attending a good movie is one of the most relaxing and restful ways to spend a few hours."

United Detroit Theatres, Columbia Pictures, Warner Brothers Theatres were mentioned as among those who asked the Bulletin for permission to use its institutional movie-selling series.

Hundreds of theatres are taking opportunity to gain public goodwill by their contributions to defense, using their screens, their front lobbies, their press and poster advertisements to urge aid for Defense, aid for 'war' bond buying, aid for defense priorities, aid for the services.

Lucas and Jenkins, that southeastern circuit which has been particularly showmanship-minded of late, took the keynote of President Roosevelt's message to the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences dinner, last February 27th, to point up in advertisements, to its Georgia public, the place of the screen in the community.

"We have seen the American Motion Picture become the foremost in the world. We have seen it reflect our civilization throughout the world . . . our aims, aspirations and ideals of a free people and of freedom." This was the Presidential quote used by L. and J. in one Atlanta Journal institutional promotion. Surrounding that note was the observation, "Motion Pictures are recognized as America's No. 1 form of mental relaxation. . . . Too much thinking about unpleasant things is not good for anyone. . . . Not one, but several movies a week will provide that relaxation and entertainment you need so much in these serious times. . . ."

Citywide institutional selling campaigns by organized exhibition is another progressive step in the marked trend these days toward institutional promotions for the benefit of all houses. Allied of Illinois, in Chicago, is one group participating. And Allied nationally has been doing things about a direct approach to the public, in a manner as yet undisclosed, to call special attention both to the screen and what the public wants and doesn't want thereon.

Special "entertainment week" promotions is another form, such as that now being sponsored throughout Wisconsin by Fox Midwest Theatres, tieing in local merchants on cooperative advertisting with this keynote message: "Don't let the Blues Get You Down. Now's the Time for Every Real American to be Cheerful, Light-hearted, Carefree," etc.

A study of business-boosting campaigns was being carried on this week by a Northwest Allied committee which will recommend a drive to be launched on a statewide basis probably in the fall.

Henry Green, Don Guttman and Harold Kaplan, all of Minneapolis, were delegated to study successful campaigns of the past and some already framed for the future in an effort to shape one of "far-reaching effect" for use in this territory.

Among the plans they are studying is one framed by Cliff Gill, of Welworth theatres, Minneapolis, given some attention last spring.

Newspapers which see Screen and Theatre as Hometown Institution

Way down east on Long Island, where New York juts into the Atlantic, exhibition is getting cooperation from the country press in important terms. Thomas W. Gerety of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures brings to attention an editorial from the Central Islip Messenger, one of several papers issued in the region by the Rambler Publishing Corporation, which on June 11th editorialized:

In calling attention to Suffolk County theatres on the front page of our papers, each week, we do so with the feeling that they contribute so handsomely to the pleasure of our visitors and friends that they need only to be visited to be appreciated.

These theatres represent an investment of hundreds of thousands of dollars. In Smithtown the house was built a few years ago at a cost far in advance of any possible real financial return, in profit. It was a fine gesture in the belief of the possibilities of Smithtown.

Our business men are forever asking for industries to come to Suffolk. We have here an industrial investment representing far more than the average industry, and, while the theatre may only employ a few people, there is available a safe and pleasant place for recreation to which one can invite their friends at a very moderate cost.

The average country movie in Suffolk provides better seating convenience, safety, comfort, and entertainment than was provided a few years ago in the best Broadway theatre at $2.00 a seat, for less than 50 cents.

The money we now pay for the best theatre seat in our town, in a thoroughly up-to-date, modern theatre, would not, in former years, pay for the back gallery seat in Daly's theatre, at 33rd Street and Broadway.

So visit our local theatres and give yourselves a real treat. Shut the tight-fisted old World out for awhile, be grateful for the safety, peace, and relief from air raids we have here, and take about an hour off on, say, each Sunday morning to thank God, in His Church, that you are in America and are American.

If you cannot play splendidly and worship dutifully, you are a pretty poor sort after all.

Further, these papers find space from week to week for the tidings of pictures playing the theatres of the region as released by the exhibitors, timed with the showings. From the point of view of these publications, the motion picture pertains to the hometown theatre, not to a remote and fantastic Hollywood.

Dr. Gallup Writes

To the Editor of the Herald:

I have read with great interest your article describing the efforts being made by John Q. Adams and R. J. O'Donnell to tackle a problem which is one of the industry's greatest—the problem of how to get those 32,000,000 "abstainers" into the theatre.

May I, however, draw your attention to one statement which is mistakenly attributed to me?

You quote our release of last July as stating that aversion to double features is the second most important factor causing poor attendance. Here is what we actually wrote:

"It would be untrue to say that double features are directly responsible for keeping many persons away from the box office."

Your article carries the headline "INTERSTATE REFUTES GALLUP POLL." After reading the article I am not quite sure which of our findings are supposed to have been "refuted."

The poll in question was a poll of public opinion on the double feature controversy. We listed the main reasons given by the public pro and con double features, but we nowhere enumerated the reasons why 32,000,000 persons financially able to attend pictures frequently, actually go less than once a month.

The study on double features was completed last July, and ever since then we have been trying to find out what is keeping these 32,000,000 persons away from the theatre. This study has not yet been completed.

It is an exceedingly complex problem, and I know you will agree that a great deal of damage could be done by an over-simplified approach to its solution.—GEORGE GALLUP, American Institute of Public Opinion, New York.

A degree of misunderstanding appears here. The HERALD did not quote Dr. Gallup's released statement, but instead did quote the expressions of Mr. Adams and Mr. O'Donnell—as may be confirmed by reference to page 35 of the June 14th issue of this publication. Specifically THE HERALD set down: ". . . Before submitting ideas for a new approach and new methods, Mr. Adams and Mr. O'Donnell enumerate the Gallup questions and cite their refutations."

Part of the issue seems to hinge on "refutations." Mr. Adams and Mr. O'Donnell certainly hoped they were refutations. Perhaps THE HERALD could have called them disputations.

Meanwhile, it would appear that the figure of 32,000,000 persons who are "financially able and who are not attending the movies," may suffice as a sort of bench mark in a surveying operation, but it remains a product of hypothesis.—TR.

THE CASE FOR THE THEATRE MANAGER

To the Editor of the Herald:

Congratulations on your splendid editorial "Whose Pictures?" in the June 21st issue of MOTION PICTURE HERALD.

Particular praise is due your reference to distribution executives on convention platforms asking for more and greater selling efforts at the box-office. The final resting place of such remarks becomes the theatre manager—a very helpless individual in the face of Hollywood, the newspapers and fan magazines, to say nothing of radio.

This never-ending cry for more and greater showmanship is an easy way out for those who are failing in their jobs through neglect of an obvious evil and failure to recognize that evil's telling effect upon the public.

As you pointed out, an exhibitor's or a manager's efforts are merely anti-climactic, pointless and second hand. Further, such efforts result in a waste of much needed money.—FLOYD FITZSIMMONS, Laurel Theatre, Long Beach, L. I.

SEES "CHEAPENING" OF THEATRE SLUMP CAUSE

To the Editor of the Herald:

Many explanations of the so-called slump in the motion picture business are being alibied by top executives of distribution, production, and theatre circuits claiming that the war is responsible.

However, the facts are that the war has nothing whatsoever to do with the poor grosses because we know that if anything, that would help to improve the business because so many more people are working and need relaxation.

The real reason for the condition of the theatre business, as I see it, is the fact that the theatre executives, as well as distributors, have allowed many other types of competition without any resistance whatsoever. They have become negligent, self-satisfied and have taken it for granted that nothing could be done about it.

What have the theatre owners and the distributors done to combat radio? What have they done to combat the double and triple bill plus the hundreds of thousands of dollars that are now being given away in the theatres in the form of cash, cars, crockery, groceries, books, etc.? What have they done to combat the unfair quiz programs where tens of thousands of dollars are given away every month with free admissions to hundreds of thousands.

I could go on like this for pages but what is the use? The public today have been educated to go to theatres not to see pictures as much as to see how much money they can get for nothing. The columnists have been given carte blanche at all the studios so that they may explain to the public how ugly so and so looks on the set, how the scenes are faked with miniatures, etc., and have disillusioned the public. All one hears of today is scandal about the stars and the amount of money that they earn.

Have the distributors ever considered the effect of a double bill like Charlie Chaplin in "The Dictator" with "That Night in Rio," either one of which would make a good outstanding program. Is it a wonder that the public stay away from the movies and only go when two top pictures are shown?

Throughout the country the new vogue is to have junior prices for those aged 12 to 16 who formerly paid adult prices. This has, of course, decreased the gross because a great number of people who used to pay the regular prices now pay half the price.

It seems everything is being done to further cheapen the business instead of elevating it. I believe that if theatres were conducted as theatres and not as book stores, grocery stores, as well as charitable organizations, and the managers would go to work exploiting every picture as they used to do, there would he no cause for complaint and the public would get to appreciate the theatre once again.

It seems to me that the business is big enough and powerful enough to combat all of the evils that have crept into it and set a higher standard and keep it so.

Don't you think a discussion along these lines to the exhibitors and distributors would do a lot of good throughout the country?—JOHN JAY FRANKLIN, World Wide Theatre Company, San Francisco, Cal.

NEED FOR STARS WHO CAN ACT

It would appear that the motion picture business is sadly lacking new young female stars with acting ability. If you will but look over the pictures for the past two seasons I believe you will agree that the newcomers are a rather sorry lot. True, they have lovely faces and figures that would turn the head of a sculptor, but they are in every sense of the phrase "green horns" when it comes to acting. In other words, I believe that the public, which we are trying to please in this business, is tired of the beautiful but dumb type.

I feel sorry for a nice little girl like Veronica Lake when they give her a heavy, like the girl in "I Wanted Wings." It makes you feel like telling her to braid up her pig tails and go home to mother. But she will be all right if some one will take her in hand and teach her something about acting, so that she won't appear ridiculous to the people who might have been her fans. So sometimes it may not be the young star's fault; it is the casting director, and the directors themselves.

On the other hand, they are finally coming to their senses in Hollywood and New York, and giving the public a few men like Stirling Hayden, and using one of the best male leads in Hollywood, Preston Foster, instead of the boys that look like a cross between a French gigolo and an advanced case of T. B.

There are many stars that the above complaints do not apply to, for these we are very grateful. They are our bread and butter.—NELA MCMINN, Beacon Theatre, Superior, Wis.

FREE MERCHANT SHOWS AND LOST PATRONAGE

To the Editor of the Herald:

With further regard to my several letters to you pertaining to 16 MM competition of free shows, the height of something or other was reached today, when in our Terre Haute Star and Terre Haute Tribune an ad appearing on the amusement page announced:

FREE PICTURE SHOW; Thurs. Evening, May 22nd, at 8 o'clock; Elm Grove Park; North Terre Haute.

For your information this is the opening night of the weekly free show which will be given every Thursday at North Terre Haute. There are also five other communities within a radius of 3 to 10 miles where free movies are shown, adjacent to Terre Haute.

It's certainly high time producers realized that exhibitors cannot compete with free shows. As far as I know, this is the first time that such free entertainments have been advertised in our local papers.

Much has been written about the drop of millions of patrons from weekly shows and very few seemed to be able to supply the reason for our lost patronage. Don't believe we have to look any further for the solution. Approximately 800 to 1000 people attend each one of these free shows. In Indiana there are more than 170 such merchant shows with an attendance of at least 170,000 people. Now multiply this by the number of free shows throughout the United States and you can find where the millions of lost patrons are.

Our Exhibitor Association would like to see your progressive paper start and help finish a real fight against free shows.—ABE H. KAUFMAN, Fountain Theatre, Terre Haute, Ind.; President, Terre Haute Theatres Assn.

Sergeant York

(Warner Brothers)

World War I Heroism

Gary Cooper's new starring vehicle dramatizes the exploits of Sergeant Alvin C. York, the Tennessee mountaineer who, as a young doughboy during the first World War, was responsible for the capture of 132 German prisoners. As transmitted faithfully to the screen it is a yarn loaded with local color and simple, home-spun philosophy. The film develops the character of a rugged Tennessee farmer whose chief problem devolved on wresting a living from rocky pastures. Egged on by his mother, the local pastor and influenced by the girl he loves, the hero "gets religion," after undergoing an enlightening experience during an electric storm.

At the start of the World War, York refuses to register for the draft, on the ground that war is contrary to his religious teaching and philosophy. He finally consents to be drafted, with the hope that he will be exempt because of his religious beliefs, but he is refused exemption. Once in the Georgian training camp, York astounds his superior officers with excellence of his marksmanship, and is rewarded by promoiton to a Corporalship. In France, in the second battle of the Meuse-Argonne, in October, 1918, York led an attack on a group of German machine gun nests and, singlehanded, captured 132 enemy soldiers. The historic fact is dramatically recreated and well enough to tense any audience.

The subsequent award of honors from Marshal Foch and General Pershing, the triumphant return to New York, and the fevered acclaim of his countrymen are depicted with an intensity aimed at rekindling in audiences the emotional fever aroused by the original events. For the most part the aim is accurate.

York returns to his Tennessee valley home, the conquering hero chastened by his adventures and determined to pursue the simple life

Gary Cooper provides a performance showmen can herald as equal to his best, and his, of course, is the top name for marquee exploitation. Joan Leslie, as the heart interest, warrants building of her status as a new star. Others of the cast including Walter Brennan as Pastor Pile, as an exhorting preacher and Margaret Wycherly, as York's mother, do fine acting in a few noteworthy scenes.

The film has definite audience appeal of the type engendered by "The Fighting 69th," to which it may be compared without guaranteeing that repetition will bring the same returns.

Reviewed in a projection room at the Warner's home office.—J. E. SAMUELSON.

Manpower

(Warner Brothers)

High Tension Triangle

High voltage electric lines and the full passions of a rough, tough crew of repairmen frame the elemental triangle, two men and a woman, in Warner Brothers "Manpower." Sparking short circuits, storms, and the camaraderie of men with a job to do make an exicting background for the marriage of Edward G. Robinson and Marlene Dietrich. George Raft is the third man, hard, cynical of the love that drives Miss Dietrich to him, but loyal to death to his boss, "Hank" (Edward G. Robinson).

There is melodrama in Raoul Walsh's direction of the crew of high-tension wiremen. They climb tall steel poles through ice, tremendous rains, and fist-punctuated rows among themselves, in order to keep the wires "hot" with power. On the ground and at their boarding house the well-cast crew, which includes Frank McHugh, Alan Hale, Ward Bond, Anthony Quinn and others live in an atmosphere marked by boisterous pranks and tall talk of their prowess with the ladies. Their wit is rough, practical and entertaining. Laughs come frequently.

When Robinson, boss of the crew marries "Fay Duval," a girl who has "done time" and is now hostess in a clip joint, "Johnny," his pal, is contemptuous. She honestly tries to fill "Hank's" dream but when he brings "Johnny" home to recuperate from a fall from the power line she becomes enamoured of the younger man. "Johnny" spurns her advances, saves "Fay" from jail and forces her to return to "Hank."

"Hank" believes the pair treacherous, and tries to kill "Johnny" on the top of a storm swept power pole. "Hank" falls, but before dying realizes his pal, although loving "Fay," had been loyal. She runs away, but again "Johnny" brings her back.

Excellent camera work makes the linemen's routine dramatic and interesting. Action never lags, and although the story shifts rapidly through many scenes the pace knits it together. Effective too, is the crisp, realistic dialogue. It has the authentic ring of workingmen's talk, and the rough humor, which eases the watchers' tense excitement with well timed guffaws.

Previewed at an executive screening in the Warner Brothers home office. The professional audience appeared held by the story and burst into frequent laughs, and some guffaws, at the crisp dialogue and well placed gag lines.—JOHN STUART, JR.

Barnacle Bill

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Waterfront Comedy-Drama

Back in the list of Money-Making Stars as indicated by exhibitors' ballots entitling him to 8th position last year in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD-FAME poll covering 1940, Wallace Beery is quite plainly the top exploitation asset of any picture he appears in.

His rank in that list is the thing for showment playing this film to emphasize in their advertising, both because it is the box office keynote of any Beery picture at any time this year and because it will tend to take the customer's mind off "The Bad Man."

In the present casting Mr. Beery has a vehicle and a role recalling "Min and Bill" and its companion pictures. The part could be, in fact, "Bill" all over again, and probably is.

In the present picture he has opposite him a personality—Marjorie Main's—comparing directly to that of the late Marie Dressler, and playing a counterpart of her "Min," although experienced showmen know it isn't smart to advertise any living star as a successor to any departed one, a type of comparison foredoomed to boomeranging.

Mr. Beery's present story, detailed on page 160 of your Product Digest, is about a fishing-boat character, operating out of San Pedro, California, and the woman on shore whose motives in financing his ventures, despite his known weakness for liquor and the squandering of money, are more romantic than commercial. The action abounds in rough-house fighting, water-front activity and rowdy humor.

Unlike the more memorable of Mr. Beery's pictures, this one refrains from going to the extreme in any direction—melodrama, pathos, sentiment or violence—and hugs middle ground, at some cost to the effectiveness of the enterprise.

A number of opportunities to wrench the hearts of the customers, as was done in "The Champ," for instance, present themselves but are passed over.

Result of this is to leave the audience with some of its expectations unfulfilled.

Possibly producer Milton Bren and director Richard Thorpe felt, as many do, that this is a season for comedy only.

Previewed at the Alexander theatre, Glendale, Calif., to an audience of paying and invited guests, the former predominant, which laughed as much as Beery audiences usually do but wept none whatever, suggesting a better future for the film than "The Bad Man" experienced but still less bright than might have been.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Produced and distributed by MGM. Producer, Milton Bren. Director, Richard Thorpe. Photographed by Clyde De Vinna. Edited by Frank E. Hull. P.C.A. certificate No. 7441. Release date, July 4, 1941. Running time, when seen in Glendale, 90 minutes. General audience classification.

Blondie in Society

(Columbia)

Family Comedy

The good, clean, all-American fun that has permeated the predecessors of Columbia's "Blondie" series, based on Chic Young's newspaper comic strip and radio program, is fully evident in "Blondie in Society," the latest of the offerings and which has, for added human interest, a dog show in which the future of the "Bumpstead" family is at stake.

With Arthur Lake playing "Dagwood," Penny Singleton playing "Blondie," Larry Simms as "Baby Dumpling," and the cast regulars of Jonathan Hale, Danny Mummert, Irving Bacon and "Daisy" the dog, the newest of the domestic adventure group is another well-rounded tale of what difficulty a husband can encounter when he tries not to.

The cast includes William Frawley, Edgar Kennedy, Chick Chandler, Bill Goodwin and Robert Mitchell's Boys Choir.

Producer Robert Sparks and director Frank Strayer, who have acted in similar capacities on the preceding "Blondie" pictures, went overboard in attempting to manufacture the most laughs in the 77 minute running time allotted to the film. "Dagwood," having accepted a Great Dane in payment of a $50 loan, finds himself with his home life at stake, his job imperilled, and his well being generally impaired by the canine, but all ends in his favor.

Previewed at the Columbia studio projection room, Hollywood, where a press audience chuckled, roared and guffawed.—V. K.

Pimpernel Smith

(Leslie Howard Productions-Anglo American)

Adventure Drama

Here is something of a one-man film, with Leslie Howard, "Scarlet Pimpernel" of Alex Korda's heyday, at one and the same time producer, director, and star. The result, none the less, is excellent, for the film is grand entertainment, skilfully devised and polished, and the star's slick and nicely tailored performance a very saleable asset. Howard's name means plenty at box offices on both sides of the Atlantic and the film, with a topical slant, is for all its fiction, a racy and exhilarating slice of adventure irrespective of its personal appeal, and needs no apology for its nationality. It should register as box office anywhere save in Nazi Germany.

Howard's role is that of a Varsity professor who helps anti Nazis escape from the Gestapo, a Pimpernel in modern dress with an academic manner, an absent minded pedant with a facility for disguising himself as a scarecrow, or a Nazi propagandist, or remaining erstwhile a jaded and ingenuous archaeologist. Almost all the action unrolls in Nazi Germany—pre War vintage, and around the Professor's efforts to help a Polish editor's escape from prison, his own whimsical brushes with jackbooted authority, a spot of romance with the Editor's daughter, and a certain juvenile appeal in the collaboration of some of his students. It is sheer adventure stuff, with escapes, disguises, and the shadows of the firing squad, but the treatment is more often vivacious than melodramatic, with Howard's whimsical, pointedly facetious Pimpernel the centre of it all. Legpulling at the expense of Nazi philosophy is not disdained, and is responsible for some amusing comedy passages.

Francis Sullivan's Goeringesque Reichsminister offers portly foil to Howard's polish, Mary Morris is an interesting Ludmilla, and there is a boy Hugh MacDermott who is obviously molded in the dimensions of stardom.

Howard's direction is imaginative and significant if inclined at times to lag over a scene, Grunwald's and Pertwee's script work is excellent, and John Greenwood's music far above the ordinary best.

Shown on a sweltering June afternoon to a London trade audience the film very obviously gripped throughout its two hours, the thrills registering as effectively as the whimsies. Though there was obvious appreciation of Howard's production and direction, it was his performance and personal appeal which exhibitors seemed to like most.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Accent on Love

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Comedy-Drama

Originally titled "The Man With the Shovel," this inexpensively fabricated comedy drama fills out an hour of running time without boring, stimulating or leaving noticeable trace.

On the positive side it offers a good performance by J. Carrol Naish as a Portuguese laborer. On the negative side it offers some mild humour implemented by the juvenile Stanley Clements, artificial performances by most of the cast and a treatment of the staple plot about the millionaire owner of a ramshackle tenement and the means whereby he is brought to understanding of the tenants' point of view.

The story is hardly strong enough or handled earnestly enough to lend its incidental pronouncements regarding the WPA, the President, Americanism and such matters conviction or significance. Nor does the arbitrarily simplified arrival at happy ending via Reno seem important by the time it is accomplished.

Production by Walter Morosco and Ralph Dietrich, together with direction by Ray McCarey, are commonplace.

The Bride Came C.O.D.

(Warner Brothers)

Cagney-Davis Comedy

In this picture Bette Davis takes a holiday from the type of dramatic roles which won her Academy Awards in the past, for a fling at comedy—and, in general, comedy which has its high, or low, points in watching her land in cactus, bottom down, not once but three times.

James Cagney plays the same kind of a part with which he has become identified and should please the customers that have contributed to his box office popularity.

"The Bride Came C.O.D." may be expected to be a box office success wherever theatre patrons, seeking escape from summer heat and current worries, will turn to a Cagney comedy with Bette Davis, figuratively and physically, on the receiving end. The comedy tastes of each theatre's patrons and that of the local community will be deciding factors in determining whether this is a strong hit or a comedy which does not come up to expectations.

There are a number of laughs and humorous situations in the film. But the preview audience failed to respond to many of the lines and incidents planned for laughs. To some such comedy as Bette Davis landing three times in cactus, Cagney ceremoniously removing the cactus spines, and later directing sling shots at the same part of her anatomy which met the cactus, is extremely funny; to others it is not.

The story is of the debutante daughter of a Texas Oil millionaire who decides to elope—at the instigation of "Tommy Keenan," a Walter Winchell part—with a band leader Cagney as "Steve Collins," the pilot of the plane which was to carry the couple and the radio gossip from Los Angeles to Nevada for the wedding, makes a deal with the girl's father to deliver her, unmarried, in Texas. "Steve Collins" takes off, leaving the band leader and gossip behind. There is a forced landing in the desert where he and the heiress, now believed kidnapped, spend the night near the plane. At daybreak they walk to a ghost town, inhabited by one last resident. At length all parties arrive on the scene—the sheriff from Los Angeles seeking "Collins" for taking a plane now owned by a finance company; the band leader and gossip, after the intended bride; reporters and the father.

After a number of complications including "Collins" and Miss Davis being lost in an abandoned mine, a fight between "Collins" and the orchestra leader, a marriage ceremony between him and the heiress which is invalid because the justice of the peace was not licensed in California, the film ends with "Collins" married to the oil heiress and demanding from the father the $10 per pound freight, excluding clothes, which he had agreed to charge for "kidnapping" or "rescuing" the daughter.

Good support is given by Harry Davenport, as the last settler; Eugene Pallette, the oil man, and Stuart Erwin, the night club newsman. The picture was directed by William Keighley and William Cagney was associate producer.

Exhibitors will find chief exploitation values in the star names and the fact that Bette Davis is a comedienne.

Previewed at the Studio theatre, Los Angeles, to a mixed lay and press audience which, from time to time, laughed, but manifested no enthusiasm at other places where humor was intended. Indications were that the audience had received less than it expected.—MARTIN QUIGLEY, JR.

Forced Landing

(Paramount)

Romance and Intrigue

This is the second William H. Pine-William C. Thomas aviation film, the first being "Power Dive." Paramount is reported so pleased with the results that the producers will make six pictures for the 1941-42 program. Considering the budget, the studio is more than satisfied and exhibitors playing the picture may also be, for it is better than average program fare.

Audience attention is attracted before the title and credits are flashed on the screen, by a thrilling plane crash and assassination of the injured pilot as he struggles from the wreckage. Though the story does not live up to the expectations kindled by the opening, an interesting tale of Fifth Column intrigue in an unidentified Latin American country is recounted.

An American pilot gets a job with the army of "Mosague" and then with an airline flying supplies to a defense construction job on the local Gibraltar. He falls in love with the daughter of the Dutch construction engineer, but she is engaged to an army officer who is the leader of the Fifth Column movement which has hindered work on the defense project by killing the two previous pilots ferrying supplies and payroll gold to the construction site. After several adventures the climax is reached with an air battle in which the American pilot with the girl fights off her former fiance, the chief Fifth Columnist' attempting to shoot them down from a fighter plane. However, the unarmed transport plane brings down the fighter, using a keg of iron spikes as amunition. The film ends on a humorous note with the pilot and the girl, now married, watching a football game in the United States and eating ice cream cones, even though it is snowing.

While the acting is uneven, in general Richard Arlen gives a good performance and there are indications that Paramount is trying to build Eva Gabor, a native of Hungary, for more important pictures. J. Carrol Naish, the native rebel general, and Nils Asther, the Fifth Columnist give able support. Evelyn Brent has a very small part.

Hugh Herbert Entertains

Hugh Herbert and his way with a comedy line or situation are the things for showmen to talk about in exploiting this otherwise light and unsubstantial offering.

Comedian Herbert is seen as a magician who has gone broke in a vaudeville agency business and stay on in the same as assistant to two young people from the country who buy the business believing it thriving and, discovering it is not, turn it into a success by supplying vaudeville talent to department stores for window display purposes.

Tom Brown and Peggy Moran as the young people, Walter Catlett as the confidence man who engineers the sale, June Storey as a model and the others in the cast pitch to Herbert throughout.

Production and direction, by Ken Goldsmith and Edward Cline, keep proceedings on the move despite thinness of the story material.

Soviet Frontiers On the Danube

(Artkino)

Propaganda Film

With the current Russo-German conflict headlined daily in the nation's newspapers, Artkino is releasing "Soviet Frontiers on the Danube," a propaganda-filled documentary film produced by the Central Ukranian Studio in the land of Stalin. The picture concerns the "liberation" of Bessarabia and Northern Bukovina by the Red Army from the rule of the Rumanian Government.

Produced for the purposes of showing the joy and happiness of the people of these territories under Soviet rule, holding the Rumanian Government and officers up to ridicule following the bloodless invasion of the Russians, and, by recurrent scenes, the strength and might of the Red forces, the picture is without production merit. It purveys no message of importance to the audience nor reveals any visual improvement of the Bessarabian peasants under Soviet domination.

The commentary, spoken in flawless English, extols throughout the virtues of Communism and the happiness of the Russian people under this form of government, however the smiles of the peoples do not cover their bedraggled appearances and hovel-like dwellings.

The River Danube as the western border of Bessarabia is brought to the screen time and again and it is here the only enjoyable part of the film is presented since the commentator remains silent as the strains of "The Blue Danube Waltz," by the famed German composer Johann Strauss, is heard.

What little the picture has to offer in the way of documentary entertainment is completely eclipsed by the biased photography, editing and commentary.

Reviewed at the Central theatre on Broadway, New York, where a capacity audience of Soviet sympathizers munched fruit and peanuts as they applauded without coaxing, and at the slightest provocation, the pictures of Joseph Stalin and his associates, the march of the Red Army into Bessarabia, and forced themselves to laugh at the Rumanian Army and officers presented by Soviet photographers and film editors in some of the more uncomplimentary scenes.—GEORGE SPIRES.

Produced by the Central Ukranian Studio of Documentary Films in Russia, and distributed in the United States by the Soviet film outlet, Artkino. Directed by I. Kopalin and I. Poselsky. Music by A. Roitman. Running time, 65 minutes. Release date, June 28. General audience audience classification.

Atlantic Ferry

(Warner Brothers)

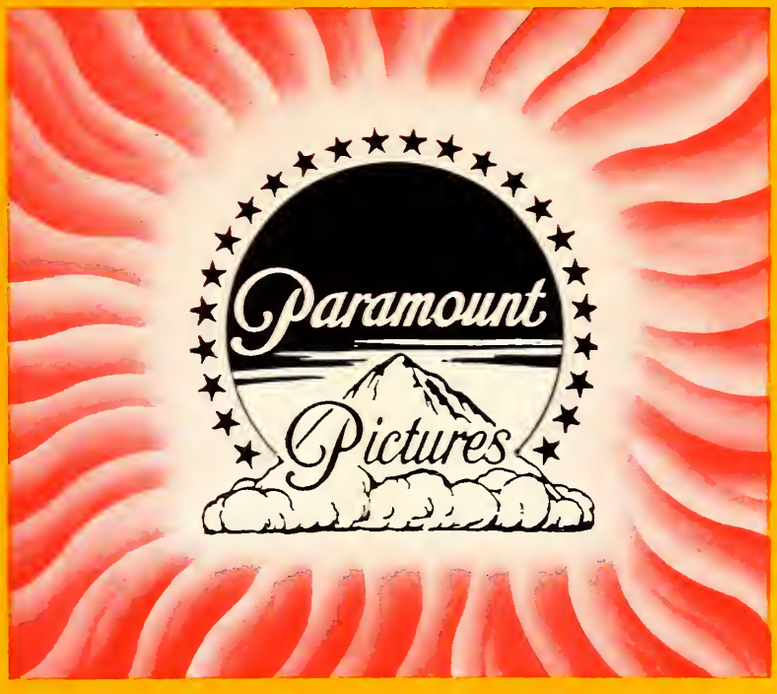
Marine Melodrama

Designed for a market wider than the exclusively British, this spectacular opus from Warners' Teddington lot is cunningly tuned to the pitch of Anglo-American relations. Its inspiration and subject matter prove to be the opening of the first steamship service across the Atlantic, its keynote the link between the two great English speaking peoples. The subject, thus, has immediate marketability, and the lavish canvas upon which it is laid should assist that quality. For British audiences the names of Michael Redgrave and Valerie Hobson are a calculable asset. Max Milder has shown ambition and enterprise in his foster child which maintains the boldness of policy which was launched with "The Prime Minister."

The subject, a spectacular one, is treated in a spectacular manner, and added to the human idea behind the story, over and above the epic inspiration, the picture has landfalls and departures, tempests and free fights, and an heroic passage in which Michael Redgrave dives into the paddle box of his ship to set it to rights in the face of a storm. Much of it is transparently model work, however, more ambitious than convincing, and Walter Forde's direction seldom achieves any dramatic highspots.

Redgrave who gives a thoughtful and sensible performance is cast as Charles MacIver, the man who launched the first steamship service across the Atlantic, and the film traces his struggles and disillusions the enmities and intrigues he had to fight, his personal tenacity and moral and physical courage. The exposure of the scandals of the sailing passenger ships, the difficulties of getting finance for a new idea, the perils of the High Seas, and the ultimate triumph are all here with a shade of romance which perhaps rightly plays second fiddle to the more epic and spectacular material.

Miss Hobson looks attractive and behaves with elegance. There is otherwise a massive cast out of which stand Margaretta Scott in a ladylike role, Griffiths Jones as the other McIver, Frank Tickle in a grandfatherly cameo, Hartley Power as Samuel Cunard, Felix Aylmer, Henry Victor, etcetera.



Shown to a trade audience in London, the film obviously held the attention, though there were not many laughs and few if any tears. The links between the heroic past and the urgent present, mainly on montage lines provoked some applause.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Produced and distributed by Warner Bros. Directed by Walter Forde. Art director, Norman Arnold. Special effects, Douglas Wollesey and A. Harris.

Dance Hall

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Swing Melodrama

Dealing with dance hall personnel and keyed for audiences of dance hall age and temperament this pairing of Cesar Romero and Carole Landis has speed, humor and a sprinkling of music as assets in behalf of entertainment and exploitation. While some liberties are taken with the niceties of courtship as practiced in the more polite circles of society, setting and characterization tend to bring these under the head of realism rather than brazenness.

Showmen who feel that dance halls have been attracting young people whose time might better be spent in their theatres have in this offering an inducement to exploit directly in this sector of the popultaion. The story concerns principally a girl singer employed by a dance hall and the manager of the place whose courtship of the lady is conducted in headlong and initially unprincipled manner, love finally aecomplishing a purification of the gentleman's motive. All of the action takes place in and about a dance hall including several sequences in which dancing in a somewhat modified—jitterbug manner oc-

Mr. Romero's role is a deal less noble than he has had recently, reformation setting in only at the close of the picture and following many a shady activity on his part. Miss Landis has what is ealled a fat part and makes telling use of it, her performance suggesting a future worthy of expanded billing.

Irving Pichel, director for executive producer Sol Wurtzel, keeps the narrative unwinding steadily and at a brisk pace. Dialogue is lively, often humorous in the wisecrack tradition and sometimes sharply pointed. It is a bit mature for children.

A lottery conducted by the dance hall and fixed by the manager is a story factor of consequences.

Documentary of China

The unceasing efforts of China to rid herself of her Japanese invader and the indomitable spirit of the country and its people in this war for freedom, are revealed in this impressive documentary photographed in color. Rey Scott, war correspondent and cameraman, whose byline in American newspapers is familiar to those who have followed the Sino-Japanese conflict through the years, has graphically recorded the heroic sacrifices being made.

Produced by Herbert T. Edwards, remembered for "Here Is Ireland," an all-color feature production, and "Thumbs Up," which became the official release of the British War Relief Society, the documentary brings to the fore the importance of the Burma Road, the ever present danger of attack from Japanese bombs to all vehicles which carry supplies into the oppressed nation, the spirit of the Chinese people in towns and hamlets who reconstruct the bombed sections of the Road before attending to their dead and injured so that the lifeline may be kept open, and other scenes of dauntless courage.

Highlighted with views of the country's rulers, Generalissimo and Madame Chiang Kai Shek who appear frequently throughout, the important role played by the Guerillas in the strategy against the invader, and climactic scenes of the devastating bombings of Chungking which will leave most any audience awe-struck, the production is one of the better documentaries of a nation and its people to come to the screen in recent years. Although available for exhibition only in 16 mm prints the distributor supplies the necessary sound and projection equipment.

Reviewed at the World theatre in New York attended by an early afternoon audience who gave the picture concentrated attention throughout and applauded loudly many of the more stirring scenes.—GEORGE SPIRES.

Cultural Documentaries

Grouped here are five specimen films sponsored by the British Council, and shown privately by that body. The Council's aims are to conduct British propaganda overseas, but to stress the cultural and creative note rather than that of war. These films mainly seek to reflect across the Atlantic the civic graces, social structure and cultural qualities of Britain. There would seem to be a deliberate detachment from the more urgent and present problem of survival upon which, many will feel, these things depend. As propaganda they are from the British viewpoint less effective than many independently made subjects. As entertainment in the "interest" class they are mixed, but not negligible. Technically they are competent.

(a) is a voluminous and dilatory newsreel compiled from material supplied by the commercial reels, covering such subjects as Libya, Syria, Abyssinia, the Empire war effort, the Prime Minster looking at bombers, etc. It is completely unexciting and devoid of the drama or punch which might have been expected.

(b) is a well knit and human study of educational conditions in Britain, necessarily brief and in consequent inadequate, but both interesting and convincing.

(c) survey some of the bloodstock of Britain and aims to establish Britain's place as stud farm of the cattle raising world.

(d) shows Ulster as a place where other things are done than smashing Catholic skulls, toucnes industry, agriculture, fisheries, civics and the Services.

(e) is most effective of the bunch, a colour short dealing with Lancashire's cotton industry and gay with multi hued patterns and color prints, well photographed and slickly cut, informative to the mind and pleasing to the eye.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

New England

(RKO Radio)

March of Time, No. 12

In this twelfth issue of the current series, the March of Time focuses its attention on the six New England states. And, while a topical note runs through the piece on New England's relation to the conflict overseas, there is more in this of a documentary and ageless record of the people—the Yankees—than of this war or any war. Taking a typical small town—Exeter, New Hampshire—the New England way of life is summarized in the quiet existence of the townspeople. The war, however, has affected New England. Its industries, especially its shipyards, are operating at full blast and, New Englanders, like the rest of the country, have their army camps and uniforms. Running time, 20 minutes.

The Red Army

(Artkino)

Red Army Propaganda

Presented on the same program as "Soviet Frontiers on the Danube," this short subject is a Russian produced film of the power and size of the Red Army. In its own way, this too presents only the better side of army life in the Soviet Union and shows such scenes as young men training for officer's commissions, a military revue in Red Square in Moscow, and Stalin reviewing his forces. The commentary in this subject is spoken in accented English but, nevertheless, is understandable. The subject, of course, is not meant for all theatres throughout the country but will appeal only to those houses whose audiences are supporters of the Russian form of government.—Running time, 20 minutes.

"Poison Pen" to Republic

Republic has acquired the American distribution rights to "Poison Pen," produced by Associated British Pictures, from Edward Small, who purchased the film to use portion of his frozen money abroad. The picture, which was released June 30th, was reviewed in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, issue of July 15, 1939.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

On April 23, 1941, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, in New York, said that its third one-reeler of the series based on the predictions of the 16th Century prophet, Nostradamus, would reveal the seer's prophecy that a nation then neutral—not the United States—would enter the world war and play a decisive role. With Soviet Russia's entrance into the war MGM now believes that the predictions of old Nostradamus back in the 1500's are coming true faster than the company can make shorts.

Further, according to Metro's statement in April, although the short subject was still in preparation, and not yet in filming, Carey Wilson, narrator of the series, had already deciphered and would include in the reel some information based on Nostradamus' predictions as to the date and exact location of the final battle which, according to the prophet, is to be fought between land forces on one side and combined land and naval forces on the other.

That's the dope we've been waiting for. And we can see large orders for the film coming from Mr. Hitler, Mr. Stalin, Mr. Churchill, and, possibly, Benito. Maybe Mr. Roosevelt would also like a couple of prints.

When last seen at the Camp he was jacking-up a big army truck to fix a tire blowout.

Shades of yesteryear were raised in New York the other day when Julius Singer, long associated with Carl Laemmle in the pioneering days of the motion picture industry, emerged from film retirement to market a new and unique little giveaway arrangement to theatres.

Associated with Mr. Singer is David O'Sullivan, in a company called Symprovised Music, Inc., of New York. They call their project "Toon-Nite." Through it an exhibitor will, on special nights, hand to patrons sheet music of semi-classical numbers, so printed in red and black notes that the recipient can learn music without knowing much about it. The red and black arrangement, they say, allows for the elimination of sharps, flats, accidentals and key signatures "without affecting the melody."

The committee could not pass by a number, by Gerald Marks and Ben Ryan, entitled, "We Won't Let You Down, Old England." Ironically, the next winner was "Let's Keep America Free."

MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS who view the threatening "gasless Sundays" as a potential boom to box offices in large communities where Sunday car travelings into the country and to the seashore affect their box-offices, might view H. What a shock a young naval officer received in Montreal, the other day, when, home on leave, and driving serenely along he saw a sight that brought his heart to his mouth, or someplace. As he passed a Montreal church there stood before its high portals a burly person in Nazi uniform with Nazi swastika armband, barring entry to a woman who appeared to be a would-be worshipper. The navy lad, who had last seen the job done by the British Navy to the German battleship Bismack, leaped from his car and dashed to the scene to do battle. Blind with excitement he failed to note movie cameramen off to the side, who were filming scenes for a picture which is to give impressions of what life under the Nazis would be.

That's $358,750,000 a week, $1,435,000,000 a month, $17,220,000,000 a year! And doesn't include the help we're sending over.

Maybe television is going places after all. This week, television became commercialized. This week, too, U. A. Mr. Sanabria sees the little look-and-listen posts relieving the entire U. S. Navy from patrolling our shores. The Navy could just sit back and look at television movies until pictures flashed of the approaching enemy.

Mr. Cooper, though, is no Dixiean; he's an Indianaian.

Kent Cooper has written quite an album of music. He wrote 'Dixie Girl' 15 years ago for his daughter. It remained unpublished until a friend, who liked the tune, played golf with Cooper. Cooper's wager on the game called for publishing the song if he lost. He did, and the song appeared this year as part of the BMI catalogue. Maurice Baron, Music Hall composer, arranged it to highlight the southern medley on this week's bill at the 51st Rockefeller show emporium.

60 MILLIONS A YEAR NEW WAR-TAX BILL FOR THE 'LITTLE' EXHIBITORS

Exemption To Be Cut from 20 to 9 Cents, Tax-Free Tickets Eliminated; Air Conditioning, Photographic Apparatus Hit

The House ways and means committee in the nation's capital on Monday turned new tax legislation over to its drafting staff for the writing of a new excise bill agreeing to reduce the admission tax exemption from 20 cents to nine cents and to eliminate all tax-free admissions except those of service men in uniform. There are at present 22 different kinds of exemptions on ticket taxes under the existing law. The Government would get an additional $60,000,000 a year from ticket taxes mostly from film theatres.

Meanwhile the tentative approval of increased excise taxes and new levies on 24 specific items, including a $5 use tax on automobiles, on Monday brought the tax legislators within $185,000,000 of their $3,500,000,000 revenue objective.

In the proceedings, which took all day Monday, the committee added $733,200,000 in excise taxes to the revenue bill which already contains $2,468,500,000 in new individual and corporation taxes and $113,700,000 in additional taxes on estates and gifts.

Sales Taxes Increased

In all, the committee approved on Monday 13 new excise levies, including a new form of retail sales price tax on jewelry and 11 increases in existing sales taxes.

The nine-cent exemption on theatre tickets was recommended by the Treasury department. It did not meant the approval of the exhibitors generally, who foresaw that many ten-cent houses might drop their prices to escape the tax, and it was suggested to the committee during its hearing that the exemptions be eliminated entirely.

While the committee did not see fit to accept the industry's suggestion that all admissions be subjected to tax, it did take cognizance of the long-standing complaint against tax-free church and charitable organization shows by applying the tax against such projects and eliminating competition which has been a source of irritation to theatre exhibitors.

The only tax-free tickets permissible under the new bill will be those sold to service-men in uniform.

The tax group refused to accept Treasury proposals for increases in the taxes on tobacco, beer, gasoline and bank checks. On Tuesday, however, it was expected that the committee would consider the taxing of soft drinks, furs, cosmetics, pari-mutuels, electric light bulbs, coin operated devices, and production of gas (except for industrial use).

Of the 24 items of excise taxes given tentative action, the following affecting the motion picture industry, directly or indirectly were included:

Lower exemptions on telegraph, telephone and radio messages to 25 cents from 50 cents and increase the rate of taxation.

The reduction of theatre admission exemption to nine cents.

Five per cent tax on telephone bills.

A ten per cent tax on photographic apparatus.

Air Conditioning Taxed

An increase of the tax on mechanical refrigerators, including commercial units of air conditioning equipment to ten per cent from the present rate of 5½ per cent.

Increase tax on radio sets and parts to ten per cent from the present 5½ per cent.

Tax of ten per cent on phonographs and recordings.

Tax of five per cent on candy and chewing gum.

A ten per cent tax on musical instruments.

A five per cent tax on total cabaret charge.

The committee announced that proposals to tax the renting of motion picture films, as well as insurance premiums, coffee, cocoa, tea, sugar and fuel oil used for motor fuel had been tentatively eliminated from consideration.

The proposal for a $12,000,000 tax on film rentals, as in effect during the last World War, has been favored by Congressional tax experts but opposed by the Treasury Department. If enacted, it would have been added to the rentals paid by exhibitors.

Wisconsin Licenses Changed

In Stevens Point, Wis., the common council has repealed its 1917 ordinance regulating and licensing theatres and has adopted a new measure which sets up comprehensive regulations for theatres. Theatres or halls seating over 500 are assessed an annual license fee of $100, while those with less than 500 seats are charged 20 cents for each seat per year.

Where benches are used in halls for motion picture shows, the ordinance provides that each 18 inches of space provided for seating constitutes a seat. No license for film exhibition will be issued until the electric wiring, installation and apparatus and all lighting has been approved by the city electrician.

At Marshfield, Wis., the common council has increased the annual license fee from motion picture theatres from $40 to $50.

No changes in operation methods will be necessitated by the 1941 Gross Receipts Tax Act which replaced the Arkansas sales tax on Tuesday, July 1st. The tax levy in both cases is two per cent. No tax collected on film rentals under a provision which exempts taxes on rentals of anything kept in the state for less than ten days.

In Pennsylvania, Governor James has signed the bill amending the Sunday film local options referendum law so that signatures of 20 per cent instead of five per cent of the voters of the dominant party in the last general election are required to compel any municipality to submit the question of Sunday pictures to the ballot.

Lucas To Aid Bond Drive

Arthur Lucas of Atlanta, president of Lucas and Jenkins, theatre circuit in Georgia, was appointed chairman of the defense savings staff last week, by Marion Allen, collector of internal revenue of Georgia. Mr. Lucas will head his state's activities in speeding sales of defense savings bonds and stamps. A veteran of the Spanish-American War, Mr. Lucas served during the last World War in pushing sale of Liberty Bonds. He was chairman of the state Board of Public Welfare and vice-chairman of the Federal public works administration in his state.

Schless to Australia

Robert Schless, Warner foreign manager, left last week en route to Australia where, it is reported, he will participate in negotiating a product deal with Hoyts' Circuit. This is Mr. Schless' first trip to Australia since becoming foreign manager.

Will Hays in Hollywood

Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, left for Hollywood Monday, June 30th, and is expected to remain there the rest of the summer.

WAR WEARY COUNTRIES LOOK TO HOLLYWOOD FILMS FOR 'ESCAPE'

Foreign Sales Managers Report on Business in Latin-America, England, France; Rose Urges Revision of British Regulations

Foreign sales managers and representatives of American film companies coincidentally arrived in force in New York last week by clipper and steamship, with substantially the same message: that audiences, in markets still open to American films, still want them; in fact, with extensive war-weariness or fear, need them for escape, and as an entertainment staple, lengthy, pleasant, inexpensive.

Morris Goodman, Republic's foreign sales chief, said, after three and one-half months visiting every Latin-American country, that his company's business was 40 per cent above last year's.

Teddy Carr, co-managing director in Great Britain for United Artists, said receipts for the first half of this year were greater than any similar period in the past four years.

David Rose, Paramount's managing director in Great Britain, said American companies had between $26,000,000 and $30,000,000 frozen and would attempt to have the amount they can withdraw this year increased. He also reported theatre business excellent, and said only 10 per cent of 5,000 houses were disabled.

Louis de Rochemont, managing editor of the March of Time, returned from unoccupied France with 12,000 feet of film, and the observation that theatres were doing well, films were being produced, and that American films left in that country were popular; and that, conversely, German-made or sponsored films were unpopular.

Other arrivals last week were Joseph McConville, Columbia's foreign manager, and Jack Segal, manager of its foreign branch operations, who visited Latin-American offices and attended the annual sales convention of Columbia Pictures of Brazil at the Palace Hotel, Rio de Janeiro.

Goodman Claims Increase

Morris Goodman, foreign sales manager for Republic Pictures, in his New York office last week after returning from a three and one-half month tour of every Latin-American country, said that, generally, business of his company was 40 per cent above last year. He ascribed this to the improved product, more efficient distribution, and a drop in competition from European films, notably the French, which had been popular in South America.

The economic situation of Latin-American nations is not as good as it was a year ago, he said, making the gain in company business more remarkable.

Distribution of Republic pictures parallels, in extent, distribution by the majors, with the difference that Republic's distributors are franchise holders, the company owning its own offices only in Colon, Panama, and Santiago, Chile.

Production of films by Latin-American countries is still spotty, being staple only in Argentina, and such production is not a competitor of magnitude, he said.

Theatre building is booming in Venezuela, Mexico and Brazil, he said.

RICHARD DE ROCHEMONT, March of Time

DAVID ROSE, right, is greeted by John Hicks and Barney Balaban, Paramount foreign executive and president, respectively.

Westerns are increasingly popular with Latin-Americans, he reported; and even Gene Autry, not hitherto popular as he has been in the United States, is catching hold, he reported.

United Artists, for the first half of this year, is enjoying in Great Britain the best business it has had for four years, Teddy Carr, co-managing director there, reported in New York Monday.

Mr. Carr expects to be here six weeks. He planned to go to the Coast Sunday to confer with producers at the studios.

He said that Ealing Studios, London, which he recently added to A's list of producers, had completed "It Turned Out Nice Again," with George Formby, and was now making "Ships With Wings," largely aboard the often "sunk" Ark Royal, airplane carrier.

The latter picture, he said, would be "one of the greatest in film industry history," with a production cost of $750,000. It is being directed by Michael Balcon, with John Clements, Leslie Banks, and Jane Baxter as stars.

The Ealing Studios, bombed and damaged, and then enlarged and repaired with Government help, will also make "The Big Blockade," with Will Hay, he said.

Anent reported deals for another American film company to secure control of an English circuit, Mr. Carr remarked that British sentiment and regulations forbid such domination. He asserted UA, with a 50 per cent interest in the Odeon chain, did not intend to dominate it or any other circuit.

Companies To Seek More

American companies, through London representatives, will ask British authorities to increase the amount of money they may withdraw from the country, David Rose, Paramount's Great Britain manager, said in New York last week upon his arrival for conferences with home office executives.

He estimated that between $26,000,000 and $30,000,000 in American funds were "frozen."

Noting that the new financial agreement will take effect November 1st, Mr. Rose predicted

FOREIGN CHIEFS REPORT

liberalization efforts would center on that agreement, rather than on the current one.

The American companies were permitted to withdraw $17,500,000 in 1939, and $12,900,000 for the current year ending November 1st. The latter figure is estimated to be only 37½ per cent of their annual British earnings.

Mr. Rose asserted the currency situation was pressing for American companies, and believed the British could be more liberal because their dollar situation has been eased by our seven billion dollar "lease-lend bill."

Paramount now has in production in England "Hatter's Castle," and it expects to make "The Admirable Crichton" and one other feature next season, he said.

Mr. Rose was scheduled to arrive at the Paramount Coast studio this week for conferences on production here.

De Rochemont Reports

Richard de Rochemont, managing editor of the March of Time, arrived in New York last week with 12,000 feet of film exposed in unoccupied France and North Africa, and with the opinion that the French people, still democratic, prefer American and British pictures in spite of a Government bent on changing the political, economic and cultural systems of the country to please the Germans.

Theatres, he said, are well attended. There is production in Nice and Marseilles. American films, mostly old, are liked. German films, dubbed in French, or produced in French (in occupied France) are disliked.

The French listen to the British radio so avidly that theatres are cooperating by arranging programs so they do not conflict, he said.

He asserted much of the 12,000 feet of film shot for him by a French cameraman, was undeveloped, and therefore uncernsored. He hastened to add, however, that the films were innocuous, however fresh they might appear to the outside world heretofore lacking much footage from France since its defeat.

One-fifth of the footage was taken in North Africa and includes pictures of General Weygand, he said.

Mr. de Rochemont reported many Vichy area officials do not like the Germans, nor the character of the new government. The people are passively resisting anti-democratic moves, he said. He related that "Good-Bye, Mr. Chips," with an anti-German scene was shown widely and repeatedly. The scene was then eliminated. But the French audiences then applauded where the scene should have been.

Business of theatres is normal and in some locations, better than normal, he said, pointing out that films were a relatively inexpensive form of entertainment, and "There is little else to do."

Mr. de Rochemont had been in France since the end of April. It was his first visit since the capitulation, June, 1940. Prior to that, he had lived in the country 10 years.

Puerto Rican Business Up

Motion picture business in Puerto Rico has increased 40 per cent over last year as a result of the United States Government's military preparations on the island, it was revealed last week by Carlos Aguayo, manager of the Alcazar Theatre, one of the Cobian chain, in Caguas, Puerto Rico. Mr. Aguayo, who is visiting the United States for a few weeks, reported that 12,000 American soldiers and 6,000 Puerto Ricans are stationed on the island. As a result, he declared, "Unemployment has greatly diminished and people have more money to spend for the theatre."

The Alcazar, seating 1,000, is one of four theatres in Caguas, a town whose 20,000 inhabitants subsist on tobacco and sugar industries of the island. Admission prices for the theatre range from 15 to 20 cents during the week and 20 to 30 cents on Sundays.

Mr. Aguayo said that Deanna Durbin continues to be the great favorite, with Hedy Lamar and Bette Davis next. Robert Taylor and Clark Gable head the list of actors favored by the natives, who, he said, like "all American films shown," with preferences for musicals, comedies and extravaganzas.

U. S. Reports on Films in Islands

The war in Europe has had little effect on the motion picture market in El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, and St. Lucia, British West Indies, according to the Department of Commerce.

Although there is no film production in El Salvador, about 400 to 450 feature films are required annually to supply the 33 theatres of the country. The United States supplies 80 per cent of the film for exhibition, Mexico 10 per cent, Argentina eight per cent and France and Great Britain one per cent each. All the theatres are wired for sound and about 30 showings are given a week at each house.

The average admission price is 25 cents. Local audiences prefer musical comedies, with comedies and adventure pictures next in popularity.

In Honduras about 350 feature prints annually are required to fulfill the demands of the motion picture market. During the 1940 period 281 were imported and of these 240 were American productions. A total of 25 were Mexican, France supplied 14, and Cuba exhibited two.

The only important restriction in effect concerning imported motion pictures is an executive order issued in October, 1939, according to which films over two years old will not be passed by the local censors. Historical films, however, are exempt from this restriction.

There are 29 theatres in Honduras, all wired for sound, with a seating capacity of 15,150.

Trade opinions in Nicaragua vary as to the number of feature films required yearly to supply the market, the figures ranging from 64 to 150. Films produced in the United States are meeting relatively little competition, since the European war has reduced the volume of British and French films available to Nicaraguan exhibitors, and the German film, once the most serious competitor, is no longer in a strong position. Mexican films, popular especially because of the Spanish dialogue, are not often shown. Films of United States origin exhibited in Nicaraguan theatres are estimated to be about 95 per cent of total shown. There is no domestic production of films.

There are 29 theatres in Nicaragua with an approximate seating capacity of 24,500 with admission prices ranging from three cents to 15 cents. The film generally popular in the United States are liked by the local audiences, which are also conscious of film-star names. In the smaller theatres attended by the low-income group, western and comedy productions are popular.

In St. Lucia, British West Indies, approximately 208 feature films are required annually to supply the motion picture market. All films shown are from the United States with the exception of a few British newsreels. No films are produced locally.

There is only one motion picture theatre in St. Lucia, equipped with two American-made sound projectors, and has a total seating capacity of 768. Shows are held twice weekly on Sunday matinee and Sunday evening. Weekly attendance is estimated at about 200. Action and musical productions are most popular with the audiences.

"Sergeant York", New Buck Film Open in N. Y.

Special showmanship efforts in the film industry concentrated this week upon Warner Brothers' "Sergeant York," which opened at New York's Astor Theatre Wednesday evening, and RKO's "Frank Buck's Jungle Cavalcade," which opened at the Palace Theatre, same city, Thursday evening.

Sergeant York himself, World War hero who captured 132 German soldiers singlehandedly, arrived in New York Tuesday for attendance at the opening of the picture dealing with his exploits and as an integral part of the celebrations attendant to the opening.

He was met Tuesday morning at the Pennsylvania station, by officers of the 82nd Division veterans' organization, and by the Veterans of Foreign Wars representatives. These escorted him, in a cross-town parade, to the 82nd Division's clubrooms, 26 East 39th Street, where followed a brief formal reception. There then ensued a reception at the Summer City Hall, on the grounds of the defunct New York World's Fair, by New York City Mayor Fiorello Henry LaGuardia; and on Tuesday evening, a guest appearance on the "We, the People" radio program over local radio station WABC and the Columbia Broadcasting System network. Wednesday noon he spoke at a luncheon of the Tennessee Society, at the New York Bankers' Club.

Other Notables Attend

Governor Prentice Cooper, of Tennessee, was to be among the notables at the premiere. So was Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson.

Jules Brulatour, General Hugh Drum and staff, General Lewis B. Hershey, Grace Moore, Joan Bennett, Mrs. William Randolph Hearst and William Randolph Hearst, Jr., William T. Dewart, Constance Collier, Ralph Ingersoll, Henry Luce, Billy Rose, Thomas Beck, Representative Carol Reese of Sergeant York's Congressional district, General Frank T. Hines, General Louis W. Stotesbury and Borough President George U. Harvey of Queens were to attend.

Charles Einfeld, director of advertising and publicity for Warners, in the East especially for the premiere arrangements, made elaborate tie-ups with numerous New York City area patriotic organizations. There was, as instance, to be a special patriotic ceremony in Duffy Square before the premiere.

The film, produced for Warners by Hal B. Wallis and Jesse Lasky, is going to be the first made into a stage play, Warners announced last week, disclosing plans of Robert Porterfield, who appears in the picture supporting Gary Cooper, its star. Mr. Porterfield, a director of the Barter Theatre, Abingdon, Virginia, will convert the film into a play for the theatre.

Scenes from three of Frank Buck's pictures have been compiled and edited by RKO Radio for release under the title "Frank Buck's Jungle Cavalcade." The films from which the scenes were culled are "Bring 'Em Back Alive," released July, 1932; "Wild Cargo," April, 1934, and "Fang and Claw," December, 1935. "Jungle Cavalcade" opened Thursday at the RKO Palace in New York.

MGM's British-made I. Goldsmith production, "The Stars Look Down," will have a special pre-release engagement at New York's Criterion, it was said. National release is July 18th.

BRITISH EXHIBITORS PRESS PLANS FOR JOINT COUNCIL FOR INDUSTRY

CEA Past President Proposes War Emergency Group to Act on All Trade Interests Involving Government Action

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

The urgency of the industry situation, coupled with the ineffectiveness of sectional dealings between branches of the trade and the Government, have given rise recently to a new demand for a united trade front. This, which reflects the views of leaders in all sections, has materialized in a concrete proposal, by CEA-Ex-President Councillor H. P. E. Mears, for the setting up of a joint trade council.

Mr. Mears has proposed the formation of a Cinematograph Industry War Emergency Council, to act on behalf of the industry on all matters brining it into contact with the Government. The Council, it is suggested, should represent the CEA, for the exhibitors, the KRS, for the distributors, the Producers' Group, and the two labour unions—the NATKE and the ACT.

Blessing of KRS

The idea has already been considered informally by the distributors, whose President, Sam Smith, has given it a virtual, if personal, blessing by saying that whenever any industry problem has arisen the KRS has always been ready to consider proposals for joint deputations.

Support is known likewise to exist in producer circles and it is understood that any formal proposal would be considered by the Producers Association.

There is no reason why the labour unions, realizing the weight of corporate action, should disapprove.

The idea behind Mr. Mears's proposal is that the Cinematograph Industry War Emergency Council should consist of representatives of all sections of the industry. Each society, such as those listed, would elect delegates to sit permanently, with deputies to function when necessary. Each member would represent the views of his association and its interests. All would subordinate sectional interests to the policy agreed upon by the Industry Council.

Exemption Fight Cited

The recent confusion over the reservation of personnel in the industry has been the most potent argument in favour of a joint trade front. The Ministry of Labour Manpower Panel, which was understood at first to cover the manpower problems of the industry, proved upon its operations to be concerned only with the production industry, and not even all sections of that. "Technicians," for instance, did not include the artists upon whose existence the films depend. Exhibitors were compelled, therefore, to make their own approaches to the Ministry of Labour for the reservation of those projectionists who would be necessary if any films made were to be shown. Renters have in turn made their individual approaches for the grading of their work as essential. It is contended that the Government should have considered the industry problem as an industry problem, contended also that the trade itself should have tackled it with a front representing all sections of the industry. It is believed that much more would have been achieved if the Government had not been presented with a confusion of viewpoints.

The question of Quota legislation is probably no less an argument in favour of the Council idea. It has, of course, been the fact that on the question of legislation exhibitors, distributors, producers and technicians have all gone to the Government with a different point of view, asking different degrees and patterns of legislation.

A Council, such as proposed, would be able to handle all these problems, more definitely so in a time of emergency like the present, on a solid trade basis, considering the welfare of the industry as a whole rather than that of any particular section. Each section would, of course, be safeguarded by its representation on the Council.

Sectionalism, Jealousies Feared

How far the proposal will get, beyond consideration by various bodies, it is too early as yet to forecast. Pessimists believe that the established sectionalism and parochialism of the industry, the jealousies and suspicions which have hitherto marked it in practically all its operations, may stand in the way of materialization. On the other hand, the urgency of the present situation may bring about a realistic attitude.

Mr. Mears, who has been among the most active trade personalities, during his last year of office, in negotiating industry problems with Whitehall, believes that the Government looks upon the trade as one of the three most important industries associated with the war effort. He believes, too, that the Government, faced with a united trade viewpoint, representing a corporate trade policy, would grant it more than it can do with a confusion of viewpoints and contradictions presented to it.

"All through the war," he says, "up to the present our negotiations with the Government, over the various emergency problems and legislation, have taught us a bitter lesson—the lack of a united trade front. This Council should nominate its negotiating committee who could contact Whitehall on all matters appertaining to the industry—labour matters, reservations, taxation, safety precautions, the Cinematograph Act, the Films Act, etcetera. Its object would be to propagate a united trade policy, to protect the industry's welfare, to state its case in the press and elsewhere, and be in fact an Industry War Cabinet.

"Over the very question of labour reservations," Mr. Mears pointed out, "the Ministers and officials are asked to meet half a dozen different deputations, when one Council, such as I suggest, could meet and formulate a policy which would cover the interests of the whole trade.

"On the grounds of its contribution to the Exchequer, on those of its maintenance of public morale, it is essential that the industry be kept going," he suggests. "Unless united action be taken hundreds of cinemas will be closed before the year is out."

Plea for Unity

It is the basis of the plea that all in the industry will sink or swim together. Each section depends upon the others—producers, distributors, exhibitors and labour. "Yet," says Mr. Mears, "nowhere do we see a complete industry point of view on all the problems. Nowhere is there a united mouthpiece for its expression. We have a united Government, political parties have shelved their differences, labour and capital are working together for the good of the country. Surely what can be done in a Government, where there are so many vary-interests, can be achieved in an industry such as ours."

It is felt that the formation of such a Council would help to avert the imposition on the industry of a Films Commission, such as has been threatened by the Government, either clandestinely or through the Films Council. It would have a protective as well as a creative purpose.

Nominations Up

A flavour of ginger, incidentally, has crept into the industry's consideration of new personnel for the Films Council. Nominations are, at the moment of writing, being considered for the next three years' service on the Council; some have yet to come in. In general the Councill will remain, as regards its personnel, greatly unchanged. Sam Eckman, Jr., Metro chief in this country, has been nominated to take the place of David E. Griffiths, who has lately become inactive; the acceptance of Mr. Eckman's name would provide direct representation for the distributors through an American mouthpiece. To supplant Theo Fligelstone, exhibitor representative recently absorbed into the ranks of the Army, the Board of Trade has asked CEA to nominate an exhibitor representing the South of England. The names of Councillor Mears, who has interests in Bournemouth, Southampton and Portsmouth, and Randolph Richards, of the Sussex Branch, and Tommy France, North Country exhibitor operating through the London Branch, have been put forward.

"Futility" of Council Attacked

New nominees and old would seem determined, if they are elected to the Council, to accelerate that body's activities during its forthcoming three years of service. Recent meetings of the Films Council have been noted for the direct speaking by the trade spokesmen and their criticism of the innocuous, if not indeed futile, nature of much of that body's proceedings.

The Council is an advisory body, but its advice has very often been ignored. There is a new note of seriousness in trade members, who seem bent upon assuring that any advice they tender be acted upon, with the alternative that they hand in their resignations.

The existence of a Cinematograph Industry War Emergency Council would not in the slightest interfere with the operations of the Films Council. It would possibly help to crystallize that body's activities.

CEA TO DISCUSS PLAN FOR COUNCIL

The proposal for a British film industry emergency council will be discussed at the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association general council meeting this month. The Manchester group has adopted a resolution urging that the CEA act on the proposal and approach the Kinematograph Renters Society and others for a discussion of its formation. Other local groups are believed certain to support the move.

FILMS RATED HIGH AS AUXILIARY WEAPON IN BRITISH WAR ARMORY

Army Making Intensive Use of Pictures for Instruction and Entertainment; Services Now Set Up Own Production Units

by AUBREY FLANAGAN

Not least valuable and by no means despised weapon used by Britain's fighting forces in waging the Battle of Britain is the motion picture. Not least determined in its wielding of this weapon is the British War Office. A survey taken recently of past and present achievement in this sphere, coupled with a vista of work contemplated, indicates that the Army is far ahead of either the Royal Navy or the Royal Air Force in its use of the screen.

Motion pictures are, of course, used by the Navy for both entertainment and instruction. Director Pen Tennyson, erstwhile of Ealing Studios, has for some months been concentrating on the creation and expansion of a Royal Naval Film Unit from a studio on England's South Coast, where already some instructional films have been produced under his direct personal aegis. Through the trade-assisted Royal Naval Film Corporation, created before the War, and at the head of which is Lord Louis Mountbatten, entertainment films from Wardour Street are shown in British warships and naval stations from the Arctic Circle and Iceland to the Southernmost reaches of the Pacific, in Naval barracks in Britain, even in the frequently "sunk" "Ark Royal" itself. Behindhand, through no lack of desire or effort on the part of R.A.F. interests, is the flying arm which, through opposition from civil sources, has so far failed to create a self-contained production unit.

Progress Slow

The War office itself, despite its definite achievement, has found its path thorny, on its own admission failed to make the progress it would like, and at which it has aimed. Unlike the industry, it is ill equipped with machines, projectors, generators, etcetera, has been unable to use the films it would like and which are here for the asking. Like the industry, it is already meeting considerable snags over manpower, finding it hard to muster the personnel necessary to operate its grandiose schemes. With army Council and motion picture industry tugging, each in a different direction, at the bodies of technicians of military age, Ernest Bevin's dilemma over reservations of labour is not difficult to appreciate.

So uneasy has been the task of the War Office's film brasshats that a complete overhaul and reorganization of the entire situation is being undertaken, with the aim of coordinating the varied activities of the Army's film unit, and easing the machinery designed to use the motion picture to instruct, educate and entertain the man in battledress.

That something has nevertheless been achieved is clear from a report issued by the War Office on the use of films in the Army.

The aim of the War Office has been to use the motion picture for three distinct purposes: to instruct the troops in military and other matters, to educate them on a general scale, and to provide recreative entertainment. Apart from the creation of a production unit making pictures for the first purpose, it has been the aim all along to use the same projectors and mobile units for all three objectives.

It will be remembered that some time ago the trade was invited to assist in providing films for the last named purpose. The story of cross purposes, rebuffs and ultimate readjustments has been told already and need not be repeated here. With the intervention of Sir John Anderson, Lord Privy Seal, and approach to the trade through the proper channels, the industry decided to lend its hand and assist the Army Council in its aims. Originally aimed at was the establishment of a mobile film organization with 400 projectors. Of these 150 would be standard size and 150 portable sound projectors. The Army already had 100 16 mm sound projectors in use. These projectors equipped with, in some cases, their own generators would cover the entire field of the Army's various Commands, giving instructional, educative and recreational film shows.

Instruction Films Made

As already recorded, much of this has been done. The production unit, under Major Macdonald, has put into production over 60 short films, and the instruction of the troops by the screen is proceeding on a quite creditable scale. The films cover a wide ground, not only deal with, for instance, use of machine guns and paratroop warfare, but also on the behaviour of the military on farm lands and over fields of growing crops. Civilian producers and directors and trade studios have been used for the purpose. Some of the films are of distinctly high technical quality. The Army has not yet enough technical personnel to operate a self contained production unit with all its men in khaki. Over all this the last word is held by military experts, mainly Army officers themselves.

Difficulties in the supply both of equipment and personnel, however, have placed great difficulties in the path of the exhibition branch of the Army's activities. The Army Council has found difficulty in securing technicians from the civil walks of life and even from the ranks of the Army itself. In the industry itself shortage of technicians called up to the Forces have prevented the production of the necessary equipment to operate the scheme successfully. Men are being trained within the Ranks, mainly for operating the equipment already in service. On the War Office's own admission: "Progress has been made, but it will be some time before the full results are achieved."

Particularly slow has been the supply of 35 mm mobile cinemas and, over and above its own scheme, the War Office has had to hire 50 mobile 16 mm projectors with civilian operators. These are being replaced as the standard machines come to hand.

Already over 2,000 performances of purely entertainment films have been given in one month. Up to date 150 full programmes have been supplied by the industry. Innumerable educational programmes have been obtained from film libraries. The Ministry of Information has helped to supply pictures.

With half a million pounds behind them for the purpose of equipment and production of films the Army Council are confident that they can reach their objective in due course.

Meanwhile a joint War Office and trade committee, with honorary trade advisers posted to each of the Army Commands, is functioning and providing the invaluable liaison between the civil and Service interests. The Army has nothing but praise and gratitude for the help it has been afforded by the industry.

Organization Overhauled

Now, with the assistance of a Government expert, Mr. Hughes Roberts, the Government's Cinematograph Adviser, and Captain Paul Kimberly, an industry expert, the whole organization is being revised and overhauled so that every aspect of cinematography, covering production, distribution, personnel, maintenance of films and equipment, can be kept under one parental head. Cinema and entertainment officers have been posted to the headquarters of all the military Commands and areas, and their duties include the supervision, distributing and routing of the various mobile and portable film units either already supplied, or in prospect. Particular attention is to be paid to small detachments and isolated sites. In many of these generators will be provided to give the necessary power to drive the equipment.

Each Army Command is to have its own film library of training and educational films, with probably a reserve of entertainment pictures supplied by the industry, to be loaned out to the various positions in turn. Each Command will have its own staff for maintaining and operating the equipment, and also have its own projectors and machines.

Much depends on the outcome of the present struggle between the Services and the industry for the technicians of military age.

PHILADELPHIA FILM ROW MUST MOVE

Philadelphia's film row on Vine Street will soon pass out of existence. The Pennsylvania State Legislature has approved a $50,000,000 project providing for the widening of Vine Street as an approach to the Delaware River bridge. As a result, all the buildings on the south side of the street will be torn down to make way for the approach. Such splitting of the film row will necessitate a search for new quarters on the part of Columbia Pictures, Paramount, United Artists, Republic, The Hollywood and Capitol independent exchanges, Horlacher's film delivery service, and a number of theatre equipment, premium and printing concerns. Most of the properties are rented. However, Columbia erected a new exchange building two years ago.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Brown Study

While shooting continues on the latest of the Deanna Durbin pictures, "Almost An Angel," the pre-scoring has been finished, and Universal sound chief Bernard Brown is now sitting in as consultant on the daily rushes.

This is no new assignment, for Mr. Brown has worked with all the Durbin films made on the Universal lot. With the studio for five years, he joined it to take charge of music recording and re-recording, which, in the parlance of the trade, is "dubbing." After the success of "100 Men and a Girl," which won the 1937 Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences award for best music scoring, he became head of the sound department, and since then has supervised the mixing of all sound, handled the music recording and dubbing, checked the "dailies" and, additionally, run the department as a unit of the production whole.

In 1939, Mr. Brown's work received further tribute in the form of another "Oscar," this time for the best recording of the year, that of "When Tomorrow Comes," which co-starred Irene Dunne and Charles Boyer.

Coming to Hollywood with a musical career in mind, the young man graduated from the Los Angeles Conservatory of Music and Arts in 1916, after completing the five-year course in three. As first violin, he then played in the orchestra of the Los Angeles Philharmonic Auditorium, and at the same time scored such films as "Birth of a Nation" for theatre orchestras. Joining Warners in 1920 in charge of music, he became sound technician as well as musician as the advent of sound began to loom on the film horizon.

Just after leaving Warners for Universal, Mr. Brown married Mildred Brown O'Brien, thus doubling the strength of the family name. Mrs. Brown was also not without knowledge of the industry, having worked as a negative cutter at Warners.

Today, pointing out the increased importance of original screen music in the years since the advent of sound, Mr. Brown feels that the motion picture has never had greater opportunity for presenting fine music finely recorded. Bridging the gap between the art of music and the science of sound as he does, in the opinion of his fellow craftsmen from Universal City to Culver City, he should be knowing.

THEY KEEP ON BUYING

Seven new story properties were acquired by Hollywood during the last fortnight, accounted for by five studios.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Paramount each bought two. The former bought a pair of originals: "That Was No Lady" by Paul Jarrico and Richard Collins, and "Delicate Affair" by Frederick Kohner, while Paramount acquired "Of Fire by Night", Thelma Strabel magazine serial, and a series of Borden Chase short stories entitled "Dr. Broadway".

"The Singing and the Gold", an original by Howard Koch and Anne Froelick, was bought by Samuel Goldwyn as a Gary Cooper vehicle, and Twentieth Century-Fox acquired "A House at Peace", Charles Morgan novel, for Henry Fonda.

K.-B. Productions (the Kozinsky Brothers) bought "A Million Spies", original by George Bricker, which Phil Rosen will direct.

Up Once More

The production boom moved up a few more notches this week, as 15 pictures were completed, 12 started and 44 shooting, compared to seven, 10 and 47 in the same stages last week.

Indications of continued high activity were to be found, too, in the 37 pictures being prepared and 89 edited, respectively, three and five more than last week.

HOLLYWOOD CONTRIBUTES MILLION DOLLARS WORTH OF STARS FOR ARMY

Skouras Circuit and ITOA of New York Planning USO Fund; Citizen's Committee Having Difficulty Getting Star Names

Hollywood is in the forefront of large-scale organization of entertainment programs for the maintenance of citizen and army morale during the national emergency. Producers, stars, directors, writers and technical crews are at work wherever committees have been formed for the purpose of entertaining soldiers in many of the 147 army camps throughout the country.

Last Sunday's gala show at the Hollywood Bowl, at which more than 15,000 people paid to see and hear stars and comedians, was the opening gun of the West Coast campaign of the United Service Organization, which is raising funds for maintenance of clubhouses and recreational facilities for service men and defense industry workers.

Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Brothers, and Dr. A. H. Giannini, chairman of the Southern California division of USO, took charge of activities for the event. Mr. Warner is credited with the idea for the show, and was largely responsible for coralling the big-name stars who appeared. He conferred with Thomas E. Dewey, USO national chairman, in New York last week, in completing plans for the star-studded program. Mr. Warner also entertained a group of service men from Fort Ord on his estate, prior to the evening show.

Top Stars Appear

Top-ranking stars whose appearance contributed included: Edward Arnold, Nelson Eddy, George Burns and Gracie Allen, Tyrone Power, Lionel and John Barrymore, Rudy Vallee, Jane Withers, Loretta Young, Bette Davis, Edward G. Robinson, Irene Dunn, Rosalind Russell, Cary Grant, Charles Boyer, Orson Welles, Jackie Cooper and Dick Powell.

During the hour and a half broadcast portion of the program, over a CBS national hookup, it was announced that Warner Brothers' star, Edward G. Robinson contributed $100,000 to USO. At the close of the show, Mr. Dewey announced that $7,076,534 of the $10,765,000 mark for the drive, already had been raised, with the campaign only slightly more than a week past its half-way mark.

In New York, USO headquarters reported that Spyros Skouras and Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association, are considering plans to launch a direct collection of funds from their theatre audiences on behalf of the USO drive. Newsreel companies, including Paramount, MGM, RKO, Universal, Pathe and Fox, were reported "most cooperative" in giving campaign activities prominent spots in their releases. Claude Collins, director of motion picture publicity for the campaign, revealed that Truman H. Talley, vice president in charge of production for Movietone, Inc., ribboned "Help the USO," over the main title of the newsreel in four issues.

"The March of Time" offered to produce and distribute a one-reeler for the USO drive, but the committee could not obtain $5,000 to defray expenses of 200 prints.

Further indication of Hollywood's active part in the interest of national unity was shown last Wednesday night, in the first of a series of 13-week broadcasts of the program, "Millions for Defense," inaugurated by the Treasury Department to aid sale of its defense savings bonds and stamps.

Howard Dietz, MGM's advertising and publicity director, was appointed by Secretary of the Treasury, Henry W. Morgenthau, Jr., to be the chairman and co-ordinator of the programs, to be aired over CBS, national hookup, on the Texas Company hour.

Fred Allen, Texaco's star, was master of ceremonies for the show which included performances by Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, John Charles Thomas, Charles Laughton and the appearance of "Information Please," the "stump-the-experts" panel.

Mr. Dietz has secured the following stars for additional programs during the series: Grace Moore, Bob Hope, Bing Crosby, Dorothy Lamour, George Burns, Gracie Allen, Lily Pons, Al Jolson, Abbot and Costello, Deanna Durbin, Bette Davis, Spencer Tracy, Clark Gable, Claudette Colbert, Carole Lombard, Cary Grant, James Cagney, Humphrey Bogart, Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Nelson Eddy, Jeanette MacDonald and Carmen Miranda.

Contract Restrictions Waived

Most of the motion picture companies have waived contract-restrictions for their stars who cannot appear on the radio for the duration of the series. Mr. Dietz has received cooperation of the Screen Actors Guild, Screen Writers Guild and the Association of Motion Picture Producers in coralling talent for the programs. All the stars are contributing their services, but musicians and routine performers will be paid on the AFM and AFRA scale.

Meanwhile, in New York Vinton Freedley, theatrical producer and chairman of the Citizens Committee for the Army and Navy, Inc., is having difficulty rounding up big-name performers to tour army camps in the circuit shows which his committee launched a month ago.

The physical job of routing entertainment groups to 147 army camps and naval bases scattered throughout the country was gargantuan, for the committee had to get their actors to sandy pineland in Maryland, over rocky pastures of a Vermont post, on the beach of a California naval base or the deck of a training ship in harbor anywhere along the Pacific or Atlantic coasts.

Mr. Freedley, who worked as a volunteer assistant to the Commission Representative in Charge of Entertainment during the last World War, believes the tastes of service men of this generation are quite different. "The boys don't like the same kind of show today," he said. "Most of them know about entertainment through the radio. Many of them have never seen an actor in their lives. They want a show like a radio entertainment, and that's what we've tried to give them."

Hazen Names USO Committee

Motion picture executives who will serve as members of the New York Motion Picture Committee of the United States Organization were announced last Monday by Joseph Hazen, of Warner Brothers, who is chairman of the committee. They are: Austin C. Keough, Paramount; Richard C. Patterson, RKO; W. C. Michel, Twentieth Century-Fox; Harry Buckley, United Artists; Matthew Fox, Universal; Oscar A. Doob, Loew's; Abe Schneider, Columbia. Allied industry committee members are: B. S. Moss, chairman, Si Fabian, George Skouras, Herman Robbins, Harry Brandt and Samuel Rinzler.

The committe is planning a ten-day drive to raise funds for the USO, to be launched next Monday, in the motion picture and allied industries. In announcing plans for this drive, Mr. Hazen said: "As in all other worthy movements, the motion picture and allied groups in New York City will do their share in this case. The work to be done by the USO is of vital importance. This organization has undertaken, nationally, to provide proper recreation and environment for the men in service. The motion picture industry has sent hundreds of its young men into the various services. More hundreds will be going. I am sure," he said, "that we all want to share in this necessary support to the boys."

Mr. Hazen declared that "all of the producing companies, theatre circuits and others have already expressed eagerness to help raise funds for the USO.

Majors and Independents Cutting Admission Prices for Service Men

Following scattered action taken by some independent motion picture theatres to reduce admission prices for service men, some half dozen circuits have now announced that they, too, would lower prices.

Warner Theatres on July 7th will inaugurate reduced prices for men in the service, Joseph Bernhard, the circuit's general manager, announced last Thursday.

At the same time it was announced by Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, Inc., the Loew theatres throughout the country also would offer military forces reduced prices on all admission tickets.

RKO has a similar plan under consideration, it was said by Charles M. Koerner, general manager of the company's theatres, and the plan, when completed, will affect all RKO theatres from coast to coast. Details are forthcoming.

Cut rates for men in uniform have been inaugurated at all Fox West Coast theatres, with many others following suit, while in Portland, Ore., the Hamrick-Evergreen circuit has also put into effect a like policy.

The 21 theatres owned by the Golden State circuit in San Francisco have lowered their admission price for men in uniform to the level of junior admissions—10 cents at matinees and 20 cents at night.

MGM STARTS RINGING DOORBELLS, URGES EXHIBITORS DO LIKEWISE

Richey Urges Exhibitors to Press Institutional Selling Campaigns; Attacks Public Discussion of Industry Ills

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's own prescription to cure box-office doldrums—a survey of public tastes, conducted through newspapers by itself, and advice to exhibitors to again sell the theatre as an institution—was delivered by Henderson M. Richey, the company's director of exhibitor relations, to the annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina, at Myrtle Beach, S. C., Sunday through Tuesday.

Two special representatives from M-G-M started from Hollywood Monday, Mr. Richey said, to "first call on the 90 leading newspapers . . . and later on other small publications, in an effort to find out whether the promotional material as coming from the studio is what the papers want and can use, and in an attempt to find out through them what they feel the public wants."

Door-to-Door Campaign

M-G-M also is insisting, Mr. Richey added, that "every branch manager become associated with a luncheon club, and our office personnel with other civic clubs, in order that, when in public groups motion pictures are talked about, they (these persons) give a constructive picture of a great business." It's virtually a door-to-door-bell ringing project.

Mr. Richey advised the Carolina theatre owners to stop talking publicly about poor business, and other industry problems. Said he: "Nothing succeeds like success. The public loves winners. The public, as you well know, likes to follow the mob. Well, the mob is headed back to the movies; and let's not trip them with a slur or a wise crack that may destroy their original good intention."

Mr. Richey continued:

"In order that this be accomplished I am convinced we must stop wringing our hands and start ringing door bells; quit shouting business is bad and remember that we are still getting three-quarters of the amusement dollar; throw away our charts and graphs of whether business has gone up or down and turn our attention to the buying of new ropes to keep the standing crowd in line; quit criticizing our business in the public but reserve for our inner counsels that bawling out we may find it necessary to give each other; quit referring to our business as a racket; drop the word "lousy" from our vocabulary; applaud the good and bite our lips at the bad; and start telling the whole cockeyed world that motion pictures are ready for the job of entertaining a public who is sick of the black headlines—and if I am not mistaken a period of that kind of thought will result in the most important "cease and desist" order ever adopted in this business—a permanent "cease and desist" against cutting each other's throats and a united industry against anyone who tried it."

Mr. Richey demanded selling of the theatre as an especially good entertainment medium, feeling, he said, that "the time has come . . . that the mere keeping of a theatre clean, with good projection, comfortable seats, a daily ad in the paper, and trailers on the screen, is not enough to jar the public back to a realization that for a dime an hour they can see productions even a millionaire couldn't afford more than a couple of times a year, were it not for the wonder of modern production and distribution."

Mr. Richey decried "rumors" that M-G-M's new sales policy meant that it would sell every picture on percentage. He said: "Contrary to rumors . . . our policy will be even more flexible than in the past. Our plan is that of local selling on a scale never before attempted.

"For several months, members of our field staff of district and branch managers together with home office executives have visited all territories, and made a careful study of every theatre and its individual problems. Such a gigantic analysis has never been attempted before. Based on these findings—determined on playing experience—we propose to offer pictures on a basis that will take into consideration all the current requirements and conditions of each individual situation. We have, we believe, evolved an advanced method of merchandising that is most equitable."

Hollywood Previews Hit

The convention on Monday resolved against Hollywood previews, a practice attacked at the national convention of the MPTOA in Los Angeles several weeks ago. The Carolina unit is the first of the MPTOA to hold a meeting since that convention.

Other resolutions thanked president C. H. Arrongton for his work; urged exhibitors to join the national defense effort of the film industry; condemned importation and distribution of Axis films; assailed showings of so-called "sex" pictures on double feature programs.

Edward Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA, was a chief speaker, along with Mr. Richey, and again attacked Hollywood previews, as he did at the Los Angeles meeting. Mr. Kuykendall said the Los Angeles meeting was a success because 7,000 theatres in 26 states were represented. He advocated more effort by exhibitors to obtain sympathetic understanding of industry problems from local social and women's groups.

He said that the proposed taxes coming from Washington were severe, but expected, and that "in this time of war, we might as well prepare ourselves for further tax shocks." Mr. Kuykendall called double features a menace to the whole industry, stating the time was gone when people merely wanted to see a quantity of pictures.

Other speakers were R. B. Wilby, of Atlanta; and J. Noble Braden, executive secretary of the American Arbitration Association.

About 300 attended.

HERMAN A. BLUM HONORED BY ALLIED

Herman A. Blum, Baltimore exhibitor, who is retiring from the theatre field, has been made an honorary national councillor of Allied States Association in recognition for his "untiring efforts in behalf of the organization and of the independent exhibitors in general," it was announced by Abram F. Myers, board chairman of the organization.

Mr. Blum has also been made a life member of the MPTO of Maryland, Inc., and was given a testimonial dinner by that organization Monday night which was attended by Mr. Myers.

He will be succeeded on the national board by Meyer Leventhal as representative of Maryland, a position which Mr. Blum has held since the formation of the association.

PCCITO Adopts "Code Of Honor" for All

The "code of honor" of the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners, which several weeks ago in Los Angeles held a joint meeting with the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, contains the following provisions:

Elimination of unfair clearance; preparation of a new brief standard exhibition contract; exhibitors' right to exclude any offensive feature; a ban on refusal by distributors to allow pictures on some run, to be designated by them in any situation, provided reputable exhibitor can satisfy reasonable exhibition standards, and unless granting of a run on any terms to complaining exhibitor will prejudice distributor's local business.

The Independent Theatre Owners of Southern California elected the following to the directors' board: Hugh Bruen, Jenne Dodge, Al Galston, R. D. Whitson, Ned Calvi, Murray Hawkins, and Max Sinifit. They also appointed three new committees for the PCCITO's resolutions and "code of honor."

Connecticut Allied Has Decree Committee

The Connecticut Allied has appointed a secret committee to protect rights of exhibitors under the consent decree. It will report decree violations to the unit's attorney, for investigation and action.

The Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana had their largest summer convention at the recent three-day outing at Pokagon State Park when more than 100 persons attended, representing more than 200 theatres in the Hoosier state.

Col. H. A. Cole, president of National Allied, was a guest. Sam W. Neall of Kokomo won the golf tournament and Jack Rose of Chicago was runner-up. Mrs. Roy Kalver of Decatur won the women's contract bridge event and Mrs. E. K. Crouch of Fairmount captured the auction bridge leadership.

Loew's Northeastern Changes

Charles E. Kurtzman, Loew's northeastern division manager, has announced a series of promotions and transfers of junior executives. They are: Vaughn O'Neil of Loew's State in Providence, R. I., went to Pittsburgh, Pa., to become assistant manager of Loew's Penn. James E. Tibbets, assistant at Loew's State in Boston replaced Mr. O'Neill and Mr. Tibbetts' place was taken by Emil Weretelnyk, formerly senior treasurer of Loew's Orpheum in Boston. Tom Foley was elevated from junior to senior treasurer at the Orpheum; Fred Linn, State chief of staff, succeeds Mr. Foley; Arthur White moves up from doorman at the State to Mr. Linn's former position. Harold Mortin, chief of service at the State in Providence, became student assistant manager.

TELEVISION GOES COMMERCIAL, BUT WITH ONLY ONE COMMERCIAL UNIT

NBC Station in New York Only Authorized Broadcaster under FCC Rules; CBS License Held Up until Sets Are Adjusted

Commercial television, though probably not on any profit basis, immediately made its formal debut on Tuesday afternoon at New York. July 1st was the date on which the Federal Communications Commission authorized "duly qualified" broadcasters to climax years of experiment and start visual broadcasting for keeps.

Although the FCC in a press release heralded "the opening gun of visual broadcast service on a full-fledged commercial basis" actually, on Tuesday, only one station, WNBT, operated by the National Broadcasting Company in New York, held a commercial license permitting it to broadcast sponsored programs. Twenty-one other stations, according to the FCC release, were set to begin commercial television anon: four "in the near future;" the remainder "as soon as possible."

Columbia Broadcasting Company, beset by hard luck, with changed channel and technical delays by the FCC, was authorized to start program tests on July 1st. These are designed to aid set manufacturers who must adjust all of the 4,000 odd receivers in the New York area to cover Columbia's new Channel 2. The station will offer news, vaudeville, children's and other studio programs during July and expects to be ready to start competing with NBC for sponsored programs by August 1st.

Others On Experimentally

Three other stations, W6XAO, Don Lee System in Los Angeles; W9XZV, Zenith at Chicago; and W3XE, Philco at Philadelphia continue transmitting scheduled test programs pending a shift to commercial operation at "the earliest possible date." DuMont's New York station, W2XWV, waiting equipment installation expected to be on the air commercially by mid-July. Other holders of experimental permits expect to go commercial when transmitters are completed and programs arranged.

Thirteen of the stations which have indicated they would go commercial within a few months include: W2XB, General Electric Company, Albany; W9XBK, Balaban & Katz Corporation, Chicago; W9XCB, Columbia Broadcasting System, Chicago; W8XCT, Crosley Corporation, Cincinnati; W6XEA, Earl C. Anthony, Los Angeles; W6XHH, Hughes Productions, Los Angeles; W6XYZ, Television Productions, Inc., Los Angeles; W9XMJ, The Journal Company, Milwaukee; W2XBB, Bamberger Broadcasting Service, New York; W2XMT, Metropolitan Television, New York; W3XAU, WCAU Broadcasting Company, Philadelphia; W6XDL, Don Lee Broadcasting System, San Francisco, and W6XHT, Hughes Productions, San Francisco.

Construction is also underway on NBC stations at Washington and Philadelphia; a Du Mont station, W3XWT, in Washington, and CBS has applied for a second television license in the New York area on Channel No. 1.

NBC realized its first income from television on Tuesday when four regular broadcast sponsors purchased advertising time on the first day's bill. Sun Oil Company telecast Lowell Thomas in his regular news broadcast. The Bulova Watch Company presented spot announcements of the time during both afternoon and evening periods of the first day under the first long-term television sponsorship contract. Bulova has purchased the spot announcements for a 13 week period. Lever Brothers telecast a version of its radio quiz program, "Uncle Jim's Question Bee," with two film players, Gloria Stuart and Lionel Stander as guest stars and Procter and Gamble, another major NBC account broadcast an edition of regular feature, "Truth or Consequences."

Also on the first day's NBC program were a remote pickup of the Brooklyn Dodgers-Philadelphia baseball game at Ebbets Field in the afternoon, and the first "public service" feature of commercial television, the presentation to Thomas Dewey by Mrs. Winthrop Aldrich of a check for the USO.

Rates Announced

The remainder of the weekly bill, more than filling the minimum of 15 hours ordered by the Government, included coverage of the eastern clay court tennis matches, lectures, spelling bees and several hours of film. The latter included, one feature mystery, "Death from a Distance" made in 1935 by Invincible and featuring Lola Lane and Russell Hopton, presented on Wednesday night, short subjects on Friday, and a lecture by Julian Bryan on Thursday illustrated by travel films taken by him in Russia.

Rates for television time on WNBT were announced by NBC on June 27th, only three days from the start of "commercial" operations. The NBC price card ranged from $60 an hour for morning and afternoon periods (until 6 P.M.) to $120 an hour for hours between 6 and 11 P.M. Saturday afternoon, and time after 11 P.M., is $90 an hour. Spot announcements, cost from $4 to $8 for a maximum of one minute. Additionally sponsors must pay talent costs and rent studio, film, or mobile transmitter facilities.

The NBC card was the first published indication of what television is likely to cost advertisers. Although the audience at present is limited to about 4,000 sets in the New York area the rates, according to advertising men, compared favorably with regular broadcast rates on the NBC New York local outlets. Time there costs from $300 to $800 an hour and spot announcements from $10 to $50 a minute.

Columbia will open its test periods daily at 2:30 and 8 P.M. with news illustrated by maps and charts. The Columbia programs will originate in the studio at the Grand Central Terminal. Tentatively broadcasts include children's hours, dance instruction, and art programs. The latter include studio lectures by artists and the inauguration of an art appreciation series under the direction of the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Francis H. Taylor, director will, introduce the first slides of museum masterpieces.

Television sports coverage will be handled for CBS by Bob Edge, sports writer. Initial sports programs will originate in the studio and will illustrate correct sports technique.

Adjustment of equipment to meet the new standard has already begun in the New York area. The changeover to 525 lines, installation of frequency modulation circuits and the alteration of tuning mechanism to cover CBS's Channel 2 and other wave bands is expected to take 30 days for the 4,000 receivers estimated to be in the New York area.

DuMont To Expand

Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, Inc. this week announced expansion of their plant at Passaic, N. J., and said that it will resume television receiver manufacture at once. Increased labor and material costs are cited as the cause of a ten per cent rise in DuMont prices. DuMont has enlarged its salesrooms at New York.

General Electric Company as yet has not announced plans for servicing its sets. It is reported however that the company will adjust them to new standards. New production has not been reported.

Network television does not enter into initial plans for commercial television. The FCC release however points out that Philadelphia and New York are linked already by coaxial cable and that with the completion of the coaxial installations between Washington and Baltimore and Philadelphia and Baltimore the three principal centers of eastern seaboard television will be linked with the means of network broadcasting. Methods of setting up automatic relay stations, at a distance of approximately 30 miles apart have also been devised.

According to engineers chain television broadcasting is completely feasible from the technical viewpoint. Creation of a large enough audience and sponsorship to bear the cost, and completion of transmitters in scattered cities however, must come firt, they add. The relay system is reported to cost in the neighborhood of $8,000 for each automatic unit. Coaxial cable installation runs as high as $5,000 a mile.

The American Television Society, composed of engineers, program men and executives expressed optimism over the prospects of commercial television at a dinner meeting of the society on June 26th, the eve of sponsored broadcasting. Meeting at the Hotel Astor in New York the group reviewed technical progress to date and heard reports on plans for initial television programs.

ONTARIO SEES INDEPENDENTS GOING, AS CIRCUITS RACE FOR TOP SPOT

Nathanson-Fitzgibbons Race for Theatres Cuts into Ranks of Independents; Lists of Acquisitions Kept Secret by Both

by W. M. GLADISH
in Toronto

There are no more independents! At least that is the way it seems around the cities of Ontario with a stern race in progress for theatre supremacy between J. J. Fitzgibbons of Famous Players and N. L. Nathanson of Odeon Theatres. Every unaffiliated exhibitor has been marching around with a price tag boldly attached to his coat lapel—the price at which he will listen when he hears a whisper that somebody might want his theatre. All the blue prints have been shoved into the pigeonholes marked "For future use" because the Federal ban on theatre construction has halted expansion by erection and has served to complicate matters at the most untimely moment.

Theatres in Toronto, Hamilton, London, Ottawa, Kitchener, Kingston, Belleville, Sudbury, St. Catharine's and elsewhere are being tagged "FP" or "Odeon"—or maybe it is still just a guessing contest because the news has not leaked out as to the circuit destiny of the theatre.

One man intimated to a chain official that an almost-overlooked theatre might be on the market. The man suggested: "I do not want a fortune. I'll be very reasonable—"

"How much do you want?" interrupted the chain representative.

Paramount Acquires Theatres

At this moment of writing, President J. J. Fitzgibbons of Famous Players has revealed his hand to the extent of announcing that the Paramount organization had acquired six theatres in three large cities to raise the total capacity of the circuit by almost 6,000 seats. Then, there was the N. A. Taylor announcement that he had joined forces with Famous Players but would continue to occupy his own office in the operation of undisclosed units in Ontario, perhaps 20 of them. Mr. Taylor has been vice-president of the Independents' association for years and fought for the indies on many occasions, the big battle just before the real war broke out in Europe being over the question of clearance and booking priority. The argument was dropped and the proposed National Clearance Board never did get going because of Hitler. The clearance issue now appears to be dead.

In clarifying his alliance with FPC, Mr. Taylor said, "The attitude of Famous Players Canadian toward smaller, independent competitors will shape itself in a more liberal manner in the future, and as a result independent theatres will be able to obtain benefits for which our Independent Theatres Association has long strived." He explained that no sale or merger would be involved and that his own circuit and the Exhibitors' Booking Association would continue to be operated as in the past.

The Bayview Theatre in the Toronto district, formerly with Hanson Theatres Corporation, probably will be the first house to be taken over by Mr. Taylor. It also is indicated that Twentieth will open the Centre at Chatham, Ont., with Harlan Rankin of Tilbury as manager.

THEATRE LANDMARK DAMAGED BY FIRE

The old Avenue theatre, one of the landmarks in Wildwood, N. J., was damaged by fire recently. The wooden structure, owned by William C. Hunt, has not been used for theatrical purposes since 1910, but has been utilized for storage purposes for the other Hunt enterprises in that district.

This will be a first run house, while the Park, under construction by FPC in Chatham, will be a second run. The Avalon, in Ottawa, recently acquired by Twentieth, will revert to FPC, and other deals are being planned in the new setup.

N. L. Nathanson, on the other hand, has not yet laid down his hand with respect to his new theatre set-up. He has always liked a battle —he thrives on it—and so he just smiles. And when he smiles, you know something is happening. When he walked out of the board room of Famous Players for the last time, N. R. Nathanson declared he had 75 theatres to start with. He has not given a clue as to what or where they are and there have been only disjointed wisps of news from this or that town that Odeon has acquired the Nifty Theatre. There is more than a possibility, however, that Mr. Nathanson now has more than 75 theatres on his list but he is not telling.

Oscar Hanson, H. T. Long, H. C. D. Main, James Kadurka, E. V. Armstrong, Friedman and Long of Edmonton, Paul Nathanson, Clarence Robson and others have been travelling the country as emissaries of N. L. Nathanson for the acquisition of new houses and they have apparently been carrying blank checks.

One definite statement has been made and that is that Regal Films will continue to distribute M-G-M product in Canada but the name of the exchange, headed by Nathanson and with Henry L. Nathanson, his brother, as managing director, has been changed to Regal Film Corporation (1941) Limited. The Nathanson interests include Empire-Universal-Films Limited which handles Universal, Republic and British product across Canada; Esquire Films Limited, specializing in British features; Sovereign Film Distributors Limited, and Sterling Flms Limited. What else, no one knows except the Government.

Holdings Dissolved

Dissolution of a holding company for Regal followed immediately after the resignation of N. L. Nathanson. Announcement has been made that Paramount no longer holds a financial interest in the MGM distributing company, whose first outlet in Toronto is Loew's Theatre. Thomas J. Connors and Charles A. Stern, both MGM sales executives, are vice-president and secretary-treasurer respectively.

Meanwhile reports are circulating that N. L. Nathanson's Odeon circuit is lining up additional theatres throughout Canada as real opposition to FPC which probably will involve 100 houses. This has been accomplished through a partnership deal cemented with Sam Firestone who owns a group of theatres in Toronto, including the Midtown, Esquire, Mayfair and Astor. Announcement of the complete list of houses is expected from Nathanson soon.

Mr. Nathanson was conspicuous by his absence from the deliberations of Paramount Film Service Limited, Canadian representative of Paramount Pictures, and there was a display of strength in the personal appearance of Paramount home office executives at the Toronto sales conference—obviously because the Dominion looms as an important battleground. The trade diplomats are hard at work at present, but the situation is shaping up for the battle of contracts. This is expected to open about the end of July.

Union Status Same

The National Union of Theatrical Employes which operates as an independent labor organization under a Canadian Government Charter and as an affiliate of the All-Canadian Congress of Labor will continue to provide projectionists for the theatres formerly operated by Hanson Theatres Corp. which have been merged with Famous Players Canadian Corp. in recent reorganization moves, although a considerable number of the chain theatres are manned by members of the Operators Union sponsored by the IATSE.

This has been announced by A. R. Pura, official of the National Union, who pointed out that the organization has a working agreement with Hanson Theatres which does not expire until November, 1942. This contract provides for an annual vacation of two weeks with pay and other favorable conditions including substantial wages for overtime and midnight shows. The Ontario Local has members in Toronto, Hamilton, London, St. Thomas, Dunnville, St. Catharines, Orilla, North Bay, Ottawa, Napanee, Chatham and other centres. The union provided 17 candidates for the Ontario Government's Projectionists Training School which opened early this year in the Parliament Buildings, Toronto, Pura declared.

Taxes Cause Slump

A combination of elements has created a reduction in business at theatres in the maritime provinces. Exhibitors attribute the slump more to the 20 per cent dominion war tax than to any other factor. When this levy became effective practically all the theatres were doing capacity business, and the S. R. O. sign frequently was necessary at nights. Contributing factors to the box office recession are: (1) daylight saving time; (2) summer weather, with its outdoor sports and pastimes, including motoring; (3) big increase in the cost of living; (4) numerous taxes on commodities, and contributions to war movements such as war savings stamps, aid to British bombing victims, Victory Loan bonds.

Affected by the reduced attendance are theatres in Halifax, St. John, Sydney, Glace Bay, North Sydney, Sydney Mines, New Glasgow, Westville, Stellarton, Kentville, Dartmouth, Yarmouth, Bridgewater, Lunenburg, Liverpool, Windsor, Amherst, Truro, Charlottetown, Summerside, Moncton, Fredericton, Campbellton, Bathhurst, Chatham, St. Stephen, Woodstock, Edmunston, River du Loup, Quebec City, Sherbrooke, Three Rivers.

At Halifax, where, owing to the doubling of the normal population because of the war, plus much floating population, theatre patronage had been taxing the capacities of all the theatres every week night, there has been a noticeable decrease. The same applies to the afternoon business. The higher priced theatres have been more affected than those with the lower priced scales, and a problem has been created for the so-called de luxe houses, all of which had been playing single features with two or three reels of shorts. Duals have been turned to in several instances, for the summer at least.

'DAMAGED GOODS' TAKES CODE TO COURT

MPPDA To Ask Dismissal of Criterion Suit for $1,500,000 Damages under Trust Law

Dismissal of the "Damaged Goods" case of Criterion Pictures Corporation against the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America et al, or a summary judgment, will be asked by defense counsel at the first court hearing scheduled for July 7 in the Federal District Court of Los Angeles. It will be argued that the California statute of limitations bars the case and that judgment should be given the defendants on the evidence presented in an affidavit of Joseph I. Breen, former director of the Production Code Authority and now head of production and studio manager for RKO.

The cause of the action was the refusal of the Code Authority to grant a seal to the film, "Damaged Goods," produced in 1937 by Criterion Pictures, which is headed by Phil Goldstone.

No Appeal Made

The affidavit of Mr. Breen, dated May 16, 1941, set forth that the picture was submitted to the PCA "on or about May 7, 1937" and that approval was denied in a letter, dated May 10, 1937, a copy of which was attached to the affidavit. It was further pointed out by Mr. Breen that, though the letter explained that the decision could be appealed to the board of directors of the MPPDA in New York, no such action was taken.

An attorney for Criterion Pictures, Mr. Breen further said, in June, 1937, asked that the decision be changed and "Damaged Goods" be approved. But "the attorney was informed that the decision remained and would remain unchanged." The PCA, the MPPDA and the Producers Association, Mr. Breen continued, took no further action with respect to the picture except "from time to time to participate in negotiations with the plaintiff corporation and its attorneys looking towards a compromse of the dispute which is the subject matter of the case."

Mr. Breen's letter of May 10, 1937, refusing approval of "Damaged Goods," was addressed to Mr. Goldstone and said in part that the picture was judged to be "definitely and specifically in violation of the Production Code inasmuch as its subject matter deals with venereal disease. Under Section II of 'particular applications' the Code states: '7. Sex hygiene and venereal disease are not subjects for motion pictures.'" The letter of Mr. Breen also called attention to the fact that an appeal could be taken to the MPPDA board of directors, whose decision would be final. It was further explained that, to make an appeal, a formal letter should be addressed to Will H. Hays, president of the MPPDA, at the New York office, and sending along "an exact copy of the print" submitted to the PCA.

"Damaged Goods" was reviewed in the July 10, 1937 issue of Motion Picture Herald. The review said in part, "Based on the subject of venereal disease as plot motivation, the picture is considered unsuitable for theatrical entertainment."

The picture was first filmed in 1915 by the American Film Manufacturing Company, a member of Mutual, and was based on a play by Eugene Brieux. The Criterion production was also based on the same story, as adapted in book form by Upton Sinclair.

Mutual Film, after examining the first "Damaged Goods," in 1915, decided the film was not suited for regular distribution to theatres, a decision made by John R. Freuler, president of Mutual, who also owned one-half of American Film, which made him a half owner in "Damaged Goods."

Mr. Goldstone, head of Criterion Pictures, for many years was active in the independent motion picture field, chiefly as a backer for independent producers on the West Coast. He also was head of Majestic Pictures Corporation. In 1935 he produced "Age of Indiscretion," "O'Shoughnessy's Boy" and "The Last of the Pagans" for MGM. In 1938 he purchased the Alexandria Hotel in downtown Los Angeles in what was reported to be a $1,000,000 deal.

The "Damaged Goods" bill of complaint asked $1,500,000 triple damage plus $25,000 attorney's fees under the Sherman and Clayton anti-trust laws. The MPPDA, AMPP and member companies were named, also Will H. Hays and Joseph I. Breen.

The complaint said in part, "The Producer-Exhibitor defendants now and for many years past have dominated and controlled almost all of the first-run theatres through the United States."

After data was introduced to show the interstate nature of the motion picture business the complaint continued, "As a further means of monopolizing and controlling the production, distribution and exhibition of motion pictures in the Unted States and for the purposes of excluding" production by other companies the MPPDA "put into operation a scheme and plan to compel all motion picture producers to submit all stories upon which motion pictures are to be based and all motion pictures to the Producer-Distributor Corporation for the purpose of censorship."

Criterion Pictures then pointed out that it was not a member of the MPPDA and had no part in the Code work and made no agreement to conform to it.

Decision Called "Arbitrary"

The PCA decision disapproving of "Damaged Goods" in 1937 was "arbitrary, unfair, unlawful and unreasonable" the complaint alleged. It was also asserted that, although the Criterion picture was banned, a picture produced by a member company on the same subject was approved. This has been interpreted as a reference to Warner Brothers' film, "Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet."

On May 27, 1941, Perry Price, of the law firm of Mitchell, Silberberg, Roth and Knupp, counsel for the defendants, filed a motion to dismiss the action and, alternatively, for summary judgment. It was charged that the complaint failed to state a cause of action and that, according to the California Code of Civil Procedure, the action was barred by the statute of limitations. Summary judgment was requested on the grounds that the cause of the alleged action had not arisen within three years prior to the commencement of the case and upon "the files, records and papers herein and upon the affidavit of Joseph I. Breen."

By stipuation, argument on the motion to dismiss and for summary judgment was set for July 7, 1941. The plaintiff was given until June 27th to file an answer to the defendants' motion. Meanwhile, last Friday, Criterion filed in Los Angeles Federal Court, a counter-affidavit answering Joseph Breen, asserting that negotiations for a Production Code seal did not cease in June, 1947, but were carried on until the latter part of April, 1938, and hence the suit should not be barred by the California three-year statute of limitations.

Court Rules for Peskay, Refusing Majors' Demands

Ed Peskay's Pickwick Theatre, Greenwich, Connecticut, was a partial victor in a showdown in New Haven Federal Court last week, in his $5,452,575 anti-trust suit against Skouras Theatres and the majors. Federal Judge Carroll Hincks allowed the defendants only three of a long list of requests, and denied them an extension of time. The defendants had asked for a bill of particulars, in 28 sections, some of which had many subdivisions.

Meanwhile, the Government's "field trust suit," in Nashville against the Crescent circuit, neared opening day of the trial (next Monday), as an additional Governmental bill of particulars named 32 theatres Crescent is alleged to have acquired during the past five years.

Fox Midwest Seeks New Trial

At the same time, attorneys for the Fox Midwest Corporation have filed with the Lincoln Federal Court, a motion for new trial, in defense against the monopoly suit by Frank Hollingsworth, operator of the now dark Pix Theatre, Beatrice, Nebraska. A jury two weeks ago found Mr. Hollingsworth damaged to the extent of $2,596, which was then trebled, under the law, and to it added attorney fees set by Judge T. C. Munger, at $1,500. Mr. Hollingsworth had asked $234,000 damages.

In the Peskay-Pickwick Theatre suit against the majors and the Skouras circuit, Judge Hincks' ruling was in response to a demand by the eight majors in May, for more specific explanation of every charge, and for a 30 day extension of time to answer.

The Pickwick's complaint alleges unfair clearance, and conspiracy to monopolize and restrain interstate commerce in films. It cites clearance in nearby towns such as Port Chester and Stamford, allegedly serving to deprive it of worthy product.

The 32 houses named by the Department of Justice in the Crescent Nashville suit are in Tennessee, Arkansas, Kentucky, and Mississippi. The additional bill naming these houses was filed in response to a motion by Columbia, United Artists and Universal, the "little three" majors not in the consent decree.

In New York, a Department spokesman said Friday, June 27th, that it is "fully" prepared to bring suit Monday, and that the trial would probably last six to eight weeks. However, the same spokesman also pointed out the Nashville court would recess for August, and that therefore the case would probably not be completed before the end of September.

It was said the order of the Government's remaining anti-trust trials would probably be: the Schine circuit case, in Buffalo; the "little three" case in New York; and the Griffith circuit case in Oklahoma City.

The Government man said most of the complaints by independent exhibitors against circuit expansion were already submitted; that the number of such were declining; and that most complaints came from the Middle West and the Coast.

Six members of the Department of Justice left Washington this week for Nashville. Headed by Allyn N. Doby and Robert L. Wright, the remainder are Albert Goggess, Seymour Simon, John Clagett, and Frank Cunningham.

Mr. Doby, a newcomer in Department film activities, has been with the anti-trust division three years. Among some cases, he was in charge of the rubber-tire company investigation.

BMI CHIDES FILMS FOR ALLOWING ASCAP TO SET FILM MUSIC PRICE

Counsel Says Motion Pictures Have as Much to Gain as Radio from "Competition" in Music Publishing Field

Motion picture producers have just as much to gain as radio from the development of ASCAP competition through Broadcast Music, Inc., Sydney Kaye, counsel for the networks' music firm asserted this week, while discussing various aspects of BMI-ASCAP differences of policy and procedure.

Mr. Kaye argued that "the motion picture industry can learn a lesson" from the ASCAP-networks battle, for, he said, "clearance at the source is just as important to motion picture companies producing musical films as it is to radio."

He declared, "The industry needs exploitation of its musical pictures, their songs deserve exploitation, and the industry should not sacrifice such exploitation of their products to a subservient group of men who have nothing to do with the production of their pictures.

"The film industry should learn that nobody should make a picture which somebody else can put a release price on for music synchronization and music performance rights of film product which represents millions of dollars in investment," he advised.

Defends Position

Mr. Kaye said, "BMI is breaking down the theory that there is such a thing as indispensability of a tune or a particular song writer. BMI is proving that there is no monopoly of good music by any one group, and that there is no such thing as a star system for writing hit tunes. A tune must be good music and must be competently suited to subject matter. It doesn't matter who writes the tune if the public likes it."

Defending BMI's position against attacks of its critics, Mr. Kaye said the organization had substituted music for the past six months without "loss of a penny" to the broadcasting stations or to the sponsors.

Mr. Kaye believes that BMI is giving untold opportunity to unknown writers to develop songwriting talents, which, he thinks was a function sadly neglected by ASCAP. Last week the networks' music firm sent checks for first quarter payments to 1,000 composers, 30 of whom were consistent hit-tune writers for BMI.

Concerning ASCAP'S announcement last week that the Society would file suit against NBC, CBS, BMI and NAB for violation of anti-trust laws, Mr. Kaye would not comment, but he promised that he would make a statement about the suit, "when, as and if it were filed."

In commenting on this payment, ASCAP, in a release issued to the press over the weekend, said: "The distribution, at long last, of royalty checks to composers and publishers of BMI, covering the first quarter of 1941 caused a furor in Tin Pan Alley, with composers and authors alike expressing anguish over the meagre payments. The consternation of numerous associate publishers of BMI and the composers whose 'bid to fame and fortune' exploded, with receipt of their royalty checks. One associate publishing house received less than $3 for three months' activity. One composer related having obtained an advance of $150 from BMI and how, when he received his royalty statement, he was told he owed BMI forty dollars. The squawks are still reverberating on Broadway."

BMI asserted that payments reached as high as $400 for one song per week, to individuals.

ASCAP claims that "radio is attempting to attain the position of both buyer and seller of music, leaving composers no voice in the negotiations," and conversely, BMI accuses the Society of similar intent.

Meanwhile, negotiations in the six-months' feud between the broadcasting companies and the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, finally have reached an impasse, it was indicated this week when news of the Society's refusal of NBC-CBS proposals was reported in New York.

Following interrupted meetings between NBC and ASCAP officials, caused by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee hearings held in Washington two weeks ago, at which radio executives appeared to testify, Mr. Niles Trammell, NBC president, proposed to ASCAP last Friday that the Society accept its offer to return ASCAP music to the airlanes on the basis of 2½ per cent payment on network commercial business. ASCAP's terms call for 3 per cent for four years and 3½ per cent annually thereafter, the contract which Mutual Broadcasting signed last month.

Offer Refused

At a special meeting of the Society's board of directors, called last Monday to discuss the NBC proposal, officials turned down the offer, just as they previously had balked at the CBS terms of 2 per cent payment based on an average of the three-year period, 1936-1939, and one and a half per cent of the excess of such net receipts in any one year exceeding this average.

A switch in negotiations from talk with network heads to direct deals between affiliated stations was seen as a possible sequel to rejection of the offer. E. C. Mills, chairman of the administrative committee, and John G. Paine, general manager of ASCAP, met this week in Washington with representatives of individual stations.

One ASCAP official estimated that the NBC offer would decrease the Society's total income from radio revenue to $2,500,000, as contrasted to $5,000,000 earned last year. In addition, the program station rate proposed was only one-half of one per cent more than that charged by Broadcast Music, Inc. "No one can seriously contend," an official declared, "that the ASCAP catalog is worth only one-half of one per cent more than BMI's."

ASCAP has 28 days in which to file answer to the complaint motion filed by BMI and the Edward B. Mark's Music Corporation brought before the Supreme Court of New York, to determine clarification of copyright ownership of the 15,000 songs in the Marks catalog. Until Monday, ASCAP did not answer the "test case" complaint, but as Mr. Kaye pointed out, the Society would not "default" in this instance and probably would file answer within the stipulated 28 days.

BMI claims that its system of "payment on performance" will establish once and for all, for the majority of the country song-writing public, the superiority of its policy over the ASCAP "classification" payment system.

ASCAP, meanwhile, is expected to file its four-way anti-trust suit within the next week, although its attorneys, Schwartz and Frohlich, refused to comment on when filing would take place.

The studio will be used to rehearse the acts, film an occasional short subject, and to construct the stage scenery used in the productions. KAO GETS 8 MILLIONS; 'U' RESUMES DIVIDENDS

Stockholders Approve Plan of Reorganization; Company To Pay $15.75 Deferred Dividend

Keith-Albee-Orpheum's $8,000,000 refunding program, almost halted by a subsequently withdrawn stockholder's action several weeks ago, was approved by the company's stockholders Friday, June 27th, in New York. Loan agreements for $6,000,000 with the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, and for $2,000,000 with a group of banks, among which are the Bankers Trust Company, Manufacturers Trust Company, the Irving Trust Company, all of New York, and the Security First National Bank of Los Angeles—were completed Thursday, June 26th.

The plan, and the amendments to the KAO certificate of incorporation, also approved, will permit the consolidation of the principal RKO theatre subsidiaries with the parent company. It will also permit payment of the accrued dividends on the outstanding KAO preferred stock, ultimate retirement of all that issue, and reacquisition, by the company and the board, of control of the common stock, substantially all of which is owned by RKO. Also made possible is resumption of common stock dividends by the theatre subsidiaries. These had been suspended for years, and the preferred stock dividends were in arrears.

Tenders of the KAO preferred stock are invited by the company from holders of record as of Monday, up to a total of 48,586 shares, at the tender price of $63.60 per share, on or before July 10th, under the refunding plan.

Atlas Buys Meehan Shares

The Atlas Corporation on Monday exercised its option on 21,000 shares of KAO preferred which were owned by M. J. Meehan, and which, with the approximately 7,500 shares already held by Atlas and the 21,761 shares owned by RKO, insure the tender of the required minimum number of shares.

Atlas is expected to turn over the shares to RKO, at cost, $114.25 per share; RKO, in turn, will receive the tender price from KAO, for the 48,586 shares.

There will remain outstanding 15,000 shares of KAO preferred, on which KAO will immediately pay the accrued dividends of $15.75 per share. Payment of the accrued dividends on the preferred will renew the common stock's right to elect a majority of the KAO board, a right it lost in 1934 after three consecutive preferred dividends had been passed. A sinking fund provision also contemplates the ultimate retirement of the 15,000 shares of preferred remaining outstanding, thus clearing the way for the resumption of common dividends exclusively.

The $6,000,000 Equitable loan will be secured by a like amount of 4¼ per cent first mortgage bonds, maturing in 1954, of a new consolidated company comprised of B. F. Keith Corp. and Greater New York Vaudeville Theatres Corp. The $2,000,000 bank loan will be secured by all of the capital stock and $1,400,000 in obligations of the consolidated company, and will be amortized with 2½ per cent serial notes maturing annually to 1946.

The new money will be used to retire $4,454,000 of B. F. Keith bonds outstanding and $580,000 of Keith Memorial bonds outstanding, each at 101 plus accrued interest, and, in addition, the new consolidated company will pay in cash to KAO a $919,000 obligation of Greater New York Vaudeville Theatres Corp.

Keith Treasury bonds of $1,028,000 and $10,000 of Keith Memorial bonds will be surrendered for cancellation by those companies.

The B. F. Keith Corporation, New York City, the consolidation of the Greater New York Vaudeville Theatres Corporation and the B. F. Keith Corporation, was chartered last week by the New York Secretary of State, as a step in the refunding-consolidation plan.

Universal Paying Preferred

Universal Pictures Company last week resumed dividend payments on its first preferred stock, for the first time since October 1st, 1932. The dividend, by the directors, was $2 per share, payable July 11th to holders of record July 7th.

After this payment, dividends in arrears on the preferred will amount to $68 per share, as of Tuesday.

The stock made a 13 point gain in trading on the New York Stock Exchange last week, selling off, however, two points Thursday, June 26th, to close at 158.

There are no immediate company plans to retire the issue, it is understood.

Trading by film company officers and directors in the securities of their corporations spurted sharply in May, it was disclosed July 3 by the final semi-monthly summary of the Securities and Exchange Commission, Washington.

The report disclosed that Atlas Corporation disposed of 2,000 shares of Keith-Albee-Orpheum preferred stock on May 6, 1,000 shares held direct and 1,000 held through the American company, reducing each portfolio to 3,500 shares, and toward the end of the month picked up 600 shares of Radio-Keith-Orpheum common stock, bringing its interest in that company to 762,727 shares of common held direct and 268,230 shares held through the American company; 327,812 warrants for common and 39,481 shares of preferred stock.

During the month, Loews' Inc., increased its holdings of Loews' Boston Theatres common by 250 shares, for a total of 118,330 shares, while in Loews' itself, J. Robert Rubin, New York officer, disposed of 1,100 shares of common stock, reducing his total to 23,915 shares.

Acquires Trans Lux Stock

The summary showed that Robert L. Gordon, New York director, acquired 500 shares of Trans Lux Corporation common stock by gift, representing his total holdings, and that Abraham Schneider, New York officer, bought 100 shares of Columbia Pictures common stock, giving him a total of 1,604 shares.

A report on Columbia Broadcasting System disclosed that Isaac D. Levy, Philadelphia director, gave 870 shares of Class A common stock to charity during the month, reducing his holdings to 59,276 shares, and that Lawrence W. Lowman, New York officer, disposed of 400 shares, reducing his holdings to 3,000 shares.

Reports on the holdings of persons becoming officers or directors of registered corporations showed that Edwin P. Kilroe, New York, who was made a director in Twentieth Century-Fox on May 8, held one share of common stock, while Lawrence Howe, Chicago, held no Trans Lux Corporation securities when he joined the directorate of that company on February 27, and Jerome B. Ross, New York, held 1,000 shares of common when he became a director May 27.

Otterson Named Ship Coordinator

John E. Otterson, former motion picture, theatre circuit, radio and television executive, was named Co-ordinator of Ship Repair and Conversion for the United States by Frank Knox, Secretary of the Navy, and Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, U. S. N. (retired), chairman of the Maritime Commission.

Following service in the Navy as an officer, he was a director of Winchester Repeating Arms Company and later became president. In 1935 Mr. Otterson was named president of Paramount Productions, Inc., and Paramount Pictures Dist. Co., Inc. He resigned from that position in 1936. He later headed, as president and director, Inter-Allied, Inc., and Tri-National Films.

Drop Smalley Theatres' Suit Against Paramount

The Smalley Theatres, Inc., suit against Paramount Pictures was settled and discontinued Monday, in New York Supreme Court, Rensselaer, New York. The suit had asked for a mandatory injunction compelling performance of a film contract, the plaintiff alleging that Paramount did not conform to its contract with the Smalley Theatre at Fort Plain, and that it gave preference to the Schine circuit's Little Falls Theatre, in the town of that name.

The stipulation by which the suit was settled is said to provided that Paramount live up to the terms said to be included in its Smalley contract.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

TO NEW ENGLAND

IN Boston last week, privileged to attend the annual M&P circuit outing, your reporter, after a three-year absence, saw many familiar faces, noted few changes in executive personnel. That would betoken a strong esprit de corps, an assurance of operation apparent even to the casual eye.

Headmen Marty Mullin and Sam Pinanski arrived early, stayed late, participated enthusiastically in the various events, played host graciously. They were especially amused at the sketches put on by the personnel wherein the bosses were ribbed thoroughly.

The M&P district managers displayed a wholesome attitude toward the conservation of manager well-being. In conversation with these heads, they told of urging managers to take time away from the theatre, to occupy themselves with outside activities, to maintain more normal family life.

Given full expression at the outing by Harry Browning, was his hobby, photography, taken up lately by the circuit ad head and found to be more than paying its way. Equipped with the best of cameras, Browning is never at a loss now to grab those unexpected spot shots which often can be planted for fat newspaper breaks.

A NEXT-DAY visit to the Boston Loewmen revealed the members in a Round Table exploitation conference on behalf of the coming attraction at the circuit's State and Orpheum. Planning vigorously, and confidently, were Joe Di Pesa, Al Longo, Ed McBride and Howard Burkhardt. The teamwork was admirable. And they were getting things done.

No shrinking violet is your publicist when selling the merits of his wares to the public, the editors, the merchants. Conspicuously, he displays his modesty when referring to his own accomplishments. Phoning ad head Jack Granara, we expressed appreciation for the excellent contributions to these pages from the Boston RKO theatres. Jack replied his gang felt honored that the material was voted good enough for reproduction.

Decided is the stimulation to be had from a call upon Jack Simons, promoted recently to the helm of Loew's State, in Providence. The ever-bubbling Round Tabler is securing himself rapidly and constructively in the goodwill of the community leaders. His enthusiasm for the job is overwhelming.

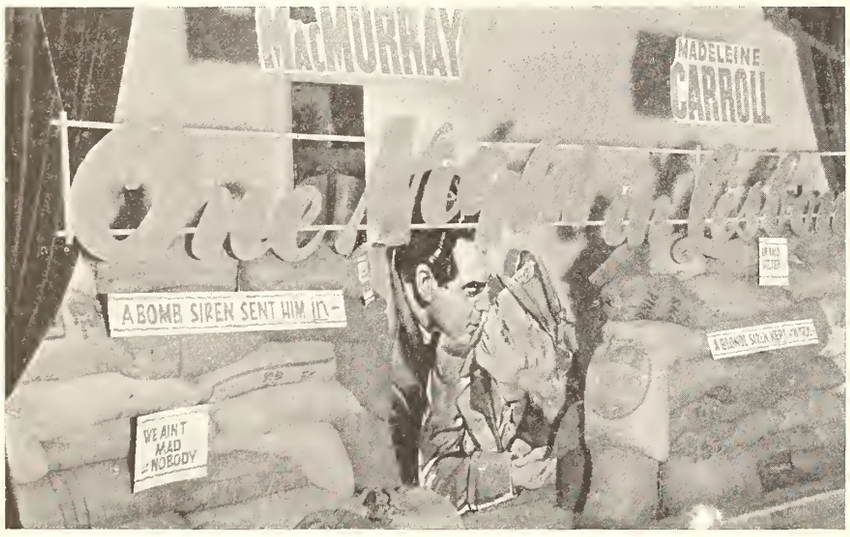
In Bridgeport, evidences of forthright theatre promotion were easily to be had. The town was blanketed on a "Man Hunt" tiein made by Morris Rosenthal with one of the dailies. Matt Saunders' lobby was filled with entries on a "Billy the Kid" coloring contest. The thousands of successful campaigns put over by these exploitation experts could fill a comfortable-sized library. And that would be a swell idea.

IN all, a short but enlightening journey in which it was revealed that while there were things to correct, there was little wrong with the theatreman's courage. The members met up with in every situation were vigorously engaged in selling their attractions, spoke with a quiet confidence of the future. Nothing was allowed to interfere with their determination to keep the theatre high in public consciousness.

A-Mike Vogel



Some 2,600 books and over 2,000 magazines were obtained by United Detroit Theatres Corporation to stock the library at Fort Custer, Michigan, in a recent "book week" drive. The idea originated with Manager Don Kuhn of the Broadway-Capitol, Detroit. Kuhn, making a trip to Fort Custer, was surprised to find how little reading material was available for the soldiers. He contacted the commanding officer, who entered wholeheartedly into the proposed plan outlined by the theatreman.

Trailers were run at 19 U. D. T. theatres requesting patrons to bring to the theatre any old books or magazines for which they had no further use so that they might be sent to Fort Custer as additions to the library of the post. Response was surprising, and many compliments were expressed by patrons to various managers and members of the service staffs in the various theatres. Newspapers gave the theatre chain valuable institutional publicity on the drive and its result.

Round Table In Pictures

Three boys dressed as the Marx Brothers and pushing title lettered hand trucks covered streets of Cleveland as part of Maurice Druker's advance for opening of "The Big Store" at Loew's State. Fact that lads were picked up by local gendarmes broke dailies with stories and art.

Air-raid shelter was built in the outer lobby of the L. & J. Palace, in Athens, Ga., for Frank Bickerstaff's date on "Night in Lisbon". Cutout star heads were featured with appropriate tiein copy on sand bags.

Created by Bill Israel at the Philadelphia Warner Fox, in Maurice Gable's district was an eye-arresting lobby ahead of "Caught in the Draft." Life-size cutouts of Bob Hope in uniform were spotted strategically with tiein copy.

To inject a little of the approaching holiday spirit into his forthcoming attraction display, Les Pollock at Loew's, in Rochester, created setpiece illustrated below featuring bursting firecracker with copy: "Loew's 4th of July smash hit."

CITY BLOCKS OFF THEATRE STREET FOR LIMERICK'S PREVIEW SHOW

Griffiths City Manager Stages Horseback Jamboree to Plug Advance for "Billy the Kid"; Furnishes Chuck-Wagon Food

Since the career of the notorious boy bandit is a part of the history of the Southwest, Griffiths theatremen in that sector have been conspicuously engaged in exploitation activities on "Billy the Kid" dates. Prominent among campaigns currently reported is the spectacular promotion devised by George Limerick, in Enid, Okla., the Griffiths City manager, and Quigley Grand Awards winner, securing the cooperation of the local Cherokee Strip Roundup Club, some 50 famed and skilled mounted riders, to stage a giant "Downtown Jamboree on Horseback" in front of the theatre in advance of a special midnight preview of the picture at the Aztec. For this purpose, Limerick secured permission to rope off the entire theatre block, lighting up the front with huge Kliegs and giant floods.

Parade and Concert Open Event

The outdoors show started with riders on bannered horses trotting around the area and a sound truck announcing the program of events. Opening the program, a cowboy band gave a concert, followed by a colorful parade of the Roundup Club to the theatre, led by the high school band. Here the riders gave an exhibition of drills, quadrilles, fancy riding, roping and wild west acts, foremost among the latter being rope-twirling by the local superintendent of schools. This part of the program was concluded with the unfurling of the American flag with the assembled crowd of over 5,000 singing "God Bless America," with square-dancing following.

To add atmosphere, George secured a regular ranch chuck wagon decorated with every cattle brand in existence and bannered extensively with theatre credits. Alongside was a large kettle over a wood fire (see cut) to furnish free coffee to spectators who also supped on old-fashioned sourdough biscuits baked while they waited.

Chuck Wagon Ballyhoo Effective

Engaged for the doings by Limerick was Frank Eaton, 80-year-old former U. S. Marshal, known throughout that sector and a colorful figure of the Old West. Eaton decorated the chuck wagon with relics of the picture's period, conspicuous among which were the gun that killed "The Kid" and authentic photos of the outlaw. The old-timer served coffee and related his experiences, wearing a shield which carried his name and copy to the effect that he had come "over 100 miles just to see," etc., etc. Other famed characters were on hand, including the president of the Chisholm Trail Memorial Association and secretary of the Cherokee Trail Cow-Punchers Association.

After the riding exhibition, a long hitching rail running the length of the street was assembled and all horses hitched for inspection by the onlookers. The program finished with a huge barbecue where the Round Tabler was host to the riders and guests.

LIMERICK AT RIGHT, NEXT TO HORACE FALLS, GRIFFITHS EXECUTIVE

The campaign started two weeks ahead with distribution of Jamboree and preview heralds. Radio announcements were broadcast regularly and newspaper publicity was plentiful. Limerick following through with increased advertising space for the special event. Posting also was extensive. Staff members were dressed in keeping and wore breast bands with all the Roundup riders and others in full cowhand regalia. In all the events was "super," George reports, in tagging it one of the biggest promotions he has ever put over.

Prickett Features Atmospheric Lobby

In Victoria, Texas, at the circuit's El Rancho, Manager Ken Prickett also worked out a gun-campaign for the date, running want ads offering to rent old guns and pistols of the picture's period. Among those turned in was an authentic Derringer pistol used by a famed desperado which Prickett used for some extra publicity in a popular newspaper column. Crowds were drawn to the theatre to see the exhibit and on opening day, a sign was added, reading, "Park your guns here before seeing," etc.

Ken opened his campaign three weeks ahead with a newspaper serialization, followed with a radio transcription, ten days ahead. Before the opening, a misspelled letter contest was planted. The lobby showing was unique, setpiece showing desert background with sand, gravel, cactus and saddle in front. Giant cutout of Robert Taylor with gun in hand was planted above.

Lykes Seeks Old Gun Collection

Gun-stuff further East is noted by Jack Lykes, at Loew's Valentine, Toledo, Ohio, in discovering that the county's sheriff possessed a rebuilt Holt revolver which the peace officer asserted was once the "shooting iron" of Billy, himself. Lykes persuaded the sheriff to lend the gun for lobby display prior to the date and received a further break in having the proceedings detailed prominently in a local column; the story included title and date.

Stage Broadcast Held For Hall Personal

For the personal appearance of George Hall and His Band, Pat Notaro at Warners' Columbia, in Sharon, Pa., arranged with local radio station WPIC for a broadcast of interviews backstage and a broadcast from the stage for the first 15-minutes of the show. Plenty of plugs for the theatre's "Five O'Clock Dawn Patrol Jitterbug Session" were gotten in and in addition, station advertised the band in their ads.

With Sharon this year celebrating its 100th anniversary, Pat who has been appointed co-chairman of the publicity committee arranged a movie contest as part of the Centennial Week. Through newspapers, readers are invited to select their favorite actress and actor, ballot boxes placed in all city theatres and after four weeks, during which standings of the highest 10 will be listed each week, the votes counted and winners will be invited to partake in the Centennial Week celebration, August 24.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Refrigerator Show Held On Stage by Rastetter

In connection with the eighth annual refrigerator show, held on the stage of the Warner Theatre, in Erie, Pa., Manager H. T. Rastetter promoted plenty of free space from the papers with four co-op ads, one of which was a three-quarter of a page affair heading the refrigeration section. In addition, Rastetter used a classified ad contest which brought about 36 free inches and newspaper stories were run inviting kids to participate in an amateur stage show for which gifts were awarded winners.

For his date on "Lady Eve," which was held in conjunction with car giveaway on stage, picture received prominent mention in all co-op ads together with playdates. Rastetter sent apples appropriately tagged to all newspaper editors, copy on cards reading: "Something tempting from Lady Eve."

Contests Build 'Night' & 'Navy'

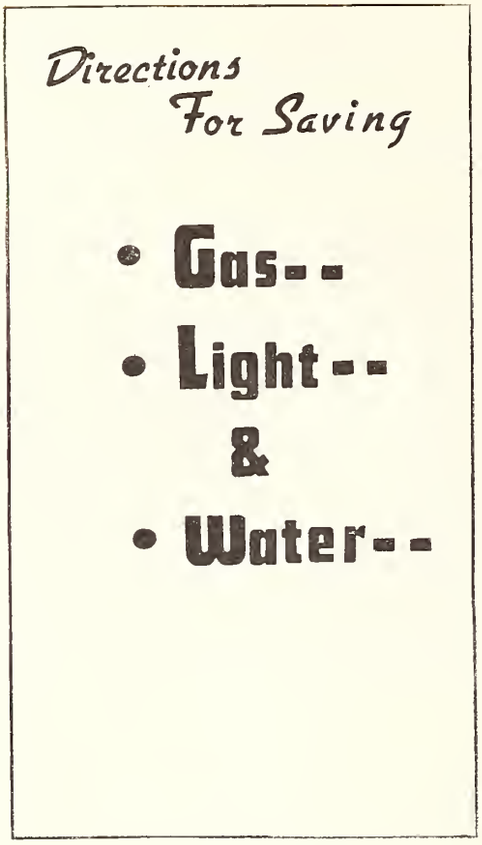
For "One Night in Lisbon" at Keith's, in Syracuse, Jack Flex highlighted his campaign with a number of newspaper tieins, planting the pressbook cryptogram contest using two-column layout along with copy. Readers were asked to decipher the message as printed and bring answers to the theatre for tickets.

Flex also landed the pressbook Blitz English contest in another daily and in a third, the Famous Movie Team contest with art layout of Madelaine Carroll and Fred MacMurray, requiring contestants to submit lists of famous and popular movie teams. Radio coverage included plugs over stations WOLF, WFBL and WAGE.

Advance on "In the Navy" as arranged by Flex also included a newspaper contest asking contestants to judge the number of enlistments in the U. S. Navy during the past six months through the local Navy Recruiting office cooperation, officers agreed to act as judges. Other contests landed were a coloring contest and a "Know Your Navy" quiz, wherein questions pertaining to naval traditions were asked. Through arrangements with distributors of juke boxes in the city, recordings of song hits sung by the Andrews Sisters were featured, appropriate tiein cards on all boxes. In addition orchestrations were planted at leading hotels, picture plugs given by band leaders. Street quiz carried by WSYR and originating from front of theatre twice weekly, mentioned both features and casts.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Kiwanis Club Sold By Feulner for Show



When the local Kiwanis Club began discussing some fund raising activity, Joe Feulner at the Des Plaines, in Des Plaines, Ill., approached them with the suggestion that they rent the theatre and put on a show. Promising to handle the advertising and actual staging of the event, the deal was settled and newspaper publicity started. As an opening gun, a fake parachute jump in which dummies were used was staged in front of theatre with ambulance on hand as a gag. In addition plane dropped tickets good for admission at the theatre. Bally car equipped with signs and public address system toured the city and surrounding towns.

Another stunt that Feulner uses is a lobby easel on which is listed his month's calendar. Each change of program is lettered in another color and as the month wears on "X's" made of strips of black cardboard are pasted across picture that have been played.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Rogers' "Face" Contest

Around the question "What type of woman's face do you find most fascinating?" Carl Rogers promoted a full page of co-op ads on "Woman's Face" at Loew's Granada, in Cleveland. Prizes were given by the participating merchants for the best 50-word statements on what type the readers preferred, haughty, demure, intelligent, dreamy, exotic or sophisticated.

Novety two fold herald, front of which is reproduced above, was distributed by Harold Sliter, Schine Mohawk Valley district manager, to plug his coming attractions. Inside spread advised the best way to save on gas, light and water was to spend the evening at a Schine theatre.

Terrell Details Recent Doings

Current reports from Dan Terrell in Carter Barron's Washington Loew's theatres zone tell about the fancy exploitation that was done for the MGM short "Happiest Man on Earth," unusual cooperation being had from the short story study class of the American University, which the Loewman used to bring some added newspaper attention to the date. Short was also screened in advance for the critics with Dan sending them a number of stories exploitating different angles.

On "That Hamilton Woman," Terrell tied up one of Washington's leading jewelers for a dignified window display which featured a powder horn reportedly owned by Lord Nelson. Background of window featured blowups of Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier together with appropriate tiein card.

For the personal appearance of Jimmy Dorsey at the Palace, window displays were landed in one of the city's leading stores, which brought blowups of the maestro and one of his vocalists. Dorsey records were also on display and played over juke box with loud speaker outside window bringing anticipated attraction. In addition, tinted heralds were distributed carrying cut of the leader together with list of his recordings.

Botwick Calls It the "Biggest Yet"

The biggest picture campaign ever put on locally, according to Harry Botwick, was that which introduced his date on "I Wanted Wings" at the State, Portland, Me. The promotion was made possible by the full support of the newspapers. Army representatives and the City Council, the latter proclaiming the opening day as "Greater Portland Flying Cadet Day" in honor of the picture. The Council further allowed Botwick to post all traffic dummies on four sides, incidentally, a "first-time" promotion, the posting remaining alive a week ahead.

The Army recruiting units also got aboard, stationing a uniformed man in the lobby to pass out literature and answer questions on army flying service. The service tiein also brought every "A" board in the state to Portland where they were used all over the area to plug the date. Further, the army representatives posted over 200 one-sheets, all carrying theatre credits.

Publisher Gannett Cooperates

Since Guy P. Gannett is publisher of the Portland papers and also state chairman of the "Air Cadets," Harry was able to obtain the fullest publicity support. In addition to the daily breaks and art far in advance, the Round Tabler also promoted a model airplane contest with the Sunday Telegram, a Veronica Lake Trophy given the winner. For several Sundays ahead, the paper also used what was practically a full page weekly on "Flying Cadet" information.

Being very partial to radio with which he has been consistently successful, Botwick was able to list some 14 different radio tieins on all stations, in all obtaining some five hours of broadcasting on the date within a three-week period, most of the breaks com-

Air Demonstration Featured

On opening night, mobile searchlights and sound locators were brought down from nearby Fort Williams and a demonstration of airplane spotting was put on. This was also covered by special broadcast. A parade of army trucks headed by reconnaisance cars was held to the theatre where the vehicles unloaded and put on a display. Military police took part in the demonstration. To insure space for the outside show, Harry arranged that there would be no parking in the theatre area from the afternoon until late.

Elaborate window displays were obtained by William Romanoff, assistant manager, and further tieins effected with news distribution company to banner all delivery trucks. And to insure the best of cooperation, the Botwick held a morning preview well ahead for the City Council, ranking Army officials and other prominents.

Cinderella Gag Sells "Shoes"

Through tieup with local shoe merchant during the run of Damon Runyon's "Tight Shoes" at Arthur Mayer's New York Rialto, a number of men's and women's shoes were on display next to theatre entrance. Appropriate card invited folks to try their luck and to those whom the shoes fit, guest tickets were awarded.

Paramount Short Aids Father's Day

From all accounts, much bigger promotions have been arranged this year for Father's Day on account of the tiein made by Paramount on the Benchley short, "The Forgotten Man," assuming box-office importance through tieins reported by various of the members. Among those who made much of the Saturday Evening Post promotion which brought plenty of cooperative ad mention were George Laby at the Victory, in Holyoke, Mass., Joe Ruddick at the Gillioz, in Springfield, Mo., and Frank Bickerstaff for the L. & J. Theatres, in Athens, Ga., among others. In every instance, in addition to the co-op advertising, windows, lobby displays, heralds, etc., also built up the promotion.

In Meriden, Conn., Joe Samartano at Loew's Poli in addition to some 15 co-ops on the Benchley tiein also promoted packages of Marlin Razor Blades which were distributed to the first 500 fathers attending on the "big day." In addition, 100 ties were given to the next 100 fathers attending.

Since Chick Tompkins at the Elco, in Elkhart, Ind., invited all 70-year-old mothers to be his guests on Mother's Day to a rousing success, he found the same method effective on Father's Day also for the 70-year-olds, tying in with taxi cab company for transportation and promoting free eats, etc., for dear old dad.

Lions Club Sponsors "Liberty" for Cornell

On the strength of a special screening of "Land of Liberty," Clay Cornell at Schine's State, in Tupper Lake, N. Y., sold the local Lions Club on a benefit. Boy Scouts came through on a ticket-selling campaign with cash prizes going to the Scout selling the greatest number. Theatreman also aided in promoting space in leading store for ticket booth five days ahead. Contacting school principals, both public and parochial, arrangements were made for sale of special tickets to students day before opening. Schools further cooperated by announcing the showing several days in advance over public address system. Mayor endorsed reader in weekly paper two weeks prior and gave proclamation printed in issue before opening.

For the Dionne short, "Growing Up," Cornell arranged for a special kiddie matinee party, program built around their seventh birthday. Window displays of the Quints were landed in strategic spots around town, heralds distributed and Dionne products sold at one of the stores were promoted for door prizes.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Hoff's "Defense Stamp Nights"

Another theatreman tying in on the defense program is Bob Hoff at the Rivoli Theatre in Rutherford, N. J., who features a "United States Defense Stamp Night" each Wednesday. One stamp is given free with every adult and junior admission. In addition, one $25.00 Savings Bond is also given away each Wednesday in connection with a lucky number contest. "Defense Night" is plugged through trailer, programs and distribution of heralds.

EXPLOITATION BRIEFS FROM A-FIELD

Bert Leighton, manager of Warners' Grand Theatre, Lancaster, Pa., conceived a contest idea for "Pot o' Gold" which he worked out with the Woolworth store. Passerbys were asked to determine how many pennies were in the glass pot in the store window with free passes for those submitting the closest answers. For "The Great Dictator," he used a street ballyhoo of two fellows, one dressed like Hitler and the other as Mussolini.

Sil Steron, manager of Warners' Logan Theatre, Philadelphia, tied up junior and high schools in the neighborhood for "Cheers for Miss Bishop." He had a Gratz High Night on the opening day that brought numerous students. Book marks carried his message to all book stores and lending libraries.

Jack Minsky, manager of Warners' Astor Theatre, Philadelphia, offered five autographed photos of Frederic March to writers of the five best letters telling why they enjoyed "So Ends Our Night."

Marty Goldenberg, manager of the State Theatre, promoted 1,000 copies of a kiddie comic magazine which he used as a giveaway in advance of the opening of a new serial. Bolstering his message, he used a double valence on the weekend matinees, planted a kiddie ad in the neighborhood newspaper and mailed 500 cards to his special kiddie list. The co-operating merchant liked the idea so well, Goldenberg plans to repeat the "no cost" stunt.

Two men on stilts, carrying signs describing the film as "Tops in Entertainment," were employed as part of Ed Pentecost's "Men of Boys' Town" campaign for its Loew's Grand, Atlanta, showing.

A man impersonating William Powell impersonating his "aunt" in "Love Crazy" was one of the highlights of Everett Callow's campaign for the film's showing at Warner's, Philadelphia.

Local boys became city officials, ran the stores and shops and walked beats with patrolmen as part of the "Men of Boys' Town" campaign put over by A. R. Clausen, Adler, Waupaca, Wis. He had complete cooperation and derived plenty of excellent publicity and comment.

Woman cosmetician in the lobby of the theatre told patrons about "A Woman's Face" in addition to giving beauty talks as part of the campaign for the film executed by James Keefe, Cambria, Johnstown, Pa.

A man touring the streets carrying a potted plant on his head and a sign on his back explaining that he was "Love Crazy" was the highlight of the campaign put over by Leon Reichbloom, State, Charleroi, Pa.

Attractive girls carrying a "Ziegfeld Girl" banner skated at a local rink as ballyhoo for the musical as part of the Poli, Waterbury, Conn., campaign put over by Ed Fitzpatrick.

PATRONS GUESS LENGTH OF "IN THE NAVY" RUN

Continuing the type of showmanship which enabled him to hold "Buck Privates" for a record-breaking five weeks at the Penn Theatre, Wilkes-Barre, Round Tabler John Galvin and his assistant, Joe Kearns, staged another campaign for "In the Navy", featuring the drive with a 10-day contest in local papers asking the readers to designate their guesses as to "How Long Abbott and Costello will stay this time".

For a week ahead, Galvin plugged the picture on his daily radio program and installed lobby signs and banner three weeks ahead. Newspaper stories started three days in advance, while outdoor campaign covered a radius of 25 miles.

Effective lobby tieup was arranged Jack Lykes, Loew's Valentine, Toledo for advance on "Ziegfeld Girl," promoted recording machine was planted playing hit tunes from the picture. Scene still blowups were planted alongside with appropriate copy.

Card which is reported to have attracted plenty of attention locally was that gotten out by Francis J. Faille at the Paramount, in North Adams, Mass., to sell his shows. Measuring some six by nine inches in bold type were some five or six "Did you know" lines, which were followed by information either as to prices on coming attractions.

Marty Aninsman, manager of Warners' Leader Theatre, Philadelphia, getting the co-operation of neighborhood merchants, promoted a letter contest in the neighborhood newspaper for "Come Live With Me." The idea was based on "Would you have the courage to marry a man making seventeen-fifty a week and why?"

MURPHY TIES WANT ADS TO "LOVE CRAZY" DATE

Newspaper readers in Syracuse were recently invited to find an apartment for William Powell and Myrna Loy on a classified hookup made by Frank Murphy for "Love Crazy" at Loew's State. Banner head read: "This Love Crazy Mr. & Mrs. Need Your Help."

Guest tickets were offered to entrants studying all the ads in the "Apartments for Rent" classification and clipping the ad which they thought described the apartment selected for the stars. This was to be pasted on sheet of paper with short statement explaining the choice. Fifteen guest tickets were given.

Contacting members of local high school, Bob Harris at the Colony, Winter Park, Fla., sold them on the idea of disposing tickets to "Boys Town" on a percentage basis. In addition to selling over 600 tickets, Harris promoted the school band on a parade for an afternoon and Saturday morning matinee. Members marched to theatre where a brief concert was given, stunt good for art and reader breaks in local daily.

Charles Moyer, of Warners' State, Hanover, Pa., made a personal visit to all priests in the city and surrounding sections to endorse and receive their endorsement for "Men of Boys' Town." Announcements in several schools did the trick for "The Sea Wolf," and a young fellow was employed to wander through town asking people whether they knew what the screen fare at the State was, and then politely informed them of the grand hit by Jack London and cast.

Featuring the critics' reviews and stressing the "adult entertainment only" angle, Jim McDonough distributed heralds on "This Thing Called Love" at the Grand, in Galt, Ontario. Cards were posted on posts, fences, windows, etc., carrying copy in block letters "What Is This Thing Called Love? For further information telephone (theatre number)."

Receiving permission from the city fathers, Irving Cantor at Schine's Palace, in Syracuse, entered a sound car in the recent Memorial Day parade, appropriately bannering it with "Buck Private" copy. To attract attention, readers were run in papers week ahead asking for contestants to enter the "spud peeling" contest to be held on stage. Cash and guest tickets were later awarded to winners.

A boy and a girl on a tandem bicycle, the vehicle appropriately bannered, rode through Harrisburg, Pa., streets as ballyhoo for "Love Crazy" as one of the features of the campaign for the film put over by Bill Elder, Loew's, Harrisburg.

Entirely gratis was the full hour of Tommy Dorsey's music which was played over WPIC as part of Bob Wanamaker's advance for "Las Vegas Nights" at the Liberty, in Sharon, Pa. Contest was brought in at the beginning of the program when a song was played and listeners were asked to identify the tune and call the theatre immediately with their answer, guest tickets going to winners. Orchestrations were planted with local night club band, displays landed at music stores and a "Dorsey Dip" fountain drink was plugged week ahead and during run.

As a sendoff for his date on "Men of Boys' Town" at the Capitol, in Winnipeg, Harold Bishop carried an ad in the Catholic papers, printed in English, French and Polish, calling attention to the fact that the latest issue of the Knights of Columbus magazine recommended the picture. This was also supported by scene mat and additional story.

RKO THEATRES "MAYTIME JUBILEE" BRINGS CIRCUITWIDE PARTICIPATION

Divisions from Coast to Coast Report Effective Campaigns to Signalize Seasonal Drive; Mayors Proclaim Celebration

CONDUCTED for a five-week period throughout the circuit and ending late in May, the RKO Theatres Maytime Movie Jubilee, aimed to stimulate business nationally, revealed a wealth of exploitation and publicity promotions put on by the participating theatremen in every part of the country. Pooling their resources, RKO managers, division heads and home office executives combined to create out-of-the-ordinary campaigns, the Jubilee opened in all situations with great fanfare including street parades, contests, merchant cooperations, outside and theatre decorations, etc. Special events stressed participation of Mayors and other civic heads.

In Greater New York theatres, for instance, each division went in for special policies, besides the above mentioned activities. In the division of which Charles B. McDonald is manager, and Fred Herkowitz press representative, among the outstanding events were stage weddings at several of the theatres, with local merchants supplying gifts for the bride and groom. The largest of these weddings were held at Keith's Flushing, of which John Heinz is manager and James Downey, assistant, and at the RKO Hamilton, of which George Baldwin is manager and John O'Hare, assistant. The Flushing also gave away $1,000 in free cash on a tieup with department store.

"Blind Date" Contest Featured

For publicizing "Nice Girl" this theatre conducted a "Blind Date" contest in which heart shaped numbered cards were issued. Patrons had to find matching hearts (carrying same number) to be admitted free. For "Model Wife," tie-up was made with Remington Shavers, several of which were given out as prizes. The RKO 81st Street, of which George Dunn is manager and Robert Winston, assistant, gave out copies of "Sea Wolf" to lucky winners.

All of these theatres used the fake photo gag for "Meet John Doe." They had ushers pose as street photographers. After "snapping" a pedestrian's picture, ushers would hand him a card which carried John Doe copy. To attract youngsters, all the theatres in the McDonald division had "Sea Wolf" pirate cut-out heralds, and sailor hats to advertise "A Girl, a Guy and a Gob."

Most Popular Boy and Girl Feted

The division of which Louis Goldberg is manager and Pat Grosso press representative, picked Kings and Queens for the RKO Maytime Movie Jubilee, which attracted much attention. The most popular boy and girl at each theatre were "crowned" and received cash gifts as well as prizes promoted from merchants. The RKO Republic, Herman Grafing, manager, and Milton Pataky, assistant, also conducted a "Find the 'Nice Girl' contest." Bally girl walked around theatre neighborhood at appointed time, and had to be identified as the "RKO Republic Nice Girl." Winner received cash promoted from merchant. The RKO Strand, Sigurd Wexo, manager, Melvin Rheinfeld, assistant, promoted free toys for give away at Kiddie Shows.

Merchant Cooperation Sought

The RKO Prospect, Jerome Greenberger, manager, Ed Shannon, assistant, promoted electrical gifts from local merchant and also gave away Gift Ticket Books to oldest and youngest mothers in theatre on Mothers' Day. The RKO Kenmore, Leon Kelmer, manager, Ed McGlone, assistant, went in for special stage shows, including a night club floor show, which they promoted free of charge. At the RKO Shore Road, manager Joseph Goldberg and assistant James W. Bergen promoted jewelry from local merchants for give away on two nights. The Tilyou, Michael Edelstein, manager, Richard McDevitt, assistant, had a lobby bally for "A Girl, a Guy and a Gob," using two ushers in sailor garb, washing a deck. This stunt was used at most of the Brooklyn theatres.

The outstanding activity in the division of which Sol A. Schwartz is manager and Ray Malone press representative, was a $1,500 Bonus Plan, in which most of the theatres in this division participated. Patrons received numbered Bonus coupons each time they attended a performance, depositing stub in box in lobby. Winner had to be in theatre on designated night to claim cash prize. The Chester, of which Sam Taub is manager and Myron Feltheimer assistant, promoted coffee which it served on its mezzanine.

The RKO 58th Street, Ansel Weinstein, manager, John Hamill, assistant, staged a "Great Lie" contest with radio station WINS, giving prizes to those telling the biggest lies. Lobby stunt for "Flame of New Orleans" was a burning candle. Patrons who made the closest guess as to what time the flame would burn out, received guest tickets. The Alhambra, H. Heintz, manager, Philip Nemirow, assistant, made tie-up with leading bakery for thousands of outserts. The Castle Hill, Max Mink, manager, Ed Pyne, assistant, held a beauty contest, chose a Maytime Movie Queen Contest, organized Jubilee Kiddie Clubs and tied in with merchants.

The RKO Pelham, James Fitzgerald, manager, Carl Siegel, assistant, held a most beautiful mother and child contest, with loving cup and cash to winner. The 86th Street, Emil Groth, manager, John Dewberry, assistant, had tie-up with Kresge's whereby all sales girls wore Movie Jubilee caps. They participated in the celebration of the Yorkville Chamber of Commerce for the demolition of the "L" structure, by having truck advertising current picture in the parade. The RKO Franklin, Sam Rydell, manager, S. Axelrod, assistant, gave out match books stamped with Jubilee copy. For "A Girl, a Guy and a Gob" exploitation, sailors with girls were admitted free. A $500 oscillograph was promoted from the Museum of Science and Industry to demonstrate "how your voice looks when broadcast," to publicize "Great American Broadcast."

Street Bally Favored

A man and a girl on stilts were used to advertise showing of "A Girl, a Guy and a Gob" at RKO Proctor's, Yonkers, by Manager John C. Hearns and Frank McNair. They also had electric garlands for effective lobby decoration. The Mayor of New Rochelle officially endorsed the Jubilee, starting off a bang-up campaign in this town for Proctor's, which is managed by Joe Di Lorenzo, assisted by Arthur Koch. A Limerick contest for "Model Wife" with Remington Rand shavers as prizes was used by Manager Charles M. Oelreich and his assistant, Clarence E. Force, for Keith's, White Plains. They also tied in with radio station on Quiz program, giving passes to winners.

The RKO Regent, Max Sloven, manager, John Conhaim, assistant, gave out numbered balloons on opening day, some being good for free admission. At the Jefferson, manager Kenneth Rockwell, M. J. Nolan, assistant, held a "Budget Contest" for "Come Live With Me" for families running their households on small salaries. For their double horror show, the theatremen offered passes to ladies who would sit through show alone in theatre at midnight.

Mayor Receives Giant Invite

In the division of which R. H. Emde is manager, many unusual stunts were used. The RKO Proctor's, in Newark, Ed Sniderman, manager, Warren H. Davis, assistant, had good publicity breaks when they inaugurated campaign by presenting the Mayor of Newark with giant admission tickets to open the Jubilee. For "Adam Had Four Sons," they admitted all red-heads free. At the RKO Capitol, Union City, N. J., Jerome Baker and Leon Rosenman used a sinister-looking scientific exhibit in lobby for "The Monster and the Girl."

GRADUATION MATINEE BRINGS ADDED GROSSES

On the theory that members of the graduating classes in the country and local schools, if invited to the theatre, would bring along relatives and friends who would pay their way, Bill Johnson at Smalley's, in Dolgeville, N. Y., recently tied in with the various schools in this manner, issuing special invitations good for a special matinee.

Certain day was set aside for the party and that the theory worked out in practice was evident, reports Johnson, by the excellent results obtained.

Tin can matinees are not the only reliable to be given a run, as is noted by the recent old tire matinee put on by Francis Schlax at the Kenosha, in Kenosha, Wis. Local youngsters were invited to roll old tires to cooperating service store in exchange for guest tickets. These were good at all local Warner houses.

Jubilee Tied To School Anniversary

In J. M. Brennan's division, covering the New Jersey territory, there were also numerous activities. Most of the theatres in Trenton, N. J., had tie-up with bread company, for inserts in their packages. They also had tie-up with Kresge stores, which used Jubilee copy on menus for the duration of the drive. At the Capitol, Trenton, Henry Scholl had a good tie-up with the Trenton Times for "Find a Word Contest" in their classified section. The Broad, Trenton, James Conklin, manager, tied in with the Junior high school's 15th anniversary, bringing Mayor, city officials, school band, etc., to theatre. They also induced American Legion to sell first poppy on stage, resulting in Legion parade and large attendance.

At the Albany, Thomas Wright, manager, and at the State, David Levin, manager, and at the Rivoli, J. Beverly Anderson, manager, in New Brunswick, all started Jubilee with big auto parade. The State's bally for "The Great Dictator" used nine youths dressed as Charlie Chaplin. Window display of lettered turtles for "Rookies on Parade" showing at Rivoli attracted. Spectators who saw turtles line up to spell "Rookies" were to have been admitted free.

Governor Bricker Issues Proclamation

In Nat Holt's division of theatres in Cleveland and Columbus, Ohio, the Jubilee created a great deal of attention after Gov. Bricker signed official proclamation for drive. The Palace in Cleveland, Kenneth H. Means, manager, Clem Pope, publicity, arranged with radio station for interviews for special stage acts. They also distributed cards in Sports Arena, with Jubilee copy. At the Palace, in Columbus, City Manager Harry Schreiber, his assistant, Lawrence Caplane, and publicist, John L. Barcroft, started the Jubilee with a parade in which over 1,000 members of the School Boy Safety Patrol marched.

Hardie Meakin, manager and his aid, S. L. Sorkin, of Keith's, Washington, D. C., promoted endorsement of the drive by Congressmen and other district officials.

San Francisco Stresses Contest

At the Golden Gate, San Francisco, Manager George Bole, Mark Alling and Publicist Graham Kislingbury made a tie-up with leading cab company to pick the most popular singing cab driver. They also arranged a beauty contest with NTG, with winners receiving contract at NTG's Florentine gardens.

The National Publicity Department of RKO Theatres, under the direction of its head, Harry Mandel, issued a comprehensive manual on conduct of the drive. Many of the suggestions contained being used to good advantage to make the RKO Maytime Movie Jubilee a successful and profitable celebration.

REPRESENTATIVE NEWSPAPER ADS

OF A MEMORABLE EVENT

A YEAR AGO, Radio City Music Hall presented a picture which received instantaneous and unanimous acclaim from critics and public alike. It was "Pride and Prejudice" and ran for four weeks. Its leading player was lovely Greer Garson. It was produced by the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios.

On Thursday, Radio City Music Hall will celebrate the aniversary of "Pride and Prejudice" by a most unusual event, the World Premiere of an equally outstanding motion picture.

Fittingly the film chosen to signalize this occasion is M-G-M's magnificent Technicolor production BLOSSOMS IN THE DUST. Miss Garson again heads a cast of distinguished players, which also includes Walter Pidgeon, whose performance in "Man Hunt" is receiving high critical praise. Supporting roles are portrayed by such favorites as Felix Bressart, remembered by Music Hall audiences for his part in "Ninotchka", Marsha Hunt, Fay Holden and others of equally high caliber.

But beyond the excellence of its cast, BLOSSOMS IN THE DUST rises to rare heights of screen entertainment by virtue of its deeply moving and inspiring story that has in it the simple, human trutbfulness of which great drama is made . . . by its brilliant scenic effects, magically reproduced in beautiful Technicolor . . . and by the sympathetic direction of Mervyn LeRoy.

We of Radio City Music Hall are indeed happy that we have been able to prevail upon Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to permit us to play BLOSSOMS IN THE DUST at this time, many weeks before its national release date, so that we might thus fittingly and auspiciously open our Summer Season.

FIRST MEZZANINE SEATS RESERVED IN ADVANCE · CIRCLE 6-4600

An Unsolicited Letter About One of 1941's Great Movies

Grand Junction, Colo.
June 12, 1941

Mr. E. A. Patchen, Manager
Mesa Theatre,
Grand Junction, Colo.

Dear Mr. Patchen:

I always do enjoy and I always have enjoyed good pictures. Some time ago, while on a trip, I saw "Cheers for Miss Bishop." It made such an impression on me that I felt I wanted to say to you that I think it is one of the finest pictures from all standpoints—entertainment, acting, beauty and gripping story—that I have seen in recent years. It deserves, richly, all the popularity it is enjoying.

Very truly yours,

Walter Walker

Publisher, The Daily Sentinel.

"Cheers for Miss Bishop" Starts Sunday at the Mesa Theatre

(Below) From the Doob-Emerling portfolio ads, prepared for the Loew's Theatres playing the Columbia combination, this 110 lines on 2 col. is selected as an instance of how the program was advertised in a number of situations.

Tali Esen Morgan, noted musical author and conductor, died Monday night, June 30th, at Asbury Park, N. J. He was 84 years old.

Founder of the International Correspondence Schools of Music in Scranton, Pa., and conductor of several famous Welsh choirs, Dr. Morgan was responsible for the start of many musicians and singers and a close personal friend of such great artists as Schumann-Heink; Lillian Nordica; Albert Spalding; Richard Crooks, Eddie Johnson, Francon Davies and many others.

Surviving Dr. Morgan are two sons: Oscar A., executive of Paramount Pictures, Inc., and Kays B., Asbury Park attorney, and three daughters.

Richard Carle, Stage and Film Comedian, Dies

Richard Carle, comedian and character actor on the stage and screen for many years, died in Hollywood, Cal., Saturday, June 28th. He would have been 70 years old on July 7th.

Following a successful career in musical comedies and comic opera he went to Hollywood in 1916 and appeared in some 40 feature films usually in mock-solemn portrayals of butlers and crochety old millionaires. His most recent film was "That Uncertain Feeling," currently being distributed by United Artists. Among the many pictures in which he appeared were "Seven Sinners" with Marlene Dietrich; "The Bride Came Home," with Claudette Colbert; "Remember?", "Outcast" and "One Night in the Tropics."

Otto Kanturek

Otto Kanturek, Twentieth Century-Fox director-cameraman, was klled with an assistant, Jack Parry, and a British pilot when a plane in which he was making shots for "A Yank in the R.A.F." crashed near London, England, Friday, June 27th. A native of Vienna, he worked with various newsreels abroad and for Alexander Korda, Erich Pommer and other producers on the Continent and in England. He was placed under contract to Twentieth Century-Fox a year ago and became an American citizen. He leaves his wife and a one-year-old child in this country.

Albert C. Cornell

Albert C. Cornell, 62, secretary of the National Carbon Co., New York, and of several of its affiliated companies, died Monday, June 30th, at his summer home in Milford, Conn. Funeral services were held Tuesday from his home in Tuckahoe, N. Y.

Levi E. Stitzman

Funeral services were held in Reading, Pa., for Levi Stitzman, 71, organizer and officer of the Reading Theatrical Union, affiliated with the IATSE, who died in that city Wednesday, June 25th. He was an actor for many years, and later was employed in Reading theatres. His wife, a daughter and three sons survive.

John Monroe

John Monroe, owner of Forepaugh's theatre, historic landmark in Philadelphia, died in that city Thursday, June 26th, at the Abington Hospital following an operation. Mr. Monroe, whose family had been in the theatrical business for many years, was one of the most respected men of the local film fraternity and was property man of his Variety Club at the time of his death. Three sons, who will continue the operation of the theatre, and five daughters survive.

Ignace Paderewski Dies In New York

The art of Ignace Paderewski, who died in New York on Sunday, June 29th, of pneumonia at the age of 80, is recorded for posterity in a motion picture. The Polish pianist in 1937 played "Moonlight Sonata" in the feature of that title made by London Films and released in America by United Artists.

The dean of pianists and a founder of the Polish Government which was created at the end of the last World War, died in his suite at the Buckingham Hotel, an exile from his again dismembered native land. He had been ill four days.

Since 1939 he had not played the piano except on rare occasions, but until the time of his death he was intensely interested in his other great love, his native Poland.

He was born November 6th, 1860, and shortly after the turn of the 20th century had gained renown as a pianist. By 1910 there was hardly a virtuoso on the international concert stage whose fame equalled his.

When the first World War broke out, he took up the cause of Poland, then dismembered among Russia, Germany and Austria, and worked feverishly to interest the Allies in restoring it as a country of Europe.

With an Allied victory and the restoration of the country Mr. Paderewski became Prime Minister and devoted the next six years to his official duties. In 1921, however, he returned to the United States and made 11 concert tours and became recognized throughout the world in the years following as the greatest pianist of his time.

When Poland once again came into the international spotlight and was overrun by the German Government, the aged pianist once more assumed an active role in his country's affairs. He was named vice premier of the Polish War Council and kept in close touch with his country's affairs from his apartment in New York.

He is survived by his sister, Mrs. Antonina Wilkonska.

Tierneys Lose Suit

Mr. and Mrs. Howard S. Tierney, parents of the film actress Gene Tierney, who sued for an injunction to restrain Twentieth Century-Fox from signing a new contract with their daughter, lost their appeal in the superior court in Bridgeport, Conn., on Thursday, June 26th. Mr. and Mrs. Tierney claimed that they still controlled their daughter's career through a corporation they established when Miss Tierney went on the stage, the Belle-Tier Corp., which retained 25 per cent of her earnings. Judge Munger suggested that a proper suit would charge breach of contract.

Radio Team To Appeal

Winton & Laird, attorneys for the radio team of Tom, Dick and Harry will appeal the verdict of Judge Barnes of the Federal court in Chicago in favor of the team's suit to obtain an injunction against, and damages from, RKO for the use of "Tom, Dick and Harry" as the title of the new Ginger Rogers pictures. The court found no unfair competition against the radio team in the use of the title by the film company.

Fox Wins Suit

The application of Harry Seamon for an injunction to restrain Twentieth Century-Fox from exhibiting "Tin Pan Alley" was denied by Justice Ferdinand A. Pecora of the New York supreme court. The court ruled that the use of the phrase "Hurtig & Seamon's" in the dialogue was merely an incidental use of the name, and therefore did not violate the New York Civil Rights Law.

IN COURTS

RKO Sued for Fight Film Exhibition

An injunction suit seeking to restrain a scheduled showing of the Joe Louis-Billy Conn fight films at the Orpheum theatre in Xenia, Ohio, has been filed in the common pleas court in that city by J. L. Hatcher, operator of the independent Ohio theatre, against RKO, Xenia Amusement Co., operating the Xenia theatre and the Chakeres Amusement Co., operating the Orpheum.

The plaintiff charges RKO with violation of contract in selling the picture away from him under his contract which gives him first run on all pictures released by the company.

Ownership Complaint Filed

A complaint has been filed in the superior court in Walla Walla, Wash., by the Keylor Grand theatre, against John A. Cameron and others seeking absolute ownership of the theatre. It was alleged that the contract between the plaintiff and Mr. Cameron specified that $11,500 be paid at the rate of $1,000 a year for the theatre. The contract was signed by H. T. Keylor, president of the company; Edna Keylor Smith and John A. Cameron. Mr. Cameron took possessison of the theatre in June, 1934, and entered into an agreement in January, 1936, with the Junior Amusement Company transferring the original contract and the theatre. The amusement concern paid $3,200 on the contract and the theatre company presented notification of its intention to terminate the deal.

Carmen Injunction Dissolved

Judge James E. Chenot of the circuit court in Detroit handed down a decree in the Carmen theatre case last week dissolving the injunction applying to Gorlick and Marshall and Greater Detroit Theatres, so that the Carmen, recently constructed, would be allowed to reopen. The dismissal was granted upon proof of compliance with an earlier supreme court order to dissociate the Miskinis interests entirely from the Carmen. The injunction remains effective for four years against the Miskinis interests preventing Joseph Miskinis from being associated with the theatre for that period, in pursuance of an agreement made when he and Joseph Stoia dissolved a partnership in opposition theatres.

"Superman" Rights Disputed

Republic Pictures on Thursday, June 26th, filed a $50,000 damage suit in the New York supreme court against Detective and Superman, Inc. The complaint charges the defendant with breaching a contract made in April, 1940, under which the plaintiff was to have the right to make a serial on the comic cartoon strip "Superman." Fleischer Studios subsequently obtained the right to make an animated cartoon film based on the strip.

Lone Ranger Suit Won

In a decision handed down in Spartanburg, S. C., by Judge C. C. Wyche of the Federal court, Lee Powell, actor, was granted full right to advertise himself as "The Lone Ranger" of talking pictures. Mr. Powell was sued by The Lone Ranger, Inc., and Wallace Brothers Circus for damages and alleged infringement of the Lone Ranger rights.

Song Suit Dismissed

Judge Edward A. Conger of the Federal court in New York dismissed the suit of Thornton W. Allen against Walt Disney Productions, RKO, and Irving Berlin, Inc., ruling that the song "Some Day My Prince Will Come," played in the film "Snow White," did not plagiarize the plaintiff's "Old Eli March."

POLICY NOTE

WHILE there are maybe several new problems ahead for this industry to solve, one vital issue, long debated, the issue of the basic function of the amusement screen, has been, for a while at least, settled. It is now more than just apparently agreed that the controlling policy of production and exhibition is to be the presentation of entertainment for the customers. This, you will recall, has been the vigorously advanced contention of Motion Picture Herald for the last several embattled years—while pressure, mainly from the Left, has contended for a screen of "social consciousness", the Left's particular order of social consciousness and political purpose.

Contemporary product and product announcements are slightly more than 99 per cent dedicated to the purpose of selling admissions at the box office.

This is progress.

The decision, if it is decision and not mere gravitation, comes after most everything else has been tried in some fashion, and at large expense both in dollars spent, in dollars the product did not draw, and in alienation of customers.

THERE would be no occasion to set all this down now if it were not that the motion picture collectively as an industry has an exceedingly short memory and in moments of affluence tends to revert to processes and practises already proved expensively invasive.

Just now those persons and organizations of the Left, who, before the Nazi-Stalin pact, were so laden with social consciousness and endless devices of pressure on the screen and forums of Hollywood, will be seeing the beckoning of opportunity again. This is an inevitable incidental effect of the Russo-German war. Stalin is now about to be "Comrade" again.

So recently as June 14, and only a short interval before the new phase of the war, the news columns of the Herald presented the declaration of the Fourth American Writers Congress of "an unlimited cultural emergency", with cheers for Stalin, boos for Roosevelt, condemnation of every American endeavour to resist invasions and imported issues. The League of American Writers claims a membership of 750. One-third of those members are in the Hollywood chapter.

Hollywood and the screen may expect to hear from this sector any day now.

There is ample confusion, and in high places, about the menace of the Red Left. For instance, Dr. James Bryant Conant, president of Harvard University, speaking before the National Education Association last week, as reported in the daily press, said Communism never had been the same kind of danger to the United States as Nazism had become with the fall of France, " . . . because the Communist ideology has never been combined with a military force which could threaten this hemisphere . . . "

While Dr. Conant was speaking, officers of the Bookniga Corporation, propaganda arm of Red Russia, engaged in the distribution of Communist literature, were on trial and being convicted in Federal Court in Washington for failure to register as alien agents.

Whether Dr. Conant knows it or not, the Russian Red invasion of the United States began before there were any Nazis, and has done perhaps quite as much damage in some directions as though it had been an invasion by force of arms. If there was any cognizance of that in the speech to the educators, it did not appear in the lengthy press reports.

AS for the motion picture position, it may be observed that Hollywood has most valiantly resisted Nazi pressures and devices, direct and indirect, and that probably there are few or no Nazis on the production payrolls. That has not always been the case with the Reds and the Left.

In any event, the motion picture has arrived at an all-entertainment policy, the service of the customers with what they are looking for in the marquee lights. It is even to be noted that "escape", which was first used from the Left as a term of opprobrium, has been appearing here and there in some executive expressions and speeches as a trade term for entertainment pictures.

Happily, too, the trade hears less about films to "teach democracy" and to educate the nation to "liberty". As has been remarked before, the best way to teach democracy is to operate it; the best way to teach liberty is to have it. Ducks do not have to learn to swim.

CANDY sales appear to be getting more attention than pictures in some of the theatres of the land, with the whimsical result reported that some managers, driven by quotas, have taken to eating the stock at their own expense.

THROBBING New York is below this cliffside window. Down there in the Garden of All Nations where the RCA building levels into a plateau, a caretaker is clipping a postage stamp lawn, a spear at a time, in the little place that spells England. Two Rockettes, with more grace than skill, think they are playing badminton on the Music Hall roof. ¶ Way out yonder, a thousand miles or so beyond the haze over the industrial New Jersey shore, the wheat harvest has begun. Roaring "combines", tanks of peace, are gathering the grain, and it perhaps means more than grain has ever meant before, this world being what it is not. The musing moment brings recollections of blessed memory: hot July in a Kansas hayfield, and at noon, in the shade, a swig of buttermilk from a stone jug, spring house cooled and rich with flecks of gold in it, and of an awakening in a sultry night on the great plains to feel cold air come in a wave and with it the patter and tinkle and drip of drought-breaking rain on a shingled roof. ¶ Very like a bat-out-of-hell, a pursuit plane rips the New York sky, demonstrating, searing our reverie with white-hot fact. The telephone rings and demands. ¶ This is 1941.

This Week in the News

Booming Box-offices

A RAINY Fourth of July weekend proved a happy holiday for thousands of exhibitors in the U. S., sending millions of vacationers to theatres and smashing records at their boxoffices. The Wall Street Journal on Wednesday noted the boom weekend and estimated that receipts topped those of July 4th, 1940, by from 40 to 60 per cent. At New York, business was rated at 10 to 30 per cent over last year.

The Wall Street Journal, reporting that receipts since Memorial Day have been running on a weekly average five per cent ahead of 1940, observed that the figures might presage a substantial upturn in film business. An upturn in recent months was shown in a MOTION PICTURE HERALD graph published June 14th.

Last weekend's holiday peak was described as general throughout the country, with both first run and neighborhood theatres profiting. Only beach and resort proprietors and concessionaires appeared gloomy as they counted their weekend tills.

Many theatres halted performances in mid-afternoon on Independence Day to pick-up the broadcasts of the President's speech and the Pledge of Allegiance led by Chief Justice Harlan F. Stone. At the Criterion in New York F. H. LaGuardia, U. S. Director of Civilian Defense, and Mayor of the city, present with his wife and children, joined an audience of 2,000 in the salute to the flag.

Uniforms

GROWING exhibitor cooperation in cutting motion picture admission prices for soldiers and sailors in uniform (see page 25) received quick support in Washington Wednesday when Representative E. E. Cox, of Georgia, said he would press for consideration of a measure specifically exempting men of the service from federal ticket taxes. The Congressman introduced his bill last week when there was some doubt as to whether the new tax law would carry such an exemption. With the revenue bill still under debate, and possibly not due for passage until October, Cox said he would ask Congress to pass his bill immediately to relieve $21 a month trainees of the tax burden.

Meanwhile the House Ways and Means committee studied further changes in the admission tax which is part of the revenue bill. Last week the tax was scaled to begin at ten cents instead of 21 as at present. A plea for the elimination of exemptions which give competitive amusements tax—free status was heeded, it was understood.

Zanuck Would Cash In

WHETHER Twentieth Century Fox can "legally" hold its trade showings for exhibitors under the consent decree in theatres with paying audiences, although the company itself will not collect the receipts, was a question referred to the home office by the studio this week, after Darryl F. Zanuck, vice-president in charge of production, had proposed the method with the argument that presence of paying audiences would give exhibitor customers "audience reaction."

Meanwhile, even as the Zanuck proposal headed East, the New York home office announced, and detailed, its first five trade showings in 32 key cities, from July 21st to 26th—none of them in theatres, all of them in company screening rooms as reported on page 13.

Dark, Dark Checking

INDEPENDENT exhibitors in Philadelphia have expressed concern, and annoyance as well, over the fact that some distributors are "dark checking" their houses, that is, secret checking unknown to the exhibitor. The exhibitors threaten to bring a test suit to determine what rights, if any, distributors have to "dark check" theatres. It is felt that if any such legal action is taken, however, it would be instituted by an exhibitor organization rather than any individual exhibitor.

The talk along Philadelphia's film row is that certain distributors are "dark checking" theatres to gain information on possible "sleepers" among pictures bought outright. The exhibitors maintain that such a practice is unfair, giving the distributor a distorted picture of the theatre's earnings, and, more importantly, might lead to unfair adjustments on forthcoming deals. If such be the motives in the practice, the exhibitors ask that the distributors make adjustments when an outright buy or a big percentage show fails at the box-office.

Reds Send Pictures

RADIOPHOTOS from Moscow, the first ever transmitted from the USSR, were released to the press at New York on Tuesday by the Radio Corporation of America. Stills from newsreels and pictures of film people and events have frequently been flashed from abroad, but never from the Soviet. The three prints showed Red infantry, motorcycle troops and what was claimed to be a downed Nazi warplane. The prints were good, but not on a par, in photo drama or propaganda, with the extensive album of war views sent over the airwaves from Berlin.

RCA emphasized that the pictures were received in an experimental transmission from Moscow. Press services got copies gratis. RCA engineers indicated that if Tass, the Red news agency, or any other Soviet agency so requested, it could apply to the FCC for a permit to undertake the picture transmission on a commercial basis.

Warners ABT Buy

Confirmation of the cabled report from London of the purchase by Warner Brothers of 50 per cent of the control of the 400 Associated British Theatres from the widow of John Maxwell was heard everywhere, unofficially, in New York and London film circles this week, but Warner officials in New York refused to confirm, deny, or comment.

Inquiry at the Warner home office in New York brought word that Max Milder, WB British manager, and Harry Warner, both in California, were the only persons who could confirm the sale. At Hollywood both kept silence. From London it was reported that Warners had outbid British interests in heavy competition for the majority control of ABT. The British government is understood to have blocked acquisition of complete control by the Warners, limiting foreign holdings in theatres by requiring payment in dollar exchange rather than blocked credits. Sale price was reported to have reached $2.00 per share, well above the market price of ABT securities.

Films and Fashion

LONG a factor in contributing to the style and beauty consciousness of the American woman, the influence of motion picture exploitation continues currently as theatremen feature seasonal fashion shows and bathing beauty pageants as added program attractions.

Activities in these directions guided by enterprising showmen in such far removed situations as Fairbury, Nebr., Clarksville, Ark., and Belen, New Mex., are among the ticket-selling promotions set forth this week in Managers' Round Table, starting on page 55.

'Blacklist' Ready

EXPORTERS who returned from Washington conferences this week reveal that the U. S. is planning to give "limited publications" of its "blacklist" of Latin American companies and agents guilty of subversive activities with whom American exporters are transacting business. The list, existence of which has been consistently denied by Administration officials, will be sent to all exporters, importers and others who have an immediate interest in the subject. Motion picture companies and persons presumably are involved, with those in other lines. On May 24th, MOTION PICTURE HERALD pointed out, "Nearly 20 allegedly Nazi operatives now employed under various camouflages in offices and activities of the distribution offices for American films in the Latin Americas have had the attention of the assorted U. S. intelligence services. A list, with complete dossier attached, including names, real and assumed, nationalities, real and alleged, and detailed as to European and other backgrounds, has been compiled and delivered into the confidential custody of U. S. officials," the HERALD added.

"Presumably," the HERALD predicted, "New York home offices will be getting their separate installments of the documents shortly, when U. S. operatives have completed their observations on the scene. Interesting vacancies will be created, some by 'resignation.'"

Blocking Blocks-of-5

MID-WEEK Minnesota exhibitors, and the industry elsewhere still awaited the long expected filing of a "test suit" by the five majors in the consent decree, to prevent enforcement of that state's anti-decree law, and also to determine its constitutionality. The law forces distributors to sell their entire season's product, and so contravenes the decree's stipulation that films be sold in blocks of five.

The suit was to be filed in a state court, Minneapolis. It was expected to ask injunctive relief, so the majors might sell 1941-42 product per decree; and a ruling on the law's validity. United Artists, exponent of single picture selling, was expected to join the five decree-bound majors.

The office of the Minnesota Attorney General said last week it would contest the majors' suit.

Northwest Allied, proponent of the state law, also will resist efforts to upset it. Fred Strom, the unit's secretary, said last week after touring half the state, that sentiment was united.

"There is still need for the Neely Bill," the Motion Picture Research Council, prime supporter of that measure, said last week, in San Francisco. The Council said its Washington representatives were still functioning and would press for the bill "after the present emergency."

Canadian Tax Troubles

CANADIAN theatre circles were reverberating this week with reports of the Canadian Government's change of heart concerning a reported exemption of the Federal amusement tax on spectator sports. Last winter, when the Dominion Government imposed a 20 per cent wartime amusement tax on gross theatre receipts, sports were not included until protests from exhibitors, who claimed they were carrying an unfair burden, forced officials to bring sports under the tax levy.

The present proposed exemption came about, it is said, due to losses in senior football and hockey club operations. If the exemption is granted, Canadian exhibitors are expected to again act to force tax levies on sports, on the ground that the 20 per cent levy on exhibitors alone is both unfair and burdensome.

George Blair Retires

GEORGE A. BLAIR, for some four decades sales and customers' relations executive of the Eastman Kodak Company, officially retired from active service Friday of this week. There was a function in his honor at the Rochester Club in Rochester, N. Y. Mr. Blair, who has for most of the years of the motion picture industry been a familiar figure in New York and Hollywood, was long the general sales manager and operated in intimate relation to George Eastman. Mr. Blair entered the photographic business with the American Aristotype Company of Jamestown, N. Y., which manufactured and sold photographic printing paper. When the Eastman company acquired Aristotype it also acquired Mr. Blair. Now that he has retired, it is understood that Mr. Blair, whose home is in Rochester, will be taking a trip to Hollywood to overlook the situation which he once had to so intensively look over. Mr. Blair is 70, and hearty.

Lawes Looks Filmwise

CULMINATING a career which he described in part in the 1933 Warner production of his book, "20,000 Years in Sing Sing," Lewis E. Lawes, one of the nation's leading penologists and Warden of Sing Sing for 21 years, announced Wednesday that he would resign on July 16th, to devote his time to "causes which have most interested" him. The 57-year-old prison official has written many articles and books dealing with prisoners. Last year he wrote "The Castle on the Hudson" which was also produced by Warners. It is now reported that among the offers he is considering are "one from a motion picture company, two from universities, others from radio and publishing companies to do some writing."

PARAMOUNT, 20TH-FOX SET TRADE SHOWINGS FOR BLOCKS-OF-FIVE

Conventions Announced by Warners, Paramount; MGM Sets Three Additional Cities for Advance Screenings

The identities of the first blocks of features of four of the 'Big 5' consent decree signatories have now been established, those of MGM, RKO, Paramount and 20th-Fox—Warners still to be heard from. Also established are the dates for the first advance trade showings for exhibitors for the same four companies.

Designations of 1941 sales conventions this week by Warners and Paramount leaves all but MGM among the large distributors to dispose of policy-and-product conference with field staffs.

Titles, Dates Listed

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer listed the titles and trade showing dates of its first block, of three, in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on June 28, pages 28 and 29, setting showings in 62 cities for "Lady Be Good," "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" and "Down in San Diego," to run between July 14th to August 1st.

RKO listed the titles and trade showing dates of its first block of five, in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, on July 5, page 35, setting showing in 32 cities for "Parachute Battalion," "Father Takes a Wife," "The Devil and Daniel Webster" (tentative title), "Citizen Kane" and "Lady Scarface," to run between July 14th and 19th.

Paramount, on Tuesday, announced advance trade showing dates for "Nothing But the Truth," "Hold Back the Dawn," "Buy Me That Town," "Henry Aldrich for President" and "New York Town," to run between July 28 and 30, as listed this week in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, on pages 30 and 31.

Twentieth Century-Fox, likewise on Tuesday, announced advance trade showings for its first five: "Charley's Aunt," "Wild Geese Calling," "Sun Valley Serenade," "Dressed to Kill" and "Private Nurse," to run between July 22nd and 25th, as listed this week in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, on pages 18 and 19.

Policy on selling 1941-42 pictures singly as well as in full blocks-of-five is still undecided by the sales chiefs of at least four of the five consent decree signatories. A canvass of the sales departments indicated that, with the exception of RKO, a "wait and see" attitude prevails in this matter. Sales managers will endeavour to peddle their new season's product in the quintuple lots permitted by the decree. If special pictures come along, or if there is special demand for individual pictures, it is expected likely that most will license films singly, however.

As one major spokesman explained, "You will offer pictures to the operator in the best combination, or block, that you can contrive. If he wants to buy just one or two pictures from the group, he can. Sales are not often refused. But naturally prices, pro rata, for a single picture will be more expensive than if it was purchased in a group." This attitude also seemed to fit the unofficial expressions of other sales executives.

RKO, alone of the Big Five, has set a policy lumping sales into the blocks-of-five pattern. First of the consenting distributors to hold a convention and announce its new season product RKO will tender its pictures in 'well defined, balanced packages.' Salesmen are expected to close deals for the entire group rather than negotiate separate sales for pictures from one or more groups. Only RKO pictures to be offered individually in the new season, according to Andy Smith, sales manager, will be Walt Disney features and the Samuel Goldwyn productions scheduled for RKO distribution.

Warner Brothers, according to pre-convention comments by Gradwell Sears, sales head, and other executives, appears to favor a policy of unit sales. The company will peddle top pictures singly. Others will be grouped in small blocks of two, three or four pictures. The composition of blocks-of-five, it was indicated will be fairly flexible. The company is the last of the consenting distributors to announce the makeup of its first block-of-five. The first pictures to be packaged will not be named until the sales meeting at Chicago on July 28th.

Warners' "Sergeant York," now in pre-release run, will be offered alone for 1941-42 exhibition, it was indicated this week. It is likely also that "Navy Blues" and Captain of the Clouds" will also be sold singly, in the Fall. Other major Warner and First National releases are scheduled for similar individual treatment.

Paramount policy on single sales also pends the company's convocation of sales representatives. The first Paramount block-of-five was announced this week by Neil F. Agnew, general sales manager, but there was no indication as to whether he would permit single as well as group sales.

Twentieth Century-Fox's policy on single sales is also characterized as "fluid." Herman Wobber, general manager of distribution, indicated at Hollywood two weeks ago, adding that the company would offer single pictures, combinations, and block-of-five when selling gets under way following the Fox convention. The meeting takes place in Hollywood July 16th to July 19th. Mr. Wobber predicted that pictures will be blocked both for variety and balance,

"Big Five's" Procedure for Previewing Brings Storms from "Churchill Group"

"Big Five" features hereafter will be made available to the press for reviewing in the following order: (1) The trade press, (2) weekly magazines, (3) Hollywood's press-radio columnists, commentators, gossipers and bellringers.

This was decided in New York on Monday by sales, publicity and legal executives of the five companies, who explained, "New plans of procedure for the previewing of pictures were found necessary in order to fulfill the requirements of the consent decree".

Previewing of pictures, they decided, "is strictly a function for distribution". Heretofore, production and the Hollywood press pretty much dictated the manner and method of previewing, with Hollywood's writers the favorites.

The home office executives declared that the advance trade showings for exhibitors would be open to the trade press, "since the primary function of the trade press is the dissemination of information for the trade itself".

The Hollywood press and radio commentators will be shown pictures for review when the pictures open for public exhibition in local theatres, this practice being adopted, it was said, following discussions with syndicate heads and newspaper publishers.

It was the previous demand of Hollywood's columnists and commentators that they be given priority over all others in previewing that took the matter to home-office managements for settlement, following much controversy between studio press agents and the Hollywood writers, led by Douglas Churchill, Hollywood correspondent for the New York Times.

The new order of the "Big Five", intended to abolish the special privileges of Hollywood writers, brought anticipated expressions from "the Churchill group", reflected by Jimmy Fidler, radio's original bellringing reviewer, now writing for the McNaught Syndicate, who declared to his readership, "This means that major studio bosses, compelled by a new law [a consent decree] to let independent theatre owners book each picture on its individual merit, are moving to forestall advance criticism which might guide your neighborhood exhibitor in giving you an intelligent choice of entertainment." Mr. Fidler did not tell his readers that it was the independent exhibitor who complained loudly and long over premature previewings such as he gave over the radio.

Edwin Schallert, film critic of the Los Angeles Times, predicted "an early breakdown" of the new system when a member of the "Big Five" jumps the gun with a preview of a picture of which it is particularly proud.

Meanwhile, Hollywood's 300 columnists, critics, and commentators were reported all at sea as they watched their long-held special privileges vanishing.

Paramount's Five Will Be Shown July 28th-30th

In step in the parade of majors in the consent decree who are announcing the names of the pictures they will include for their first "block-of-five" films in the consent decree system of selling, effective September 1st, Paramount on Tuesday said the pictures would be "Nothing but the Truth," "Hold Back the Dawn," "Buy Me that Town," "Henry Aldrich for President," and "New York Town"—and that trade showings of these would be held from July 28th to July 30th, inclusive.

Beginning next Friday, the company will hold a series of regional sales meetings, to discuss new product and sales policies, according to Neil Agnew, in charge of distribution. Mr. Agnew is to address the meetings in New York and Boston. Charles Reagan, assistant sales manager, is to preside at the Chicago, Dallas and Kansas City meetings. George Smith, western sales manager, will supervise the Los Angeles and Denver meetings; and J. J. Unger, eastern divisional manager, will head the Boston, Philadelphia, New York, and Cleveland meetings.

Mr. Agnew commented, anent the five films chosen for the first decree "block," that "these pictures were selected as Paramount's initial group-of-five because the boxoffice returns show that comedy, drama, and action melodrama are the types of entertainment which the public is buying while the world is going through this critical period. We feel that this quintet of pictures offers the exhibitor the maximum in diversified entertainment."

Paramount's theatre partner-associates will meet at Shawnee-on-the-Delaware, Pennsylvania, next Tuesday and Wednesday, to discuss current problems. Among presiding executives will be Leonard Goldenson, theatre head.

MGM Adds Showings, Changes Field Staff

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has made arrangements for trade showings in three additional cities of pictures to be released after September 1, 1941, making a total of 65 where the company will screen for exhibitors. The added cities are Augusta, Maine; Pheonix, Ariz., and Spokane, Wash.

Following are the additional showings:

Capitol Theatre, Main Street, Augusta. "Lady Be Good," July 14; "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," July 21; "Down in San Diego," July 28. Each of these showings will start at 11 A. M.

Strand Theatre, 110 West Washington St., Phoenix. "Lady Be Good," July 14; "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," July 21; "Down in San Diego," July 28. Each of these showings will start at 10 A. M.

State Theatre, Sprague and Lincoln Streets, Spokane. "Lady Be Good," July 17; "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," July 24; "Down in San Diego," July 31. Each of these showings will start at 9:30 A. M.

MGM effected a further streamlining of its field selling forces this week, following a trend established among the 'Big 5' for the new order of selling under the decree. The company announced 33 promotions.

Four office managers were advanced to salesmen: Fred Rippingale, Washington; Tom Lucy, Atlanta; "Tony" Philbin, Dallas, and Eldon Briwa, New Orleans.

Succeeding these as office managers are, re-

"Following completion of arrangements to give exhibitors full delivery and full service on the current season's program," Gradwell L. Sears, Warner general sales manager, announced Monday in New York that plans had been concluded to hold the Warner-First National-Vitaphone 1941-42 national sales convention July 28th, to August 1st, inclusive, at the Blackstone Hotel, Chicago. Columbia Reports No Exhibitor Holdbacks

Columbia, with 9,800 accounts last year, and more expected this year, has noted no "holding back" by exhibitor customers approached for new contracts, Abe Montague, the company's general sales manager, said Tuesday, at the New York home office.

Mr. Montague expects more accounts this year because of the present tempo of selling, he said. The decree, which some observers predicted would make exhibitors wait for product from the majors bound to the consent decree selling system, effective September 1st, has not harmed Columbia; it has benefited it, Mr. Montague thinks, remarking that exhibitors are being assured of a "steady" product supply by dealing with a major not bound by the decree.

The Columbia executive noted that, while the 9,800 accounts will be "topped" this year, a very large gain should not be expected, because, when a major company reaches that mark, it is nearing "saturation point."

Anent the publicized "streamlining"—i.e., decentralization—of the sales staffs of other companies, Mr. Montague remarked that Columbia is a pioneer in this practice.

Having begun several years ago, it has now decentralized its sales department about 75 per cent, he asserted, and predicted "a day" when 90 per cent control would be exercised by the district executives.

The trade-show practice enforced by the decree is a practice always observed by Columbia, he said, noting, however, that the exact form now being shaped, was not Columbia's.

Columbia's studio is farther ahead with product now than it ever has been, Mr. Montague said, noting the difficulty of speeding up a studio and planning pictures, and paying tribute to other companies whose studios have accelerated production—especially Paramount.

He said a product announcement would appear in the trade press shortly, listing a very large number of pictures the company will have ready by the start of the decree selling season.

Selling by Columbia will be as before—en masse—he said; however, it will also adhere to the practice of "pre-releasing" certain single pictures, he added.

This pre-releasing aids the company in determining advertising and marketing policy, he noted.

RKO Ready for Field Shows and Selling

RKO Radio will hold its national film spotlight the week of July 14th with the trade showings of the first complete block of five productions under the consent decree. The screenings will mark the first projection of a full complement of features under the new rulings. The trade showings will be held mostly in theatres.

Sales executives of the home office as well as the entire RKO Radio field selling force will be in the exchange cities to meet exhibitors during the trade-show week. Ned E. Depinet, sales manager Andy Smith, eastern sales manager Bob Mochrie and western sales manager Cresson E. Smith will visit the branch offices. District managers will attend at least one trade showing in each branch of their respective territories.

In commenting on the trade showings, Vice-president Depinet said, "Surely no one will dispute that the exhibitor is in a better position to sell his pictures to the public after they have been screeened and he has learned first-hand of their general merit and specific box-office angles."

Mr. Depinet said the RKO Radio sales organization would be ready immediately after the series of screenings to negotiate license agreements.

RKO Radio will soon trade show three of its Westerns which star Tim Holt for the second year. The Holt units will be sold following their special trade showings with the release of Holt number one set for October 10th.

SOME CUT, SOME RAISE ADMISSIONS

Throughout the United States and Canada theatres are tinkering with admissions to improve the receipts at the box office.

In Chicago, an increase of ten cents was instituted at the State-Lake, a Balaban & Katz theatre. The theatre has a policy of films and stage shows, booking film players and bands for headliners.

More than a score of exhibitors on the West Coast have reported that they will reduce their admission prices. Fox West Coast has cut the price at the Alto theatre from 30 cents to 20 cents. In some instances, among independents, two-for-one tickets and service-charge passes have been brought back. Informed exhibitors in that section feel, however, that fair trade practices will soon outlaw that policy.

Prices at four theatres in New Glasgow, N. S., which went up 20 per cent to meet the Dominion tax, have been reduced ten per cent. The theatres have agreed to absorb half the tax which was formerly taken care of by the public. Other theatres in suburban territories are reported to be following suit.

Breen Named Producer's Association Director

The Association of Motion Picture Producers at a scheduled meeting in Hollywood on Monday elected Joseph I. Breen, new head of production at RKO, to the post of director. Mr. Breen succeeds his predecessor at RKO, J. R. McDonough, on the producers' governing board. Will H. Hays reported to the producers on the international situation. His forecasts on the foreign exchange situation were reported to be pessimistic.

Two Theatres Acquired

Joseph Kingsley has taken over two theatres in Manhattan, formerly operated by Nat Harlbran, the Beverly at 823 Third Avenue, and the Clifton, 1034 Second Avenue. Ben Thanhauser was the agent in the negotiations.

Criterion Given Continuance in 'Goods' Action

Federal Judge Leon R. Yankwich of the Los Angeles district on Monday granted Criterion Pictures Corporation a 30 day continuance in which to file a new cause of action in its suit against the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America for refusing a Production Code Administration Seal in 1937 to "Damaged Goods."

Criterion, and its president, Phil Goldstone seek $1,500,000 triple damages and $25,000 legal costs from the MPPDA, the Association of Motion Picture Producers, Will H. Hays, Joseph I. Breen and other administrators of the PCA.

The defense counsel at the first hearing before Judge Yankwich on Monday argued that no cause of action had been cited in the original complaint and asked that the case be dismissed or a summary judgment entered in behalf of the defendants. It was also asserted that the action was excluded by the statute of limitations, the filing date having been more than three years after the date of the PCA's refusal of a code seal. The firm of Mitchell, Silberberg, Roth and Knupp appeared as counsel for the defendants.

Criterion was not a member of the MPPDA and had not subscribed to the Production Code. Joseph I. Breen, former director of the PCA submitted a deposition that "Damaged Goods" had been denied a seal on the ground that it discussed venereal disease in violation of Section II, Paragraph 7 of the Code.

Consolidated Acts To Buy Preferred

At a special meeting of its stockholders held in Wilmington, Delaware last Tuesday, Consolidated Film Industries, Inc. amended its charter authorizing the corporation to purchase its preferred stock. The amendment removed a requirement that the firm could not purchase its outstanding preferred stock if it is in default in payment of any fixed cumulative dividend on preferred stock or if the net current assets of the firm are less than $2,400,000. Arrearages on the preferred stock on April 1st, amounted to $9.25 a share for the company. According to officials of the corporation, no plan for purchase of its outstanding preferred stock has been set for the present.

$600,000 Libel Suit

Claiming $600,000 in damages against RKO, three Fall River residents have filed a libel suit in Massachusetts Federal court, this week, contending they were libeled in the picture "Primrose Path" which was taken from Victoria Lincoln's popular novel. The plaintiffs are Minna and Joel Wright and Vera Burdett, each of whom ask $200,000 in damages. They claim Miss Lincoln used them as the basis of her characters, depicting them unfavorably.

AGGREGATE CIRCUIT CLEARANCE OVER INDEPENDENT CURBED BY DECISION

Combined Total, Averaging 125 Days, Called "Unreasonable"; Four New Cases Filed; First Withdrawal in Philadelphia

Combined clearance of circuit houses over a competing independent averaging 125 days, is characterized as "unreasonable" and sharply reduced in a Boston arbitration decision rendered this week by Henry Channing. He upheld the complaint of Lucien Descoteaux, Manchester N. H. independent against the Big Five and the Shea Circuit's subsidiary State Operating Company. The award sets a maximum clearance of 30 days after first run and 7 days after each subsequent run among the five Shea theatres which compete with Mr. Descoteaux' houses. Costs were divided equally between complainant and defendants. The complaint, Boston's third, was filed April 5th.

The first multiple complaint in the Philadelphia area was filed on Tuesday when Abe M. Ellis, who operates an independent circuit in Philadelphia and Camden, N. J., entered three separate clearance complaints against distributors and the Warner theatre circuit. In Case No. 9, Mr. Ellis, as president of the Broad Amusement Co., Inc., operating the Broad theatre, Philadelphia, filed a complaint against RKO, Paramount and Vitagraph naming Warners' Logan, Grange and Bromley theatres, and William C. Hunt's Rockland.

Case No. 10 was filed by Mr. Ellis in the name of the Liberty-Parkside Theatres Co., Inc., of Camden, N. J., with Martin D. Ellis, A. J. Rovner, Lewis Rovner and Gertrude Handle as joint complainants for the Liberty theatre. Defendants, in addition to the Warner circuit, are Metro, Vitagraph, RKO and Paramount, and involves the Stanley, Grand and Lyric theatres, all Warner houses. Case No. 11 for the Parkside Theatre in Camden, lists the same complainants, and defendants as Case No. 10 and involves the same Warner theatres.

Chicago Circuit Files

The GCS circuit at Chicago on Wednesday demanded a clearance adjustment for its Portage theatre, naming the Big Five in what was said to be the first complaint on the grounds of prior construction and development in a suburban area. United Artists, Universal and Columbia were listed as interested parties along with the Balaban and Katz, Gateway Belpark and Will Rogers theatres.

In his decision, Mr. Channing pointed out that although there was an allegation that the distrubutors refused to license pictures except on the basis of runs subsequent to house controlled by the State Operating Company, Inc., the relief asked for was confined to a request for clearance.

"Obviously," the decision read, "it would be difficult to determine the reasonableness of existing cleaarnce, or to fix maxima beween the theatres involved," without considering the actual competitive situation in Manchester. The five Shea theatres constitute an actual administrative unit, it observed, and the three Descoteaux theatres are also operated as a unit; the theatres are fairly closely grouped, so that licenses would be naturally worked out by each of the two exhibitors, as to his own theatres, to avoid conflict in playing time and to give each the best possible income from his houses in this area, as a whole. The arbitrator considered such policy of management to be legitimate.

"The Shea houses have the only first and second and some third runs;" Mr. Channing wrote, "their 'State' theatre, with 2135 seats, is the largest and finest, usually running first of all, and having nearly twice as many seats as all the complainant's theatres put together. Descoteaux's Rex, seating 547, new and centrally located, usually runs fourth or fifth, while his Empire and Globe, primarily drawing from nearby sections in East and South Manchester, usually run fifth or subsequently."

The decision also pointed out that no mention had been made in the complaint of the Modern theatre, which might have some bearing on the complaint.

"In point of fact," the arbitrator continued, "(leaving out the Modern), the Shea theatres have, on the average, about 125 days in which to show pictures in any one or more of their five houses, before they are shown in any of the three Descoteaux theatres. Since lapse of time after a showing, before exhibition in a competing house, is the benefit an exhibitor derives from clearance, the total actual elapsed time is a material consideration. Therefore the practical effect of an award reducing clearance would be to cut this 125 days, by the number of days subtracted by the award from the clearance now predominating,—60 days after first, 14 after second and seven after third runs.

Thus if 44 days should be taken from the 81 days present aggregate clearance, the five Shea theatres, other things being equal, would still have an average of about 81 days of actual priority in playing time, instead of the present 125. The arbitrator has not been able, from any considerations presented, to justify clearance which would result in a period longer than 81 days during which the five Shea theatres should enjoy exclusive exhibition of the product. A reduction of clearance to a maximum of 30 days after first run and seven days after second run would be in line with arrangements in effect, until a few years ago, with some of the defendant distributors.

Hearings Held This Week:

Philadelphia—Cases No. 5 and 6

Settled This Week:

Boston—Case No. 3
Philadelphia—Case No. 3

"1.—The arbitrator finds that the clearance complained of is unreasonable.

"2.—The arbitrator hereby fixes the maximum number of days clearance between the theatres involved which may be granted in licenses hereafter entered into (whether or not under now-existing franchises) by the distributor defendants, or any one or more of them, parties defendant in this arbitration, with any and every exhibitor or other party, bound by this Decree, as follows:

"No consenting distributor defendant shall, in any arrangement for the use of its product with an exhibitor (in respect to any theatre in Manchester, N. H.,) a party to this proceeding, grant more than 30 days clearance, for any feature picture after a showing on first run, or more than seven days clearance on any feature picture after a showing on second run, prior to the commencement of a showing at any other of said theatres.

"Third or subsequent runs should not receive clearance over other theatres; but this award should not be construed to prevent any of said distributors from selling feature pictures for such runs in sequence."

Included in the maximum clearance fixed by the award, are clearance provisions under existing franchises or any licenses hereafter entered into pursuant to present franchises between any distributor defendant and any exhibitor a party to the proceeding. Hearings on the case were held on May 19, 20, and 21st and final arguments were presented June 4th. It is the second Boston decision.

End Philadelphia Hearing

Hearing on Philadelphia Case No. 5, clearance complaint of Morris and Samuel Romerson, operators of the Palm Theatre, filed May 15th, ended July 3rd after three days of testimony. H. Evans Rhell, arbitrator, instructed attorneys to file briefs by July 14th. The complaint, directed against Paramount, Metro and 20th Century-Fox was of unusual interest to the Philadelphia industry because it was the first to involve the Warner circuit.

From its out-set, the hearing involved much discussion on the issue of whether it was a request for a better run, as argued by the defendants, or for clearance. Motion to dismiss the complaint because it was one of better run, was denied and the arbitrator ruled that it involved clearance alone.

Experts on Stand

While the original complaint concerned the clearance of 18-21 days enjoyed by Warners' Kent Theatre, objecting to the 14 days held by Warners' Wishart and Richmond theatres and asking that it be removed since the houses allegedly are not competition to the Palm Theatre, thus leaving the Kent with seven days over the Palm, testimony covered clearance in the entire Kensington section of the city.

Ulrik F. Smith, Paramount branch manager; S. E. Applegate, MGM sales manager; and Samuel Gross, 20th Century-Fox sales manager, testified as experts on clearance. They characterized clearance in the Kensington section was fair and reasonable.

The defense based its arguments on the physical condition of houses in the area, correlated with the drawing power of the houses to justify the present clearance.

Theatre operators also took the stand for the complainant to show that film rentals, admissions or physical condition of a house is no criterion for clearance in Phjladelphia. The experts included Sidney E. Samuelson, business manager of Eastern Pennsylvania Allied; David Milgrim, head of the independent Affiliated Theatres circuit; Morris Wax, independent circuit operator; Harry Fried and Joseph Conway, suburban theatre operators.

PHILADELPHIA AAA CASE SETTLED

Heated objection was raised to the examination of books. Although subpeonaed the first day by Stuart Aarons, Warner theatres attorney, to produce his books, Mr. Morris Romerson refused. He contended that it would be detrimental to his interests. However, he finally agreed to produce his books for the arbitrator only. In like manner, attorneys for the defendants would not allow public examination of film contracts with the theatres in the Kensington section, finally agreeing to allow Mr. Fogel, counsel for the complainant, to examine the contracts in their presence with the understanding that the information contained would be confidential and not disclosed to any theatre operator.

Philadelphia Case Settled

A last minute conference on Wednesday led to the settlement of Philadelphia's third case. The clearance complaint of Rose Hexter, operator of the Breeze theatre, was withdrawn as it came to a frequently postponed hearing before Calvin H. Rankin. The settlement was characterized as a compromise, with 20th Century-Fox, Paramount, and Warner Brothers, defendants, agreeing that after August 1st the Breeze could have pictures seven days after the Warner circuit's Earle.

It was also agreed that clearance after the Warner circuit's Savoia and Broadway theatres in South Philadelphia will not exceed 28 days. Formerly the Breeze was 35 days after the first run neighborhood houses. The complaint asked a cut to seven days. George P. Aarons, United Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Pennsylvania negotiated for the Breeze. Stuart Aarons represented Warner interests and Irving Cohen appeared for Paramount. Fox was not represented at the hearing but later agreed to terms of the settlement through Samuel Gross, branch manager.

The case is the first Philadelphia settlement. While proceedings up to the hearing will appear in the AAA record the defendants insisted that the settlement not be registered as an arbitrator's award against the distributors.

Case Hearings End

Hearing on Philadelphia's Case No. 6, clearance complaint of Edward I. Singer, operator of the Hill theatre, ended on Monday after an all morning debate on whether the complaint was one of clearance or of better run. W. A. Wiedersheim, arbitrator ruled it was a clearance action. Albert M. Cohen, attorney for the Hill, argued that the theatre was not in competition with the Rialto Theatre, an interested party, which is considered as a second run in the Germantown area while the Hill is a third run house. However, Stuart Aarons, counsel for Vitagraph, argued that both houses were in competition and that the Hill already enjoys the relief it seeks.

Mr. Aarons said that the Sedgewick theatre, a Warner circuit house, for which the complainant asks the arbitrator to set maximum clearance as a first run in the Germantown section, has not intervened in the action and is not involved. Irving Cohen, counsel for Paramount, pointed out that his company now gives the Hill seven days after the Sedgewick, as asked for in the complaint. RKO a third defendant in the complaint, was not represented by counsel, nor was the Warner Sedgewick. Morris Stern represented the Rialto, an Affiliated Theatres circuit house.

Mrs. Josephine Wolf, booker and part-owner of the Hill, testified that availability as stated in film contracts works out differently in practice than it is worded. She also justified the single day double-feature policy of her house by stating that the policy was not designed to increase patronage, but to "get rid of pay-or-play contracts." Edward Singer, Hill house manager, also testified.

Arguments for the defense were carried mostly by Mr. Aarons, who said that while Section 17 of the consent decree justified howsoever Vitagraph sells to its affiliated circuit's Sedgewick, he was prepared to justify the clearance for the Hill and the Rialto. Interpreting fair clearance and competition, testimony for the defense was entered by Charles Zagrans, RKO branch manager; William G. Mansell, Vitagraph branch manager; and Ulrik F. Smith, Paramount branch manager. Also appearing for the defense were David Milgrim, head of the Affiliated Theatres circuit and owner of the Rialto, and Sam Cohen, manager of the house. Attorneys were requested to file briefs by July 17th.

Philadelphia's seventh case, clearance complaint of N. Herman Bornstein, operator of the suburban Hatboro Theatre against all five consenting distributors, will be heard July 30th. S. Eugene Kuen was selected as arbitrator. The case also involves Warner theatres, asking for immediate run after Warners' Grove Theatre at suburban Willow Grove which now enjoys seven days over the Hatboro.

Cincinnati

Anthony B. Dunlap, Cincinnati attorney, has been appointed arbitrator in the complaint filed in Cincinnati by Fred W. Rowlands, Columbus, Ohio, circuit operator, against the five consenting companies. He seeks adjustment of the seven-day clearance which Neth's Markham holds over his Parsons. Hearing has been set for August 4th. Mr. Rowlands second clearance complaint, also against the Big Five, involving his Main and Neth's Eastern, will be heard July 10th. Fred W. Koch, Cincinnati attorney, is arbitrator.

HIT LOS ANGELES PRINT SHORTAGE

The shortage of prints in the Los Angeles exchange district has become "flagrant" Fox West Coast circuit spokesmen charged this week. They demanded additional prints from distributors immediately, declaring that the circuit would "neither tag nor bicycle in any situation."

Last month the limited supply of prints available to exhibitors in the area was the subject of extensive testimony and argument during hearings of the first Los Angeles arbitration complaint. O. W. Lewis, operator of the Mission Playhouse, San Gabriel, in the course of his clearance action charged that print shortage was partly responsible for excessive clearances. Spokesmen for interested circuits also cited the relative lack of prints. Distributors are reported to have ordered an increase in the Los Angeles exchanges' quota.

Chicago

In Chicago's third case, clearance complaint of James Steininger, operator of the Lawn theatre, against the Big Five an intervention has been filed with the tribunal clerk by Joseph Stern, operator of the Marquette, Colony and Highway theatres. Parties have not yet agreed on an arbitrator. Hearings are not likely to start until the end of July.

Pittsburgh

Horace F. Baker, arbitrator of the clearance complaint filed at Pittsburgh by the Biordi Brothers of Ellwood City, Pa., has adjourned hearings until July 21st. Two and a half days of testimony have already been completed.

Century Circuit Signs Ten-Year Union Pact

The Empire State Operators Union and the Century Circuit, operator of 35 Brooklyn and Long Island houses, signed a ten year labor pact at New York on Tuesday. The new agreement, under discussion for almost a year will supercede the present contract between union and circuit. The latter has 14 months to run.

The new agreement raises wages for booth men on an average of 22 percent with individual increases running from 18 to 35 per cent, according to the union. An average of $50 for a 35 hour week, and a closed shop are provided. Two week vacations are included and a clause permits upward revision of wage scales if living costs rise. A television clause, one of the first reported, specifies that Empire operators will be engaged to handle television equipment if it is installed in Century houses.

Allan Goodwin, attorney and Abraham Kindler negotiated for the union with Joseph Springer, Century general manager, and Mitchell Klaupt attorney.

N. Y. Regents Reject Appeal on "He" Film

The New York State Board of Regents has rejected the appeal by distributors of "He" from a ban on the film by Irwin Esmond, motion picture division (censors) director.

The film once held a seal; but the permit was revoked some time ago.

The board was to review, next Wednesday, "The Sunset Murder Case." The censors have rejected the latest version of the film originally released by Grand National. Sally Rand is the star.

Eves Heads Theatres

Under the new Famous Players Canadian regime in Toronto, Bob Eves, manager of the Eglinton, neighborhood theatre and the closest Toronto has to an art theatre, has been promoted to supervisor of the chain's 14 theatres. In his new job, Mr. Eves moves into the head office with special instructions to keep watch on the Eglinton. The managerial position of the theatre, however, will pass into the hands of his present assistant, J. Rollins.

CAMPAIGN BEGINS TO HAVE EVERY OWNER IN U. S. SEEK NEWSPAPER AID

Columbia's Montague Tests Reactions of Nation's Exhibitors to Institutional Ad Drive; Newspapers Cooperating

Mounting exhibitor enthusiasm for more and better selling of the motion picture as an institution was indicated this week as Columbia Pictures announced it had begun an intensive test of exhibitor reaction to the series of advertisements run by the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin and that it was conducting a nationwide mail campaign urging exhibitors to follow the lead set in that series. The campaign, published without charge by the Bulletin, was detailed in MOTION PICTURE HERALD last week.

It was indicated by Abe Montague, Columbia sales chief, that the exhibitor letter campaign might be continued throughout the year.

Copies of Ads Sent

Columbia's first letter was sent to exhibitors June 18th, over Mr. Montague's signature. It carried with it copies of four of the Bulletin's advertisements, and asked the exhibitors to "stop, read and think," adding:

"Make haste to your nearest newspaper. Don't walk. Run! Show them the constructive campaign of this Philadelphia newspaper making a direct effort to improve movie attendance, and doing it with a free-hand gesture that not only helps the entertainment of the community, but immeasurably helps its morale."

Mr. Montague on Tuesday explained his advancement of the Philadelphia newspaper's promotional idea was from a long rooted conviction that too much derogatory comment has been current anent the film industry and that the newspapers could supply the needed correctional. He added the company did not intend to approach newspapers directly.

"If the exhibitors can't sell the idea to the local newspapers, we don't believe we can," he said.

Commendatory Replies

An immediate, largely commendatory response from exhibitors was quoted by Mr. Montague; not merely from "the big ones," from whom Mr. Montague said he expected such, but also from the smaller, rural exhibitor. Mr. Montague asserted some 50 replies had been received, only a few asking for "better pictures, greater pictures."

The copy in the Bulletin advertisements stressed the "movie vacation" idea; the films and the theatre as a relaxation, always handy and never demanding. Representative copy follows:

"A movie vacation will rest you in body—and more important still—in mind. You'll come out of your favorite theatre with a completely changed point of view. Work and problems that seemed difficult will become much easier. All because, for a cost reckoned only in pennies, you've seen interesting places, watched different people, heard interesting talk. . . .

"Send your children on short movie vacations often. Not far away from you, their favorite stars and the theatre managers are waiting to take care of them well—to give you time for rest and other things. And when you can, go off on movie vacations yourself. You can sandwich them into the busiest days."

In a second exhibitor letter sent out July 1st, Mr. Montague noted an "enthusiastic response" to his first letter and its suggestions, and enclosed a second series of advertisements.

Mr. Montague on Tuesday displayed a letter from George T. Eager, sales executive of the Bulletin, in reply to Columbia's first request for information about the newspaper's advertisements. The letter said, in part:

"That the public is looking for ways to do away with 'that tired feeling' is proven by the appeals of scores of food products and drug products whose headlines always contain the words, pep, vim, vigor, etc.

"The way it seems to us is that persuasion is not necessary to get children to go to the movies and most women are ready to go any time their husbands will take them. The chief stumbling block seems to be the husband who claims that he is too tired. So if we can put a new idea into the husband's mind and also provide a ready argument for the wife and children that will induce him to go to the movies, we will have done something. We also figure that there is no time in the year during which the average person is adverse to taking a vacation and that at this particular time a vacation is uppermost in most minds, so that if we can convince people that they can have the effect of a short vacation right in their own city, we may contribute a little toward increasing motion picture attendance."

Cooperation from other companies in the promotion would be welcomed by Columbia, Mr. Montague said Tuesday, adding, however, that he had not conferred with sales managers or other executives of other majors.

Mr. Montague stressed the local facet; that the exhibitor was in the proper position to sell his theatre as an institution, if not through newspapers, then in his program; if not with the copy sent and suggested, then with emphasis on community service. Such emphasis pays, he said, and noted one exhibitor who is offering refunds to any patron to whom the exhibitor's cashier does not say, "Thank You."

Particularly the Columbia sales manager asked cooperation from the trade press.

Following are quotations from some of the exhibitors' letters received by Mr. Montague:

Ned Greene, Manager, Legion Theatre Company, Mayfield Ky.: "Please accept my sincere appreciation for you letter explaining the 'Movie Vacation' newspaper campaign. You have no idea how much it helps to know that at least some of our leaders are leaders. I hope that out of your efforts will come a Public Relations Department and a Central Advertising Bureau to formulate and co-ordinate all industry advertising. I have become convinced that our loss of business is strictly our own fault. The whole industry is in a rut on advertising and it is my opinion that with the proper cooperation on institutional advertising, we can turn our present twenty per cent loss into a twenty per cent gain. Again thanking you for your efforts and assuring you of our whole hearted cooperation."

Rodney A. Pantages, Hollywood Pantages Theatre Corp., Hollywood, Cal.: "I sincerely appreciate your letter of June 18 and the enclosures on the motion picture vacation idea. That is one of the finest theatre promotion ideas we have ever had presented to us, and we will do our level best to institute a similar and possibly enlarged campaign here in Los Angeles. If the theatre men of the country act upon your fine suggestion, you will have done the industry a real service."

H. E. Jameyson, District Manager, Fox Midwest Amusement Corp., Kansas City, Mo.: "Please permit me to thank you for sending me the advertising from the Philadelphia Bulletin. I think the whole industry owes you a vote of thanks for the initiative you have shown in presenting this excellent campaign to the exhibitors of America. I, for one, am grateful. This morning I showed it to the Advertising Manager of one of our papers here in Wichita and I am quite sure this paper is going to take it on. Is it your plan to continue sending us proofs of other ads? I would like to be put on the list."

E. D. Dorrel, Fox Midwest Amusement Corporation, Kansas City, Mo.: "Thanks very much for your letter and tear sheets concerning the promotional copy being used by one of the Philadelphia papers. Our local newspaper, the Emporia Gazette, has agreed to use this series of ads and to use editorial comment along the same line.

Benjamin M. Berinstein, Wm. Berinstein Theatres, Elmira, N. Y.: "I wish to thank you for your letter of June 18 with its enclosures on the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin and Movie Vacation Idea. I am going to follow this matter up personally. I agree with you that it is one of the finest opportunities that we have had in some time. I think you are doing the industry a great service in calling this idea to their attention."

E. E. Bair, Defiance Theatres, Defiance, O.: "When sales managers, teachers, executives begin to show people how to help themselves they will have accomplished the essence of all learning. Your letter about the "Movie Vacation" prompts this letter and it causes wonderment why there is not more of this kind of common sense 'salesmanship'—a little of the go give instead of the 'go get.' No doubt you and I have been identified in this industry for a long time—don't you concur that there is way too little of the 'go and give'? Your letter convinces me you are most sincere in your efforts to put this idea over, and I am sure you will accomplish something?"

L. F. Eick, Secretary-Treasurer & Manager, The Fenray Photoplay Co., Martins Fery, O.: "Your letter of June 18th in connection with the 'Ever Try a Movie Vacation'? campaign was heartily welcomed by us. We have been attempting to work out some plan of advertising to stimulate theatre going but have been unable to devise any that would be within the limits of our advertising budget and at the same time would be sufficiently consistent in its duration to bring about the desired results. The plan which you so generously offer through your letter just fills the bill. We have taken immediate steps with the newspapers to put it across and through them are endeavoring to obtain from the Evening Bulletin the future advertisements which will be a follow-up of those which you enclosed. This to us seems the best thing that has yet been devised to stimulate business on a sound basis and we hope that enough theatres will see the possibilities in it to bring back to the theatres of the country much of the patronage that has slipped away. We want to thank you for bringing this matter to our attention and as a consistent user of Columbia product you can rest assured that whatever benefit may accrue to us will reflect itself in increased revenue to your company."

William N. Skirball, Skirball Brothers, Cleveland, O.: "Obviously the idea outlined in your letter of June 18th appealed to the manager of our Rivoli Theatre. You will note from the enclosed ad of the current week's show that the idea has already been put into effect at this theatre."

A. F. Sams, Jr., Statesville Theatre Corp., Statesville, N. C.: "Thanks kindly for your letter of June 18th and the enclosures that were attached. We appreciate very much this help from you and think it is most kind of you to pass on the idea in one of the Philadelphia newspapers. We are putting these ideas to work in our several towns right away. We need all the help that we can get just now as it is mighty hard to compete with the European situation and their free publicity over the radio and through newspapers."

A. C. Hayman, New Lafayette Theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.: "Your letter of June 18th reached me yesterday and it impressed me greatly. I think you have a marvelous idea. We immediately contacted the editor of the Buffalo Courier-Express and sold him the idea. He has written to the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin for permission to use this series of ads. I think this is fine work on your part and if the exhibitors generally will take this matter up, they can make a nationwide issue of it and it may help to bring us out of this terrible slump we are now experiencing. I personally want to thank you for sending this idea to me and I will try to sell it to the newspaper at Niagara Falls. I hope your idea is a success nationally. You deserve a great amount of credit for bringing it to the attention of the exhibitor."

Oscar Doob, Loew's Inc., 1540 Broadway, N. Y. C.: "I have had reproductions made and am supplying them to all our theatres with instructions to try to plant them in local papers. I also have our advertising agency trying to sell one of the New York dailies on the idea to run a similar series."

Alvin Sloan, St. Cloud Amuse. Corp., Washington, N. J.: "We read with great interest your recent letter and the proofs from the Philadelphia Bulletin editions. Thanks a lot for passing these along. The front page of the enclosed paper (which we publish) is an adaptation of the same idea."

Harry L. Nace, Publix-Rickards-Nace, Inc., Phoenix, Ariz.: "This will acknowledge with thanks your letter of June 18th wherein you outline campaign on 'it's a Movie Vacation.' I am taking this up with our boys at our meeting Monday and I feel sure that this should prove a great stimulant for us."

R. S. Hess, Groton Theatre, Groton, Conn.: "We have just received and read with much interest your letter of the 18th along with the enclosures. We feel that we can make good use of this 'Movie Vacation' idea."

T. V. Killeen, Comerford-Publix Theatres Corp., Wilkes-Barre, Pa.: "Read your letter of June 18th with much interest. Like you, I feel the Evening Bulletin idea an excellent one and have taken your advice to run to the nearest paper. I am quite certain we can count on the wholehearted cooperation of the Wilkes-Barre Record, as our meeting with representatives of the paper was most satisfactory."

Ward Kreag, Community Theatre, Catskill, N. Y.: "Thank you for your letter of the 18th received today. The 'Movie Vacation' idea is mighty good and I expect to be able to do something about it in Catskill."

Chas. R. Gilmour, Gibraltar Enterprises, Inc., Denver, Col.: "I appreciate and thank you sincerely for your letter of June 18th to which you attached the letter from George T. Eager of the Evening Bulletin, and also some of the ads that are being run by that paper. The idea is excellent. We are going to follow through with it in every situation we have. I shall always appreciate having you pass along any such constructive ideas. Thank you again."

James Edwards, Jr., Edwards' Theatres Circuit, Los Angeles, California: "Thank you for your letter and your idea in regard the Movie Vacation. I am happy to report that the Alhambra Post--Advocate, the largest daily in the San Gabriel Valley, will have an eight-day campaign on the Movie Vacation idea, starting today and will run at least a two by six each day. We will also have a month's campaign with a two by six each week in the following weekly newspapers: The Alhambra Herald, The Carvey Advertisers, The Alhambra Shopper, The Red Arrow Publications (Consisting of separate newspapers in Alhambra, Monterey Park, Carvey, El Monte, and Five Points.) Fourteen of our theatres are in the San Gabriel Valley, served by these newspapers, and I feel sure that your idea will be of inestimable value to not only our theatres, but to the competitive theatres in the Valley as well."

Albert Sottile, The Pastime Amusement Co., Charleston, S. C.: "I wish to commend you highly for the trouble and expense that you have gone into, in acquainting your accounts with the good-will advertising campaign that was initiated by the Evening Bulletin of Philadelphia. We are thoroughly sold on the idea and immediately contacted our local morning paper and beginning with last Sunday's issue, (June 29th), we are going to insert a copy each Sunday, for as long as they last. Through our representative at the North and South Carolina Theatre Owners convention at

MGM Launches Institutional 'Door-Bell' Promotion for Localized Selling

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "doorbell ringing" campaign—by which it hopes to ascertain what film fare the public wants, through contact with the nation's newspapers and key exhibitors—began officially Monday, in New York City, with the arrival there of Barrett Keisling, from the company's studio publicity department. He is one of three men detailed by MGM to interview managing and news editors, film critics, and amusement page chiefs of leading newspapers, to obtain opinions from leading exhibitors, and to confer with MGM's exchange chiefs and field exploitation men. The other two are Andy Hervey and Don McIlwain whose tours in different territories were to begin also this week.

The MGM approach via studio representatives is paralleled by its instructions to exchange executives and staffs, related in these pages previously, to join local civic and social organizations so that they may obtain opinions about the film industry's fare from these vital community sources and defend the film industry in discussions which may be inimical to local theatre trade and to the industry at large.

Mr. Kiesling expects to visit about 30 cities, Mr. Hervey about 20. Mr. Kiesling asserted Mr. McIlwain probably would be sent by the studio to about six Pacific Coast cities.

Monday, in MGM's New York home office, Mr. Kiesling said his trip would have many facets. He will check, from files locally, newspaper use of studio and home office publicity. He will also check newspaper use of syndicated material, and syndicate use of publicity. He then will ask top executives and amusement page editors of local newspapers what they desire from MGM, what they think the public wants.

Mr. Kiesling will be carrying with him certain advance information on the company's new product. He will also visit local exhibitors from whom he expects to gain valuable information on further service the studio and home office publicity and exploitation departments may afford exhibition, and what changes are necessary.

The opinions of the exchange and local exploitation men are also to be taken into account in what is, primarily, an attempt by MGM's chief publicists to ascertain whether they are doing a "job" properly.

It is Mr. Keisling's seventh such trip since 1935 but, he reminded a reporter Monday, a much more "intensive" and important one, inasmuch as the trip will take only about two months instead of the usual leisurely six, and is intended to be applied to selling and marketing under the consent decree, operative September 1st.

Mr. Keisling will travel all through the East, through part of the South, and the Middle West, and will visit his last city, St. Paul, September 5th. Mr. Hervey began his tour Tuesday in Denver, was to swing through the Middle West, Southwest and deep South, and end up in San Antonio August 12th.

MARK OF SHOWMANSHIP

Columbia Backs Institutional Ads

Myrtle Beach, this unselfish effort on your part was brought to the attention of the membership, and needless to say, it met with unanimous approbation."

C. K. Mason, Commonwealth Amusement Corporation, Kansas City, Missouri: "Many thanks for your letter of the 18th, in which you outline the Movie Vacation ad recently used in Philadelphia. I think this is a very clever stunt, and I am going to pass it on to all of our managers immediately. Just a few moments ago, I discovered that you evidently have given this considerable publicity, for one of our small town managers advises me of the fact that he had already made the tie up with his local paper."

Earle Hendren, Secretary-Treasurer, Cherokee Amusements, Inc., Erwin, Tennessee: "Thank you very much for your letter of June 8 in regards to series of newspaper advertising 'It's a Movie Vacation' and we are so impressed with the data that you enclosed with your letter that we are not only using this idea at our theatre here in Erwin, Tennessee but would like to use it in our various other theatres and will appreciate your sending a copy of your letter of June 8 together with copy of letter from Mr. T. Eager of Philadelphia Evening Bulletin and copy of series of ads to the following theatres of Cherokee Amusements, Inc.: Hollywood Theatre, Madisonville, Tenn.; Carolina Theatre, Spruce Pine, N. C.; Cherokee Theatre, LaFollette, Tenn.; Gay Theatre, Sweetwater, Tenn.; Grand Theatre, Lenoir City, Tenn.; Gay Theatre, Jellico, Tenn.; State Theatre, Marshall, N. C.; Capitol Theatre, Oneida, Tenn.; Yancey Theatre, Burnsville, N. C.

H. E. Weiner, Columbia Philadelphia Branch Manager: "Mr. I. Epstein, the general manager for Ben Amsterdam's Atlantic Theatre Circuit, Philadelphia, Pa., was very highly enthused over this idea. It is Mr. Epstein's intention to try to promote the use of this type of material in all of the towns where Atlantic operates theatres, and as soon as anything is accomplished along these lines, will forward the result to you."

E. P. Burrows, Landsdale Theatre, Landsdale, Calif., said he used the Movie Vacation ad on the back page of his program.

G. R. Carter, Manager, E. M. Loews, Winchester, Mass., used the front page of his program "Reel News," to present the Movie Vacation idea, under the heading "Renew the Movie Habit."

E. C. Grainger, Shea-Chain, Inc., 1540 Broadway, New York:
"I recommend this for our theatres. Another piece of showmanship is the publication of reports taken from polls of theatre patrons, that newspaper ads are the greatest factor in attracting patrons to the theatres. I know this is true in New York and other big cities and the same fact may not prevail in other towns, but from time to time instead of using stereotyped Hollywood mat ads you might pick out an unusually good newspaper review and quote it in your ad—with a comment like this "No recommendation of the Management could be greater than the review of..... Read it—and attend the .....theatre and see for yourself how good a picture.....is."

New RKO Boston Home

RKO's new exchange in Boston was opened Tuesday. It is at 122 Arlington Street. Ross Cropper is manager. Home office officials, led by vice-president Ned Depinet, attended opening ceremonies.

'DOORBELL RINGING' URGED IN ST. LOUIS

Reprints of a statement made by H. M. Richey, MGM executive, at the Carolina exhibitor convention, last week, urging theatre exhibitors to "stop wringing your hands and start ringing doorbells and to quit shouting business is bad," are being distributed this week to all managers of Fanchon & Marco theatres in St. Louis.

Hopeful that Mr. Richey's call to arms will stimulate the managers to greater effort, F & M officials are asking the managers to see that the personnel of the theatres are also acquainted with the statement.

Sam Scribner, Theatre Operator, Dead

Sam A. Scribner, old-time theatrical manager and operator at one time of forty burlesque houses, died of heart disease at his Bronxville home July 8th. The 82-year old theatre man who devoted the last twenty-five years of his life to theatrical philanthropy, was treasurer of the Actors Fund of America and worked with the late Daniel Frohman and Walter Vincent, present president of the Fund, to help his needy colleagues.

Born in Brookville, Pa., Mr. Scribner entered the show business via medicine shows, minstrel and circus companies and Wild West shows. Later he joined the late Harry Williams, owner and manager of the Williams Academy of Music in Pittsburgh, in presenting traveling all-star vaudeville shows. For a time he was a partner of the late Sam H. Harris, when together they offered Terry McGovern, the boxer, as their first star attraction, who was managed in the prize ring by Mr. Harris.

Among the theatres built during Mr. Scribner's operations was the Columbia, now the Mayfair, in New York. Many stars and comedians got their start in his theatres, including Fred Stone, Al Jolson, Leon Errol, Belle Baker, Sam Bernard, Billy B. Van, Clark and McCullough, Alexander Carr, Sophie Tucker and Jack Benny.

Shapiro Resigns from World Pictures

Irvin Shapiro, general manager of World Picture Corporation, has resigned and will leave the company to devote his efforts towards the creation of unusual motion picture productions.

Mr. Shapiro feels that the situation at present is opportune for the creation of these films heretofore obtained from Europe, South American and occasionally from Hollywood. A successor will be named in a few days.

Tempest in Toronto

Toronto theatres were forced to refund admissions to their patrons last Tuesday, as the result of a prolonged breakdown in power service which was caused by a severe electrical storm. The theatres also went dark for a brief period. The storm also disturbed radio reception, closing down communication with Europe and cancelling British programs on the Canadian network for a time.

Rehearing Asked On Chance Games

Attorneys for Tri-States Theatres, the Ralph D. Goldberg circuit and other theatre interests filed a brief with the Omaha supreme court urging a rehearing on the court's recent decision outlawing "Prosperity Club" at the Omaha houses.

The brief claims the United States "permits lotteries and gift enterprises on the radio stations" and this fact has diminished theatre attendance in Nebraska. They claim Omaha exhibitors, prohibited from operating similarly, are denied equal protection of the law.

The brief was in support of a motion of rehearing of a case in which the defendants were found to have violated the court's 1937 Bank Night injunctions and were fined in contempt of court.

RKO Accused of Libel In Its "Primrose Path"

Claiming they were libeled in the film, "Primrose Path," three Fall River residents have filed suits totalling $600,000 against RKO Pictures, Inc., in Boston Federal Court.

The plaintiffs also allege they were libeled in the book, "February Hill," from which the film was made.

The picture starred Joel McCrea and Ginger Rogers.

Plaintiffs are Minna and Joel Wright, and Vera Burdett. Each seeks $200,000 damages.

The complaint states "February Hill" was written by Victoria Lincoln, who lived in Fall River in 1934, and who drew plaintiffs as characters, unfavorably.

Lefko Named RKO Manager

Ned E. Depinet on Monday at the RKO Radio convention in New York announced the promotion of Morris Lefko, Pittsburgh salesman, to the vacancy of branch manager in Indianapolis, replacing Roy Churchill, who resigned a few weeks ago.

The Panoram division, sound movie machines, of the Mills Novelty Company has been moved from Hollywood to the Chicago plant. Gordon Mills continues as general sales manager with James Hudson as his assistant.

THEATRES CUT FOR SOLDIERS, WANT EXEMPTION FROM TAX FOR THEM

Mobile Stage Shows Play to 650,000 Soldiers Throughout the Country; Many Film Stars Make Personal Appearances

An all-out industry effort, led by Loew's, Paramount, RKO, Warner Brothers and independent circuits, is in motion to effect legislation in Washington which will remove the existing federal tax from cut-price tickets sold to servicemen in uniform. If this proposed action fails, industry men will aim for permission to allow the selectees to pay a tax on the cut-price of the ticket, not the full price, as is the prevailing custom. The concerted move seeks either elimination of the tax or its reduction to two cents on such cut-price admissions. The pending House tax bill in Congress would exempt armed forces from movie ticket tax payments.

Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, in commenting on complete elimination of the tax on cut-price tickets, said: "It seems illogical to offer a cut-rate ticket to a man —because his $21 per month wage hardly includes much margin for entertainment—and then tax him on the full price of the ticket." Other executives point out that if the government considers motion pictures as important for morale maintenance, foregoing the tax would be a trifling investment in morale.

Cut-Rate Move Spreads

This action follows simultaneous efforts on the part of industry leaders to extend cut-rate admission tickets for uniformed Army men to all theatres through the country. Loew's Warners, RKO and Fox West Coast theatres officially have adopted the policy and a number of independent circuits have joined them. National Theatres are considering adoption of the plan and Paramount circuit has decided to deal with the subject on the basis of individual operators in separate localities. It is reported that the Motion Picture Committee Cooperating for National Defense, headed by Warner's Joseph Bernhard, who is chairman of the theatre division, is backing the industry-wide expansion of this policy.

Representatives of circuit operated and independent houses met at the Congress Hotel, Chicago last week, to discuss the policy to be pursued by Chicago theatres regarding special admission prices for uniformed men in service.

It was decided that, effective July 8, first run houses charging regular admissions of 35c, 50c and 68c would reduce their prices to 25c, 30c and 35c to men in uniform. Class "A" houses charging 30c and 50c would make a reduction to 20c and 30c, "B" houses from 25c and 40c to 20c and 25c, "C" houses from 20c and 30c to 15c and 20c, all plus the prevailing tax rate of the regularly priced ticket. Balance of subsequent run houses will have a 15c minimum for uniformed men.

The Warner Bros. Theatre circuit, which decided on a national policy of price reductions for men in the service, varies slightly from the above. Their reductions are as follows: on all tickets 40c or under the price will be 20c: on admissions over 40c, it will be 25c, plus prevailing tax.

Those in attendance at the meeting were Jack Kirsch, president Illinois-Allied Theatres; John Balaban and Walter Immerman, Balaban & Katz; Harry and Elmer Balaban, H. & E. Circuit; James Booth, Essaness Theatres Corporation; Charles H. Ryan, Warner theatres, and Frank Smith, RKO Palace Theatre. Representatives of various film exchanges also listened in and it is believed that the distributors will go along on the policy adopted.

Following the lead of the Warner theatre circuit, Oscar Forman became the first independent operator in Philadelphia to announce reduced admissions for uniformed service men, as of July 3rd.

Special Rates in Reading

Operators of the downtown first run houses in Reading, Pa., devised this week special rates applying to admission charges over 20 cents. In addition to that charge, men in uniform will be required to pay the government taxes on the established price of the ticket, depending on the time of the day. Theatres making the announcement included the Embassy, Loew's, Warner, Astor, Strand, Park, Ritz, Rajah and Strand and includes both circuit houses operated by Warners Loew's and Wilmer & Vincent, and the independent houses of Dr. H. J. Schad and Jay Emanuel.

As of July 4th, all Century Circuit Theatres lowered admission prices for the boys now in military service, to ten cents for matinees and fifteen cents for evening admissions.

650,000 See Army Shows

Reporting on the activities to date of its mobile vaudeville-variety shows which have circuited 60 army and navy posts throughout the country and have reached 650,000 soldiers and sailors, the Citizens Committee for the Army and Navy, Inc., of which Thomas J. Watson, is president, revealed this week that the "entertainment tastes of the khaki and blue audiences have not been dulled by the ardors of military training," and that their experiences have shown "that only professional entertainment acceptable to Broadway is acceptable to the men in camps."

Describing the five acting units which were circuited on red, white and blue large caravan trucks loaned to the Committee by General Motors, as "speed-shows" similar to the "revival of the one night stand, the report said that audience reaction for this type of entertainment has "so far fulfilled the expectations of the Committee and the Morale Division experts of the War and Navy Departments."

It was estimated that before the army begins its mid-summer manoeuvres, an additional 200,000 men stationed at 15 other cantonments will have seen the shows. Each of the five touring units has a master of ceremonies, a cast of singers, dancers, variety artists and vaudeville specialists.

Stars Head Camp Show

Among the stars who have already appeared with the Motor Camp Shows, according to the report, are: Milton Berle, Bill Robinson, Jane Frohman, Allen Jones, Billy Rose, Chico Marx, and Phil Regan.

Performers are compensated by the Committee at prevailing rates, except for the screen, stage and radio stars who have appeared with various units as "volunteer performers." Each unit also has its own company manager and musical director, and much of the musical accompaniment for the shows is provided by musical ensembles of the men in uniform themselves.

The Committee predicts that approximately 1,000,000 men in the service will have been entertained by the travelling shows upon conclusion of the currently five unit speed-show tours. Lawrence Phillips, executive director of the Citizens Committee, issued the report which further said that in "every way possible every effort is made to preserve the atmosphere of a real professional theatrical venture although the presentations are given, of course, without charge to the soldiers and sailors."

More than a dozen prominent Hollywood stars took part in a gigantic entertainment for men of the 250th Coast Artillery, in training at Camp McQuaide in northern California, near Watsonville last week. It was another of the large-scale entertainments planned for Army camps by the motion picture industry. Stars of the program included Joe E. Brown, Marlene Dietrich, Eleanor Powell, George Burns, Gracie Allen, Carole Landis, Charles Boyer, Rosalind Russell, Kay Kyser and his orchestra, Ginny Simms, and Ish Kabbible. Invited from nearby camps to share the show were the 116th and 82nd observation squadrons from Salinas Airport, and the 91st observation squadron from Watsonville.

Industry USO Drive Launched

Last Monday marked the opening gun of the New York film industry committee's drive to help raise the $10,765,000 objective of the United Service Organization. Joseph Hazen of Warner Brothers, who is chairman of the committee, hopes to top the industry quota, set for a ten-day period, within a week. Mr. Hazen made public a letter he received from Thomas E. Dewey, national chairman of the USO campaign, in which Mr. Dewey said, "The motion picture industry has always contributed gener-

THEATRES HEAR PRESIDENT'S SPEECH

Observing the Fourth of July last Friday, many theatres throughout the country as well as other places of public congregation halted their activities while President Roosevelt urged the nation to work for human freedom.

New York's Mayor LaGuardia, who arranged the nation-wide program for pledging allegiance as director of the Office of Civilian Defense, led the audience of the Criterion theatre on Broadway in repeating the pledge as it came over the radio and in singing the national anthem. An usher with an American flag was stationed in the center of the stage during the exercises.

The Moscow short-wave radio devoted an entire hour to an English-language program celebrating the Fourth. The program included a message to Americans with "ardent greetings" on the occasion of their "glorious national holiday." N. Ilyen, the Russian writer and Sergei Eisenstein, Russian motion picture director, took part in the Soviet program.

ously of its talent, time and funds for worthy causes. Here is the opportunity again for it to demonstrate its fine patriotic spirit. I am sure the industry will speedily raise its quota for the USO—the army behind the army. Won't you please convey my thanks," the letter said, 'to the members of your Committee and the employees in the motion picture industry for their efforts in behalf of the USO."

B. S. Moss, chairman of the Exhibitors and Accessories Committee for the campaign, reported a ready response from those in the independent exhibition and in affiliated industries. Mr. Hazen said, and further explained that: "Each of the film companies has named a representative in the home offices, which group makes up the committee. Collections are being made within the companies. Some 5,000 or more donations can be handed to committeemen without the donors leaving their own buildings." He urged New York film industry workers to "just hand your check or cash to a member of the USO committee."

Pledges of substantial amounts, it is reported, have already been made by home offices of the major companies, but concentration will continue during the ten-day drive for individual contributions from company employees.

During the first days of the drive, the Committee ran full page ads in industry trade journals addressed "to every man and woman in the New York film industry," urging immediate cooperation in the USO campaign. Other stunts to spurt the drive will be announced by Mr. Hazen later.

Committee members in New York include: W. C. Michel, 20th Century-Fox Richard Patterson, RKO; Oscar A. Doob, Loew's; Harry Buckley, U. A.; Abe Schneider, Columbia; Austin C. Keough, Paramount; Matty Fox, Universal; B. S. Moss, Si Fabian, George Skouras, Harry Brandt, Samuel Rinzler and Herman Robbins.

Coast USO Plans

Southern California and independent exhibitors unanimously pledged support for the USO campaign at a meeting held last Monday in Los Angeles, at which Charles A. Buckley, FWC vice president presided. The West Coast drive to raise funds for the organization begins July 17th and will end on the 24th. Dr. A. H. Giannini, chairman of the Southern California division for the USO was the guest speaker at the meeting and declared that the forthcoming drive "will cover theatres from Pasorobles to San Diego."

Branch managers of all major company exchanges also pledged support of the drive which hits at a $100,000 quota objective, as announced by Albert A. Galston, independent operator of Hawaill and Marcal theatres. Mr. Galston cited the $87,000 raised by the Southern California theatres for the Greek War Relief campaign and the $60,000 collected for the Will Rogers Memorial fund.

A committee to head up USO activities for the drive was appointed, and includes: Chairman Robert W. Whitson, Hunley Theatres, Hollywood; Clayton T. Lynch, Metro resident manager; Mrs. Jenne Dodge, Mission and Mayfair theatres, Ventura; Marco Wolfe, head of Paramount and Southside theatres; Rodney Pantages; of Pantages, Hollywood; and Ben Wallerstein, Warner Brothers' theatres.

Ted R. Gamble, Portland, Oregon, exhibitor, has been appointed by the Treasury Department as state administrator for Oregon in the National Defense Savings campaign now under way for the sale of defense bonds and stamps.

Mr. Gamble, who will serve without compensation, will cooperate with the defense savings staff of the Treasury in stimulating the sale of bonds and stamps through the establishment of representative, non-partisan state and local committees to develop community interest in the savings program.

Mr. Gamble was for some years past manager of the J. J. Parker group of theatres, and last year took over management of the Portland Capitol Theatre. Subsequently he added the Bagdad, Rialto and Cascadian theatres to his "string." Mr. Gamble has served on the Portland Board of Review since 1937, and in 1939, he was chosen by the Junior Chamber of Commerce in that city as its "first citizen."

Stars Feature Treasury Show

Following its debut on the air last week, the Treasury Department's "Millions for Defense" program, broadcast over 88 CBS coast-to-coast stations, scored another hit show last Wednesday, featuring Bob Hope, Bing Crosby, Dorothy Lamour, Dorothy Maynor, Raymond Massey, and Lowell Thomas as the star performers for the second in the 13-week Texaco series to boost defense savings bonds and stamps.

Raymond Massey appeared in a specially written play for the program contributed by Arch Oboler, and Lowell Thomas was the master of ceremonies. Al Goodman's orchestra and the Ray Block choir provided additional musical entertainment.

Howard Dietz, MGM's advertising and publicity director, and Secretary Morgenthau's appointee as co-ordinator and chairman of the programs, worked with Paul Munroe, of the Buchanan advertising agency, and Herman Wouk, chief script writer for the shows, on this second program. All the broadcasts will be directed by Earle McGill, CBS's casting chief.

Halt Aluminum Admission Shows

Exhibitors throughout the country have been requested to hold up "Aluminum Admission Performances" until after the national scrap aluminum collection campaign begins on July 21st, Robert W. Horton, director of the Information Office for Emergency Management in Washington, notified the Motion Picture Committee Cooperating for National Defense this week.

Mr. Horton said he would appreciate "aluminum admission performances" after the July 21st campaign and expressed the belief that active participation by exhibitors then would be a major factor in the Government's effort to conserve aluminum.

On July 21st, local collection committees will conduct door-to-door canvasses and these activities will be under the direction of the highest local elected public official, Mr. Horton revealed. OEM has suggested to governors and mayors that exhibitors be given places of responsibility on such local committees as are organized.

Meanwhile, plans were afoot in Philadelphia, by circuit and independent exhibitors, as a single unit, to hold an aluminum defense matinee this month as a token of the industry's participation in the national defense drive to conserve this vital metal. The idea originated with Charles Goldfine, operator of the Alden Theatre, who collected more than 500 pots and pans for an aluminum defense matinee. Horlacher's film delivery service has volunteered to collect all the utensils which represent admission to the theatres.

In Chicago, the Balaban and Katz circuit announced that morning "aluminum shows" will be held in neighborhood and suburban theatres on July 21st. Children presenting any article made of the essential defense material will be admitted free, and it is expected that thousands of pounds of scrap aluminum will be coralled in this manner.

Southeast Blackout Ends with Rains

Theatre managers in Atlanta know the meaning of "The Rains Came," for during the nine-months' drought in the Southeast, which had caused power shortage in Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee, managers had cooperated with authorities in conserving power by "black-outs" of marquee and other theatre front lights. Heavy rains during the past week will restore the lights to Atlanta theatres which had reduced their kilowatt consumption by one-third of that used during the last week in May.

The lifting of the ban will continue through this week and if at the end of the seven-day period, the lakes and reservoirs have stored up enough reserve power, the "black-out" will be permanently lifted. There was no compulsion in the power reduction method, but purely as a voluntary measure, theatre managers eliminated all lights not needed for safety and confined their marquee lighting only to the name of the feature attraction.

From Hendersonville, North Carolina, reports of a four-day rain ended the power rationing for theatres in that area this week. Industrial users, however, were still being requested to abide by precautionary measures.

Heavy rain-fall in New Orleans brought good news to theatre managers there during the Independence Day week-end, who were heartened by the partial lifting of the "black-out" ban of marquee lights necessitated during the many weeks of the drought. Influx of 13,000 soldiers from nearby Army camps to the city and the Mississippi Gulf Coast resorts during the holiday, brought a sharp increase in theatre patronage for that area.

More Hollywood War Films

Further indication of Hollywood's efforts to cooperate with the Government in dramatizing for the public "defense consciousness," is revealed in West Coast reports this week of continued planning to plan war film production.

Darryl F. Zanuck, Twentieth Century-Fox chief, who is chairman of the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, announced that Sol Lesser will start another war department training film, this one on anti-aircraft machine guns, which will be made by the Research Council at the Bicycle Lake Anti-aircraft Firing Range near Barstow, California.

Metro is making a one-reeler called "The Battle," narrated by Carey Wilson, which will give the first complete picture of all phases of a naval engagement, and which will show naval preparations which have been made in case an enemy fleet ever approaches these shores.

Samuel Goldwyn is pushing his schedule of the long-planned picture "Seventh Cavalry," which he announced will be filmed at Fort Bliss, the Texas headquarters of the regiment. Mr. Goldwyn now contemplates using Technicolor for the film. This will be the third picture on Gary Cooper's schedule when he returns for sudio work from New York. Mr. Goldwyn and Lieut. Col. Thoburn K. Brown, commanding officer at Fort Bliss, have been working quietly to complete production plans for the picture which, it is reported, Government officials hope will be completed soon.

CANADA LOOKS TO U. S., BRITISH AND FRENCH FILMING IN DOMINION

Pascal, Warner Brothers Set Plans for Production in Dominion; See Influx of Talent from Occupied France

by PAT DONOVAN in Montreal

Canada is looking to some sizeable theatrical feature production by British and French, with at least a spattering of filming by U. S. interests, this latter activity prompted by the arrival at Ottawa, last week, of Hal Wallis from Warner Brothers' studios at Burbank, California, to complete arrangements for the filming of "Captains of the Clouds" there. This one, based on the Royal Canadian Air Force, is to be directed by Michael Curtiz. The RCAF is cooperating.

French Seek Exiles

The fall of France and the consequent collapse of its film industry has sorely affected the prospects of film amusements for French Canada.

Ambitious French theatrical circles in Quebec would have all the exiled Parisian film artists and technicians come here and give birth to a new Canadian cinema industry, and while the idea of rebirth of French films in Canada's 'New France' listens well, funds for promotion are not likely to be forthcoming from a Quebec government already burdened with financial worries of a domestic nature, plus war requisitions by England for the war with the Axis powers.

Apart from this, and warned by the fact that 'real' French-film supplies are but enough to last a short while, French Canadian amusement heads are preparing for a time when their film houses will either have to close their doors, or proffer some alternate type of entertainment. The fact is they are currently engaged in preparing that alternate amusement device,—the stock company for stage shows.

Montreal, until a decade or more ago, was a prosperous stopping-off place for both English and French stock companies. With the advent of talking pictures, however, stage entertainment declined rapidly, more so here than in other Quebec centers.

French companies, however, with 'big-name' casts, still flourished, and it is felt today that a spirited revival of French stock with star casts will, when the stock of French films is exhausted, be ready and sufficiently popular to supplant and absorb the revenue of the French film.

First step in the direction of the revived French stage was the production of Dans L'Ombre du Harem" ("In the Shadow of the Harem") by La Comedie de Montreal, French stock company which alone has survived the onslaught of lean days and the talking film. This group will, in the near future, present their production at the Monument National, large French theatre, with Ramon Novarro in the lead.

On the success of this first experiment rests the larger plan to engage French stage and screen luminaries presently in voluntary exile in Hollywood, New York and London.

Larger number of these personalities have little or no experience in the American or English stage or screen scene, and the proposition which New France offers, with its potential audience of some 4,000,000 is described as an attractive one. Even if its prospects of success were dull, the experiment will give them opportunity to keep their hand in until the hoped for eventual liberation of France, its peoples and its cinema.

Pascal Plans Secret

Although arrangements are reported to have been completed between Gabriel Pascal, British film producer, and Associated Screen News, Montreal, for the production of feature-length films in Montreal, little definite information is permitted to circulate regarding the new project.

In the beginning negotiations between Mr Pascal, Ben Norrish of Montreal, and the Dominion government were shrouded in secrecy, and gave rise to a wealth of rumour and speculation. Reports then were that the producer was to make government short features with the aid of the Dominion's propaganda department and the British Ministry of Information. Reports varied as exhibitors and theatre men stabbed blindly at Mr. Pascal's motive in coming to Montreal.

Later reports were that two "million dollar productions" were under consideration by the interested parties, and at least one of these had been given a name.

It has been said authoritatively here that the initial Canadian film production on Mr. Pascal's production program will be "The Snow Goose" a story by Paul Gallico. Possessing all production rights to the Shavian stories, it is expected that the producer will follow up with a choice from George Bernard Shaw's "The Millionaire," "Captain Brasshound's Conversion" or "Arms and the Man." After that will come "Saint Joan."

From the same authoritative source it is reported that a name cast will be brought to Montreal or to location, for the film work. A famed character actor from Hollywood has reportedly been tested for the leading role. In view of the fact that Paul Muni, one of Hollywood's most distinguished character actors has just recently completed work in "Hudson's Bay," and considering that Mr. Gallico's story has part of its locale in the Hudson's Bay Territory, there may be some reason for suspecting that Mr. Muni will be approached with the role. The balance of the cast has apparently not been decided upon.

First rumor that the British Ministry of Information was sharing some responsibility for the project, a rumor later spiked, is recurrent again. An analysis of the Gallico story demonstrates that action in "The Snow Goose" centres first in Canada, in the north territory, and shifts to the channel shores of England and France during the evacuation of Dunkirk.

Some collaboration with the Ministry of Information is seen necessary if the story of Dunkirk is to be told. When it is told it will doubtless be fashioned with an eye to lauding the British courage in face of disaster—Dunkirk might easily have been a disaster.

If it follows this pattern it becomes propaganda, and as such must come from the British Ministry of Information. Therefore, although accurate information on the Pascal-Associated Screen News Co. plans is carefully guarded, there is fertile ground for guess-work.

It has been reported that Mr. Pascal is to fly, or has flown to London via Lisbon to confer with the Ministry of Information and secure what co-operation he can from that body. Possibilities are that the waters run a little deeper than that.

THEATRE MANAGERS HAVE FILM HOBBIES

Three theatre managers in Halifax, N. S., enjoy the same hobbies. T. J. Courtney, manager of the Casino, P. J. Dwyer, manager of the Family, and I. L. Haley, manager of the Dundas and Mayfair theatres are amatuer photographers, both still and motion, and all are also amatuer projectionists Whenever anything of news importance occurs in their neighborhood, they photograph the event then screen it in their theatres, as a special attraction.

Mr. Courtney has long been active as an amatuer cameraman. He has won a number of prizes in both Canada and the United States.

Permanent Exhibitor Group

The joint committee of the Edmonton Exhibitors' Association, Calgary Exhibitors' Association and Independent Exhibitors' Association in Alberta, which was organized for the purpose of opposing a recent measure to prevent exhibitors in that province from giving away prizes, has been formed into a permanent group and probably will operate in the future in protecting theatre managers' problems. The Committee also acted in persuading the government to hold up a tax on 15-cent tickets for children, and now is considering a proposal to place one operator in a booth rather than two. Committee members include: Walter Wilson and J. J. Leiberman, for Edmonton; Roy Chown and J. Peacock, for Calgary, and H. G. Stevenson and Nat Park for Independent.

US-Canadian Defense Film

Canadian and United States authorities are joining forces in production of a film based on hemisphere defense, Ottawa officials of the National Film Board announced last week. Film Commissioner John Grierson, said the film was being made for the Department of Public Information. Approximately half of the footage is being shot in America. The picturely probably will be completed in November.

Wolfberg Made Booker

John Wolfberg, formerly manager of Schine's Strand theatre in Lexington, Ky., has been appointed Cincinnati booker for the circuit. He replaces Joel Golden, who recently resigned to become Universal salesman in West Virginia in place of Jerry Marks, who has been transferred to the Columbus, Ohio, territory.

Hoss Named Branch Manager

Lon Hoss, Universal city salesman in Los Angeles for the past six years, has been promoted to San Francisco branch manager by the company. Barney Rose, former San Francisco branch manager, has been transferred to the same position in Chicago.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

EXTRA-CURRICULAR activities are at an all-time high in Hollywood, with almost everyone and his brother in the movie colony practicing a little outside business activity on the side, or else giving expression to hobbies with funds and special fancy.

Most New Yorkers in movies, radio and theatricals don't seem to have the time or inclination for other lines. Hardly a handful of stars in the East go in for that sort of thing. One finds only a spattering on selling sidelines, such as Lowell Thomas, who, the other day, sold a flock of fox pelts, from his fox farm up the Hudson, to Garfinkel's department store in Washington, D. C., and Colonel Stoopnagle, who is opening a bowling alley up in the New Canaan, Connecticut, countryside, and Jack Cohn, Abe Montague, Dave O'Malley and others at Columbia Pictures, who just opened a new bowling alley, called the Roxy, at 50th Street and 7th Avenue, where one finds automatic tele-scores, photo-electric foul lines, a 90 foot circular bar, private ladies' powder rooms, showers, lockers, 22 Brunswick alleys and whatnot, all operating 24 hours a day.

But in Hollywood filming, things are different. Everybody's in another business, from food and fish to raising Afghan hounds, with horses, horses, horses being the favorite line. Here are some typical extra-curricular activities of some Hollywoodites:

Harry Botwick, at the State Theatre, in Portland, Maine, put on a big air-minded promotion for Paramount's production of "I Wanted Wings." One of the many stunts was a Model Airplane Contest, for which a special trophy was awarded. They called it the 'Veronica Lake Trophy,' a shapely thing.

The Government's trust-busters are certainly getting strong. They've been pushing the picture business around for years; now they're going after Wisconsin cheese makers for a monopoly in limburger.

As receptionist in the New York offices of Broadcast Music, Inc., the broadcasters' anti-ASCAP music publishing firm, Miss Marguerite Cromwell meets many a queer duck, many an aspiring and perspiring would-be song-writer.

One gent stormed the office the other day from Niagara Falls, N. Y., and shouted the complaint that his wife had left their home several weeks ago, headed for BMI in New York with two songs. She had not been heard from, and the complainant demanded that BMI produce the corpus delecti.

Another fellow walked in the other day with a song entitled "Hip, Hip Hooray for the NRA." When the would-be composer was told that the NRA and its Blue Eagle died years ago, he didn't believe it.

Ralph Budd, personnel manager for Warner Brothers' New York home office, formerly also the mayor of Wyckoff, New Jersey, and now the coordinator of local defense activities there—this week extended his organizing talents for defense of his company's building and surrounding area, near Times Square in New York.

Mr. Budd on Monday was registering applicants for a 24-hour per day air warden service, to operate from atop the Warner building. There are, in present plans, to be 12 men, all Warner employees, all volunteers, serving in three eight-hour shifts. On Monday, they were being sent to police headquarters for further registration, questioning, instruction, etc. Shortly, Mr. Budd expects posts to be assigned, duties also; and perhaps uniforms, helmets, and other pertinent air warden equipment.

With each shift of four air wardens, one building maintenance man will be stationed. He will tell the air wardens what valves, trap doors, switches, etc., to operate.

To those many prospective army selectees in this business we pass along the story about the Southern Negro who, upon receiving his draft questionnaire, struggled desperately with the long list of questions. He looked it over for a long time, scratching his head and sweating profusely. Finally he gave up in despair and returning the blank to the draft board made this notation on the last page, "I'se reddy when you is."

Paramount could make a swell tieup with those departing German consular officers for "Kiss the Boys Goodbye."

This one is reported by E. H. Mayer from Owensboro, Ky., a situation in the Cincinnati film exchange territory. The town adopted daylight saving time, but after a one-week trial went back to central standard time. The reason assigned to reinstatement of the original time was women's complaints that the grass and flowers were literally burning up because of "too much daylight."

For the seventh successive year, Rockefeller Plaza, in the heart of the homes of large radio, television and motion picture interests in New York, will be designated as a private thoroughfare and closed to traffic on Sunday, July 13th, for the twelve hours between 6 A. M. and 6 P. M., in compliance with an agreement between Rockefeller Center and Columbia University.

Ropes will bar entrance to the three-block street, situated between Fifth and Sixth avenues and running from 48th to 51st street.

A clause in the rental agreement between the university and the Rockefeller group specifies the closing of the street for the twelve-hour period, in order to protect Columbia's ownership of the thoroughfare, which is part of almost three blocks of land owned by the university and leased to the Center. A Sunday in July is picked because traffic in the area reaches a low at that time.

Baltimore, Buffalo, Kansas City, Columbus Variety Outings

The Baltimore Variety Club is contacting newspapers, business firms and other sources which donated trophies to its golf tournament last year in an effort to have them repeat the courtesy this season. The Fourth Annual Golf Tournament is scheduled to take place July 18th at the Woodholme Country Club.

Rodney Collier and Joseph C. Grant are co-chairmen, respectively, of a committee in charge. The Prizes Committee consists of Edward Jacobs, J. Louis Rome, William K. Saxton, Fred Schmuff, Richard Anderson, Claude Hellman, Paul Vincent, H. C. Dusman, Louis Wallman and Louis Gaertner.

H. J. Griffith and Jay Means have been appointed co-chairmen of the Kansas City Variety Club outing and turtle derby to be held in that city July 28th.

Committee members are: R. R. Biechele, chairman, turtle race committee, with Jack Gregory and Griffith assisting; turtle sales, Clinton Jones, Sam Abend, Earl Jameson; publicity, W. J. McKinney, William Lansburg, Roy Alexander; golf, William Benjamin; entertainment, Jerry Zigmond, Ollie Williamson.

The Columbus, Ohio, Variety Club will stage its second annual roundup at Beulah Park, July 30th, with the attendance limited to 1,000. A midway, a western spectacle, a fiesta and frolic will be among the features.

The Buffalo, N. Y., Variety Club will hold its annual golf tournament and dinner-dance on August 4th at the Wilmont Country Club.

The day will be known as District Managers Day, and all district managers whose territory includes Buffalo will be guests of the club. Phil Fox is chairman of the arrangements committee.

Pathe-Du Pont Contracts Require Special Master

Federal Judge John C. Knox in New York Wednesday ruled that a special master would be required to pass upon disputed accounts in the suit of Pathe Laboratories, Inc., against DuPont Film Manufacturing Corporation for $210,000 damages. If the parties cannot agree upon a special master the court will appoint one. Pathe alleges breach of a contract made in 1935 under which it purchased 77,000,000 feet of positive nitro-cellulose film from DuPont at 30 per cent over cost. The suit claims that the defendant overcharged.

Two Firms Incorporate

Articles of organization have been filed for two Pouzzner corporations, with Daniel Pouzzner of New Haven, Conn., as agent, in Hartford. The corporations, Central Properties, Inc., and The Connecticut River Realty Corporation last week purchased the Middlesex theatre, Middletown, Conn. The officers are Morris Pouzzner, president and Dora G. Pouzzner, secretary, both of Newton, Mass., and Daniel Pouzzner, of New Haven, assistant-treasurer.

Appoint USO Heads

Jack Kirsch, president of the Illinois Allied, and John Balaban have been named co-chairmen of the amusement division of the United Service Organizations in Detroit.

The Officer and the Lady

(Columbia)

Cops and Robbers

For this picture, Columbia has taken the old tale of cops and robbers, given it a few new twists, and made a film which, considering the type and the budget, is good entertainment, calculated to please audiences that like action romances.

Bruce Bennett gives a good performance as the young policeman that wins the girl, who is going with one of the gangsters without knowing his identity; and also is chiefly responsible for the capture of the whole gang. Rochelle Hudson plays the daughter of a retired police lieutenant who does not wish to marry the young policeman because she is afraid that he, like her father, will be permanently disabled or killed in the line of duty.

There are several thrilling chase scenes, with police squad cars pursuing the gangsters. The policeman and the member of the gang that is going around with the girl he wishes to marry, also have an old-fashioned rough-and-tumble fight. A bit of humor is supplied by the policeman driver of the hero's squad car. The standard of acting is high, even for players who have only a small part. The direction of Sam White maintained the action character of the film, without neglecting to give some emphasis to the romantic side. Good editing in the chase sequences heightened interest by showing the coordination between officers in the police cars and officials at headquarters, through the use of two-way radio.

Production by Leon Barsha capitalizes fully on the material.

Son of Davy Crockett

Western Melodrama

Big Bill Elliott here continues his career of delineating sons of American frontiersmen and supplies, in the doing, an hour of entertainment well above average for the production cost. Like many a film fabricated without need for mortgaging the studio, this one follows a straight story line to better result than many an all-out display of expensive trappings.

Dated in the administration of President Grant, the film depicts Elliott, as son of David Crockett, engaged in the business of guaranteeing to residents in a strip of land which a surveyor's error has left outside the United States but in no other dominion save that of a self-appointed "king" whose hired thugs have terrorized the settlers. How Crockett bests the outlaws and manages to conduct a plebiscite in which they can vote freely for entry into the Union is a straight story containing plenty of fighting and suspense.

Produced by Leon Barsha and directed by Lambert Hillyer, the picture is sound in all departments and a satisfying entertainment within its budgetary limits.

Jungle Cavalcade

(RKO Radio)

Adventure Galore

Frank Buck's "Jungle Cavalcade" is a composite feature of all the thrilling scenes taken from other jungle pictures, "Bring 'Em Back Alive," "Wild Cargo" and "Fang and Claw." Breaking down the three previous films and recompiling the highlights of each into this one production has resulted in a picture that progresses with rapidity from adventure to adventure, remaining at all times engrossing.

Such scenes as jungle beasts and reptiles, including a python, a crocodile, a tiger and a panther, battling for self-preservation and supremacy in their domain, time and again are flashed on the screen and each time the audience slides forward in anticipation awaiting the outcome. Between these scenes of drama in the jungle a lighter tone of humor has been inserted such as monkeys at play who, as Mr. Buck says, "have more fun than a barrel full of people." The camp's various pets continually at odds with each other and other scenes draw more than an occasional chuckle.

In presenting "Jungle Cavalcade" exhibitors have at hand a picture of content that has not been seen in a number of years. Exploitation of such a film, however, still remains the same as demonstrated by the Palace theatre on Broadway when it drew crowds by the lobby display of huge papier-mache elephants, gorillas, etc., while ushers and usherettes wore the traditional costume of jungle hunters.

Reviewed at the Palace where a noon-time audience filled the theatre, although there was only one feature and no stage attraction. Applause was frequent and the laughs numerous. —GEORGE SPIRES.

Produced by Frank Buck and currently being distributed by RKO Radio. Sequences from "Bring 'Em Back Alive" directed by Clyde Elliot, "Wild Cargo," directed by Armand Denis, and "Fang and Claw." Running time, 77 minutes. Release date, June 27th, 1941. P.C.A. No. 03139. General audience classification.

Raiders of the Desert

(Universal)

Action Comedy

Much action and many situations planned for laughs have been packed into the one hour length of this picture which has Richard Arlen and Andy Devine coming to the rescue of George Carleton, founder of a modern and progressive city in the Arabian Desert, and Linda Hayes, his American secretary.

The villains are a native Arab leader and his men who wish to drive out the foreigners and take away the rights and liberties of the Arab citizens of the democratic town, restoring them to virtual slavery. The plotters are aided by a fifth columnist working within the city and trusted by the officials.

With the fist and gun fights for action, and Andy Devine given many opportunities for comedy, this picture is a satisfactory supporting feature. Richard Arlen fans may be assured of plenty of action; a bit of romantic interest is supplied by Arlen and Linda Hayes.

Direction by John Rawlins aimed at providing action and yet avoiding a melodramatic effect by putting the emphasis on humorous scenes in which Andy Devine plays his familiar role. Ben Pivar was associate producer.

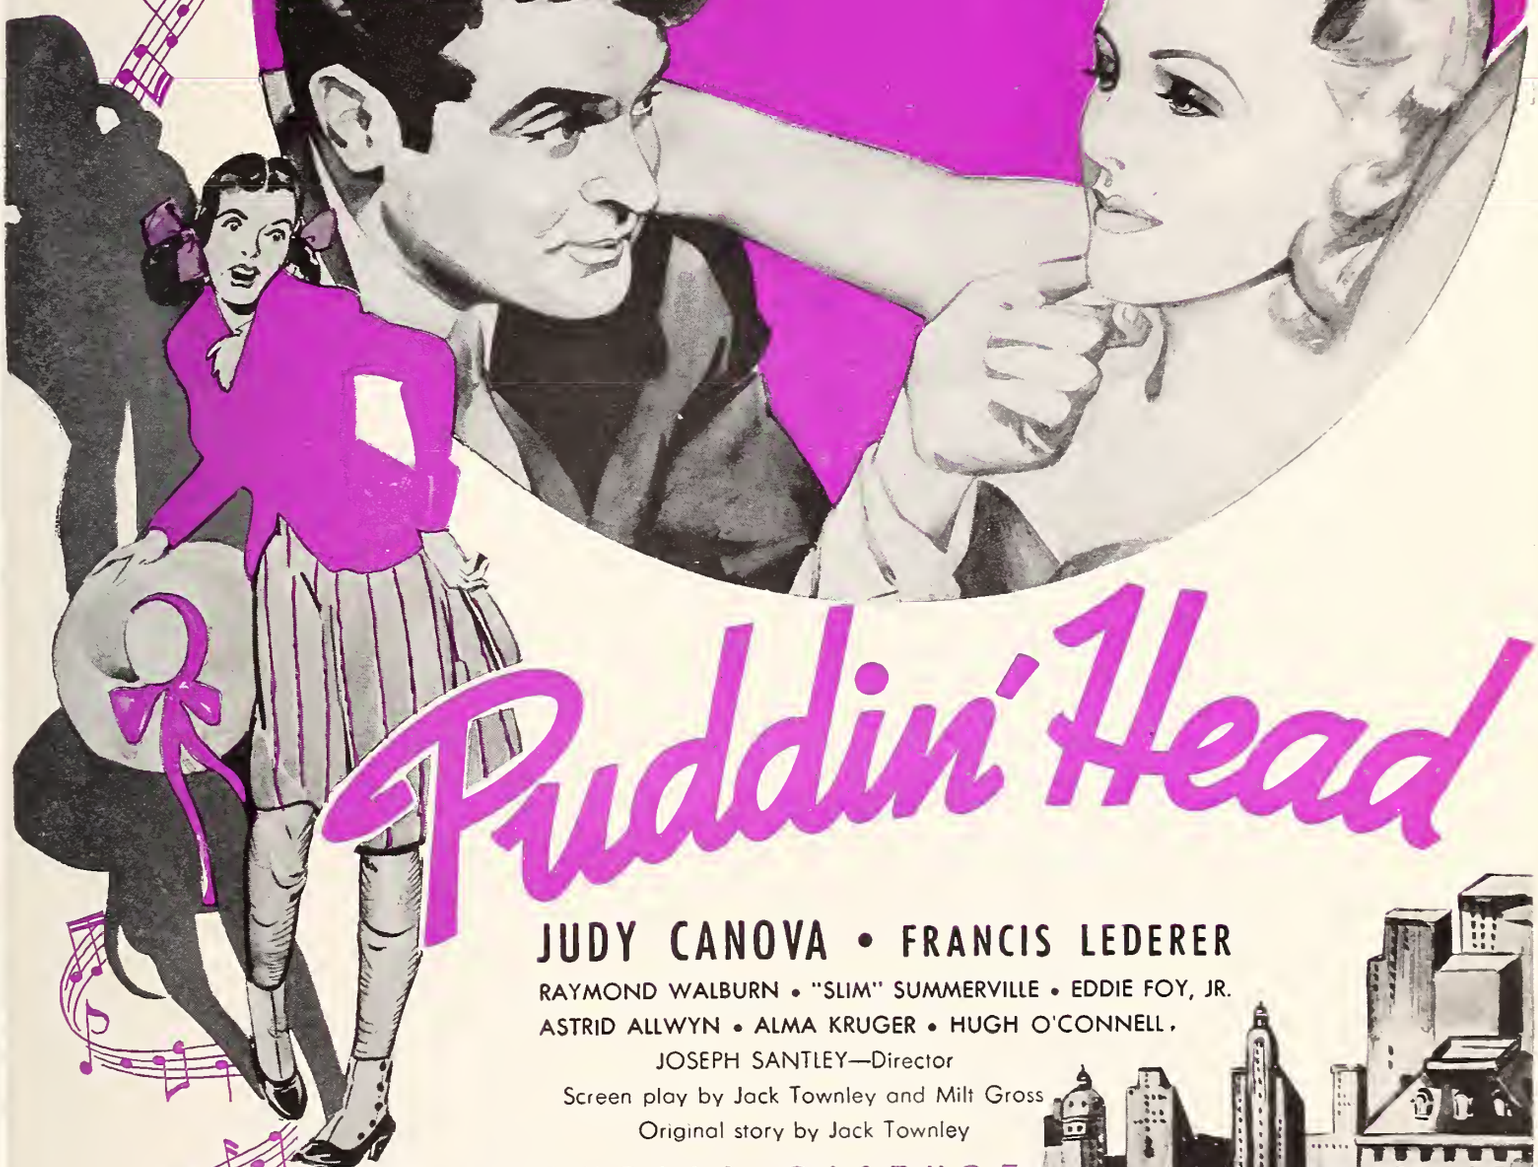
Turned Out Nice Again

(Ealing Studios - United Artists)

Comedy



This, the last comedy to be made by George Formby, Britain's Box Office Champion as somebody else's foster child—he has now formed his own company for the production of world market films to be distributed by Columbia—already reveals a change of policy. Instead of the slapstick which has marked his earlier films, and which has undoubtedly helped to amass his terrific appeal at the box office, a quieter brand of comedy, with more reliance on character is essayed. Formby's personality is obviously liked by the popular section of British patronage, but it remains to be seen whether the latter will adjust itself to a less physical brand of comedy.

Formby's role is that of employee in an outdated underwear manufactory, with unscrupulous rivals, an anachronistic boss and a terma-gant mother-in-law. Between the three he has a difficult time, but eventually cashes in on a new type of yarn and gets an executive position in his firm. The role of the chivvied and chased John Dokes suits Formby, who, of course, dresses it out with a bevy of songs—some without the accustomed ukelele—and some entanglement with ladies undergarments. The note of negligee is indeed struck hard and often, and not only are there mannequin displays of feminine underwear, but a personal investigation of the leading lady's more intimate equipment and an academic discussion on who is wearing which and what they are called! More than once some double entendres, probably above the heads of the gentlemen of the B.B.F.C., caused both sniggers and gasps from the trade show audience.

Formby's foil in this last Ealing comedy is a cute little lady, Peggy Bryan, who has vivacity and charm. Edward Chapman strolls in and out of the action as a Lancashire pigeon fancier. Mackenzie Ward delivers a well-groomed performance as the boss's son, and O. B. Clarence, veteran character actor, shows that veterans can be depended upon to deliver the goods.

The film is technically polished with notably good camera work.

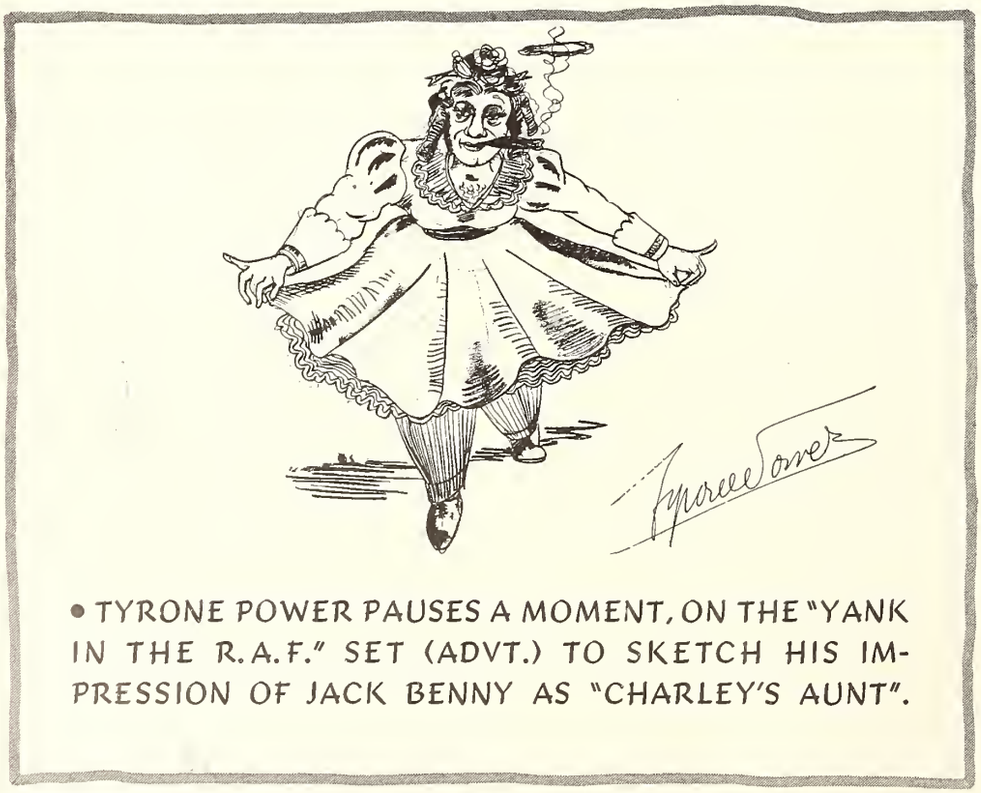
Hurry, Charlie, Hurry

(RKO Radio)

Leon Errol At Work

A comedy in the gag tradition, with every sequence designed to stand on its own power to produce laughter, this is strictly a film for the Leon Errol trade. The comedian has a monopoly on the footage, the dialogue, the falls, the bumps, and bounces, with no competition, and only incidental support from the remainder of the personnel. As Errol goes in your community, it may be said with unusual finality in this case, so goes the picture. The tale with which the comedian is identified is synopsized on page 135 of your Product Digest. It is not by story, however, but by gag and situation that the film stands or falls. In the case of the preview screening witnessed, it fell more often than it stood.

The early portion of the picture centers about a banker's fishing expedition and some Indians he meets, who later visit him at his home, embarrassing him in a variety of ways. Later on, the film goes back to the mistaken identity formula of years agone, with several players masquerading as a vice-president of the United States who complicates everybody's plans by appearing unexpectedly upon the scene. There's an elopement idea in the background for romantic interest.



Howard Benedict is down as producer, and direction is credited to Charles E. Roberts, both craftsmen having proceeded, it would appear, on the theory that Leon Errol is unto and by himself sufficient.

Professor Mamlock

(Artkino)

Propaganda Melodrama

"Professor Mamlock" is a Soviet-made melodrama of a Jewish doctor in a German clinic and the persecutions and hardships he, his family and his race suffer following Adolph Hitler's rise to power in 1933. The picture was originally released in this country in November, 1938, but was withdrawn when the Russo-German alliance was signed. Daily newspaper headlines explain the reason for the film's reappearance.

It concerns a Jewish doctor free of political beliefs who works only for the betterment of humanity, while his son is the leader of a Communist movement in Germany. The rise of Naziism with the subsequent persecution of the Jews and Communists, and the underground activities of the Soviet group who sacrifice all so that their propaganda messages may reach the people, are a few of the elements stressed to condemn any other form of government while glorifying Communism.

For other than Soviet sympathizers the picture is a biased and propaganda-filled production with little appeal since its revelation of Nazi activities, its one major asset, is completely overshadowed by extolling the virtues of Communism.

Production technique and acting are on a par with other Russian-made films exhibited at various times in this country.

Reviewed at the Miami theatre on Sixth Avenue, New York, where an audience of Soviet supporters grasped every opportunity to applaud.—GEORGE SPIRES.

Produced by Lenfilm in Leningrad and being distributed in the United States by Artkino. P.C.A. No. 02430. Running time, 95 minutes. Release date, July 7th, 1941. General audience classification.

Dangerous Moonlight

(RKO Radio in England)

Emotional War Drama

There are two schools of thought about the salability of war subjects in a belligerent country. Producer Sistrom belongs apparently to that school which believes the exhibitor can sell war films. He has, however, fortified his film with compensatory factors—a strong emotional quality and a certain topicality. "Dangerous Moonlight" thus is likely to go over where many another subject inspired by the war might turn them away. For all its over generous footage and pedestrian pace it has a certain poignancy, and the ultimate air fights smell like the real thing. It is not too English in its accent, and this, with the glimpse it affords of the Battle of Britain, suggests an angle of exploitation to the American exhibitor.

The "Dangerous Moonlight" is the bombladen Warsaw night which brings together a Polish pianist and an American girl. Far from the horrors of Warsaw they marry, and he pursues his musical career, only to go back to England, when France gives in, and pilot a fighter against the Nazis, to lose his memory and the musical genius which has made him famous. . . . But only for a time, for he recovers in his mind, his music, and the wife he left in order to fight for his beloved Poland. There is the essence of the story which develops emotionally the conflict between love and duty, arraying it all with music and virtuosity, touches it off as well with a few strokes in the vein of the eternal triangle.

Anton Walbrook is the pianist, and his portrayal is characteristic, poised, sombre and impulsive. As his wife Sally Gray puts a deal of sympathy into her role. Derrick de Marney as the other man, and despite the hindrance of an unconvincing "Irish" accent, is likely to warm the feminine hearts no less.

The musical passages, with solos, and concerti with orchestra add the full flavor of the concert hall and are agreeable, and the scenes in the fighter station, and the air battles between Spitfires and Heinkels seem to have been aided in treatment by some authentic camera-gun shots.

Brian Desmond Hurst's direction is both sympathetic and efficient and George Perinal's camera work and Allan Jaggs' cutting are distinctive assets.

A London trade audience responded to the film's emotional passages and seemed to warm to de Marney's personality particularly. The slowness and length, however, seemed to take toll of critical stamina.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Ellery Queen and the Perfect Crime

(Columbia-Darmour)

Murder Mystery

Producer Larry Darmour's third murder mystery based on the exploits of Ellery Queen is tops for the series in point of name values for marquee display, but below the average as to entertainment effectiveness, due to weakness in story development, and a shifting of emphasis away from the principal character. The combination of circumstances suggests concentration on cast billing. the exclusion of promises or predictions, as proper showmanly procedure.

The crime at core of this item in the series is the killing of a financier whose stock dealings have impoverished family friends as well as customers. The picture goes to such extreme lengths to mislead audiences into suspecting all the innocent members of the cast, that it fails to establish a sufficient motive for the guilty one or to clear up, at the conclusion, the suspisions directed toward the others. It also distributes camera attention so widely as to neglect the principal character, whom audiences expect to have more to do with solving the mystery than he does have.

Direction by James Hogan is a deal less effective than most of his past work, the pace slowing and spurting by turn; and the humor particularly bogging down.

Birthplace of America

(Classic Pictures)

Our British Forebears

This tour of the farms and towns of England whence the forefathers and patriots of the United States emigrated is a timely combination of travelogue and history. Current emphasis on Anglo-American relations lends appeal to this picture, produced by Jeffrey Bernerd, formerly general manager for Gaumont-British. It shows the sailing point of the Pilgrims at Plymouth, William Penn's home and the Quaker meeting house whose members later moved to Philadelphia, the farms of the ancestors of Washington, Lincoln, Lord Baltimore and many other famous Americans. Also depicted are Franklin's London home, and other landmarks in Britain of interest to Americans. Some are reported to have been destroyed by the blitz after the picture was filmed. The picture is interesting program material and should have special interest and exploitation value among "Bundles for Britain" groups. Running time, 10 minutes.

Aluminum

(Motion Picture Committee Cooperating for National Defense)

Defense Report

This subject deals with one of the greatest of present defense needs, aluminum. The airplane depends heavily on aluminum, and as the narrator explains, "Without bauxite we have no aluminum; without aluminum we have no wings; without wings we have no defense."

The picture opens with the importation of bauxite ore from South America. Then follow scenes depicting the many and complicated processes which transmute the bauxite to alumina and eventually into sheet metal for airplane manufacture. The sense of urgency and pressure and speed is stressed. The photography is dramatic, with many scenes superimposed on others. The musical score is distinctly modern in motif and admirably suited to the picture. Of the timeliness of the subject, there can be no doubt. It should appeal not only to the mechanical-minded man, but also to the housewife, who uses aluminum in some form or other every day. Running time, 9 minutes.

Seattle Theatres Set Price Cuts

At the same time, Hamrick-Evergreen's Fifth Avenue, Paramount, Orpheum, Blue Mouse and Music Box theatres introduced new "junior admission" rates for patrons between the ages of 12 and 16, as well as similarly reduced rates for service men.

Similar reduced rates for juniors and service men are being scheduled at the circuit's second-run Coliseum theatre and John Danz's first-run Palomar and second-run Roosevelt. Matinee prices for juniors and service men at these houses will be 20 cents and evening prices 25 cents.

Stage Theatres Gross Million in Philadelphia

The stage in Philadelphia has proved itself to be very much alive, turning in a cumulative gross of almost $1,000,000 for the 1940-41 legitimate theatre season. Four houses were in operation for a total of 70 playing weeks with 35 attractions, two playing return engagements during the season. The season represents a 20 per cent increase over the 1939-40 season in point of audience response.

Indicative of the improved status of the legitimate stage there, 23 of the season's 35 shows ended their runs in the money. The previous season, only 15 of 27 shows broke even or better.

Film Adaptations Helped

Particularly interesting in the season's record is the observation that film adaptations of stage hits were helpful to the legitimate theatre's box-office. Katherine Hepburn returned her "Philadelphia Story" to the Forrest Theatre to gross $21,800 for a single week that coincided with the showing of the picture version in its fifth week in the downtown movie district. The $21,800 gross compares favorably with the $24,000 grossed by Miss Hepburn for an early season week, several months before the release of the picture.

In like manner, "Tobacco Road" did its best business in recent years there when coming into the Locust Street Theatre concurrently with the opening of the screen version in that city. And in spite of the fact that Holy Week was included in its run, the stage play grossed a highly profitable $33,600 for its three weeks.

The 1940-41 season, for a total of 70 playing weeks, grossed $994,500. The highlight of the season was the record-breaking run of "Life With Father" at the Walnut Street Theatre, grossing $219,700 for 13 weeks that ran down to the close of the season on June 1. It not only enjoyed the greatest run of any show in the last decade, but also turned in the greatest profit. A Yiddish musical added $6,000 for a single week to the Walnut's gross.

Shuberts' Forrest Theatre accounted for the lion's share of the season's business, grossing $515,600 with 18 attractions in 31 weeks of playing time. The season's record gross was also recorded at the Forrest. Al Jolson, opening the season on August 27, 1940, with his "Hold on to Your Hats," brought in $55,000 for its two weeks that was light one day, opening on a Tuesday.

The Locust, also a Shubert house, accounted for $214,600 with 12 attractions for a total of 22 playing weeks. The remainder was brought in by the Erlanger Theatre, which brought in $44,000 with three attractions in as many weeks. Of that total, $30,000 was accounted for by the Mask and Wig College production, "High as a Kite."

Encouraged by the box-office performance of the living stage last season, ambitious plans have already been formulated for the coming 1941-42 season. The Forrest has scheduled to reopen late in August with a new George Abbott musical to be followed by a return of Al Jolson's "Hold on to Your Hats." Katherine Cornell in "The Doctor's Dilemma" is scheduled for September and October dates are being held for Helen Hayes in Maxwell Anderson's new play, "Candle in the Wind," and for "Hope for a Harvest" with Frederic March and Florence Eldridge. The Locust also plans on reopening in August, scheduling "White Cargo" with Ann Corio, burlesque queen, making her local stage bow as Tonteleyo. Plans for the Walnut Street call for a stock company to take the house over.

NEW MOVES TO SINGLES IN FIVE ADDITIONAL CITIES

Trend Away from Multiple Bills Evidenced in Chicago and Other Major Territories

Significant turnings from double to single feature programs came this week in strong dual territories of Chicago, Milwaukee, Columbus, Cleveland and San Francisco.

Following the lead set by the Schoenstadt & Sons circuit last week in reverting to single feature programs at their ace house, the Piccadilly theatre in Chicago, the Essaness Theatres Corporation is trying out the same policy at the LaMar theatre in Oak Park, a suburb of Chicago, and has announced its intention of experimenting along the same lines in several neighborhood houses.

On July 6th four Essaness theatres, the Devon, Byrd, Argmore and Buckingham went into single features and short subjects, running from two to two-and-a-half hours each show. Each of the theatres has nearby double-feature competition but Essaness officials say the policy will be given a trial of at least two months before they make their decision as to the theatres' future policies.

Business Satisfactory

Arthur Schoenstadt reports that business with a single feature at the Piccadilly has been very satisfactory and the policy will be continued as long as the box office holds up. He is not definitely against double features nor does he particularly favor single features but thinks it is a matter of each individual situation finding out for themselves which policy is best for their respective theatres.

In Milwaukee, rumblings of a possible product shortage have been heard and while all local theatres continue their twin bill policies, Fox-Wisconsin Amusement Corp. has announced a single feature summer policy for some half dozen houses in as many cities around Wisconsin. In most cases, the solo policy is being used in towns where Fox operates several theatres and the second house in the respective city is continuing its dual feature policy. Singles have been announced for the Fox Stevens Point, Wausau theatre in Wausau, the Myers in Janesville, Odeon in Beaver Dam, Orpheum in Green Bay, and the Brin theatre in Menasha.

Following a recent test to determine audience preference for single or double features, in which sentiment in favor of single features definitely predominated, the RKO Palace theatre in Columbus, Ohio, was to inaugurate a new policy this week, in which both types of programs will be presented daily. The inaugural bill was to be "Moon Over Miami" doubled with "A Very Young Lady" in the afternoon, with the first picture continuing as a single feature in the evening. The admission scale remains the same.

Nat Wolf, Warner zone manager in Cleveland, has made the first step leading to the adoption of a single feature policy in subsequent run theatres. Early this week, the Uptown theatre, a 3,500-seat neighborhood house, went into straight single features with no change in the admission price. Heretofore, the Uptown has played a mixed policy—singles when the pictures were strong enough to stand alone, and duals otherwise.

All Cleveland first run theatres play single features, as do the de luxe first run neighborhood houses, including Loew's Park and Granada, Keith's East 105th Street, Warners' Colony and the Shaker.

In Spokane, Wash., the State theatre, which has long been the city's only single feature house, has switched to double bills, and the Post Street has returned to a straight dual policy, dropping circuit vaudeville after 22 months.

The first big attempt in San Francisco to start the main feature at 9 P.M. is operating satisfactorily according to Hal Neides, district manager for 17 Golden State and San Francisco theatres. Introduced four weeks by Roy Cooper, assistant to Robert McNeil, circuit head, the plan permits patrons to catch the main attraction from the start and to skip the second feature if they desire to get home early.

URGES PUBLIC WAR ON DOUBLE BILLS

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch said editorially last week that the elimination of multiple bill programs could not be attained successfully by legislation, "but by means of public opinion."

"Theater owners are complaining about a box office slump," the paper said. "Has it occurred to them that maybe those marathon programs have something to do with it? Has it occurred to them that one feature picture, a newsreel, perhaps a comedy and a preview, may be what the public really wants?"

Declaring the film double-header is a strain on the eyes, on patience and on tempers, the Post-Dispatch doesn't think legislation is the way to deal with "this surfeit of Hollwood products. It would be just as sensible to pass laws against long novels, or long speeches, or long business conferences, which are often exhausting, too."

Anti-Duals Bill Dies in Illinois

The Illinois legislature took sine die adjournment last week without giving final approval to any of the half dozen bills introduced allying to the industry.

Only one measure progressed to the point were passage was possible before the legislature took final adjournment. It was the Sandquist bill which would have limited showings to 135 minutes unless there was a fifteen-minute intermission every hour.

The bill passed the lower house of the assembly in the closing days of the session, but died in the senate committee on efficiency and economy. A move to pull the measure out of the senate committee two days before the session ended failed and the bill expired.

Other legislation which was introduced during the six-month long session, but which failed to make any progress and eventually died included:

A state wages and hours law, an act for creation of a motion picture censorship committee, a ten percent state amusement tax, on vending machines and a bill to regulate operation of Ascap in the state.

Regent Theatre Remodeled

The Regent theatre, an 800-seat house in Cedar Falls, Iowa, owned by the Cedar Amusements Company, Inc., and managed by M. R. Blair is being extensively remodeled. A new marquee has been added, the box office remodeled, all new entrance doors refitted, new flooring is to be laid, upholstered seats are to be placed in the 300-seat balcony, modern seating will be installed on the mezzanine floor, and new cooling coils will be installed. Mr. Hanns R. Teichert of Chicago will redecorate the entire theatre. New drapes will also be hung. Completion of the program has been set for August 1st.

TELEVISION AN INDUSTRY ONLY AFTER WAR, SAYS PARAMOUNT'S RAIBOURN

Coordinator Says Industry Will Not Be Ready Until After War Ends; Sees Impetus from Developments for Defense

Despite all of television's laboratory, program and economic progress, leading up, last week, to the Federal Communication Commission's "go" signal for commercialization, television, as an industry will not be ready until the end of World War II—but, it will be ready then.

This was the prediction made this week in Hollywood by Paul Raibourn, television coordinator of Paramount Pictures, which has been to date the most active, outwardly, of any of the motion picture companies having interests in the television field, including RKO-Radio, with its corporate ties with Radio Corporation of America and the National Broadcasting Company. Mr. Raibourn, an electrical engineer and alumnus of the Westinghouse and American Telephone and Telegraph Corporations, is also treasurer and director of Allen B. Dumont Laboratories, Inc., operator of station W2XWV at New York, and television subsidiary of Paramount.

Sees War Effort as Help

He compared the infant television industry to the position occupied by radio during 1917-18 and predicted that it would receive the same boost from war effort that established commercial radio during the '20s. "All the companies interested in the development of televison are now also engaged in war and defense work," Mr. Raibourn pointed out. Devices used for detecting airplanes, and other military radio instruments use television frequencies, he said. Radio received its greatest technical impetus from military use during the World War, when many of its present refinements were perfected.

Meanwhile, some 22 holders of experimental television station permits lustily pushed ahead with plans to start commercial telecasting, war or no war, as soon as they could acquire and install equipment. At New York, NBC, first on the air with commercial programs on July 1st, and CBS and DuMont, also broadcasting on regular schedules, but still on experimental licenses, concentrated on improving quality of programs and attracting audiences large enough to warrant large-scale sponsorship.

NBC, with WNBT, its transmitter on top of the Empire State building, settled into the second week of commercial programs. Films appeared on six of 14 scheduled broadcast periods, Monday through Saturday. The motion pictures planned for the airwaves included two Invincible feature productions, "Condemned to Live" and "Easy Money," produced in 1935, "Columbus," first in the Chronicles of America series, produced by the Yale University Press, a Carveth Wells travelogue of Bermuda and "We Are All Artists" from the Harmon Foundation and a 16mm amateur newsreel of the national glider meet at Elmira, New York. The latter represents one of the first attempts by a telecaster to acquire pictures of current events independent of the newsreels. The contract for the televising of the Chronicles of America series over NBC was reported in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD for June 28th.

Other NBC programs for the second week included boxing and baseball and swimming sport broadcasts, studio dramas and variety programs. Except for the Bulova watch company's 13-week time announcement contract there were no sponsors listed for the second week of television.

DuMont, meanwhile, was off the air again, and rushing installation of its antenna after it had made an unscheduled appearance, over an improvised aerial, on the evening of July 1st in order that it might join CBS and NBC on the air on the first "commercial" day.

Will Baltin, program director, and DuMont engineers expected that they would be on the air regularly, with studio programs now in rehearsal, and films, before July 15th. They expressed hope of securing a full commercial permit on or before August 1st. For the July 1st program DuMont used old Paramount short subjects. The reels were available for the duration of the experimental period.

At Chicago another Paramount television relative, station W9XBK operated by Balaban and Katz, was reported to have enlisted talent from B&K stage shows for experimental broadcasts. The station is rushing preparation for commercial programs over its transmitter on top of the State-Lake theatre building.

Experimental Operation

CBS continued scheduled experimental operations from its studios at the Grand Central Terminal, concentrating chiefly on live talent studio pickups. Children's programs, news, art, lectures, sports demonstrations and variety that included acrobats, cyclists, and dancers during the second week were in the pattern of the first week of CBS programs.

While engineers and program directors settled to the work of scheduling and rehearsing programs to fill the 15-hour weekly minimum ordained for commercial television by the FCC the business managers and advertising directors of the several New York television stations glowed with their prospectus of the industry's future.

War, the limited number of receivers, their high cost and the difficulty of procuring top program material, film or alive, did not appear to have dampened the enthusiasm of the business managers. They agreed with outside observers that television faces a vast commercial future.

Even with its present limited audience—variously estimated at 20,000 to 25,000 persons in the New York area—advertising men are reported preparing to try the medium for direct merchandising. Mortimer Loewi, vice president of DuMont, pointed out that upwards of 500 of the 4,000 sets in use in the New York area are located in public places, where they are seen by from 30 to 100 persons per set.

Noran Kersta, assistant to William Hutchinson, NBC director of television, reported that surveys by mail and by direct call indicated that an average of five persons are watching the screen of each receiver in the New York area during broadcasts.

Characterizing the television image as "the greatest selling medium extant," the television men are stressing its direct entry into the home, with a visual representation of the sponsor's product. Television will do more direct selling than any other advertising medium, with less commercial "plugging," according to its advocates.

Unions Enter Field

While the businessmen were busy with their television prospectuses supervisors of programs and budgets were keeping an eye on the various unions which claim jurisdiction over talent and technical employes of television. The unions were likewise keeping a careful eye on television.

Headquarters of the IATSE at New York revealed that the whole television question would probably come up for action at its executive council meeting scheduled for mid-summer. Locals will be authorized to press for contracts covering stagehands, property men and projectionists employed in television studios, it was predicted. To date the union has television contracts with CBS and NBC at New York and negotiations are under way with DuMont.

Jurisdiction over performers, with Equity, the Screen Actors Guild, and American Federation of Radio Artists claiming control is seen as a source of possible internecine warfare among the branches of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America. Broadcasters express themselves as willing to meet with any authorized employee group to discuss contracts.

FILMS DRAW CROWDS TO GOLF COURSE

Exhibitors in Wisconsin have become hardened to the spectacle of taverns using free outdoor motion pictures to attract patrons during the summer months, but the latest innovation is the staging of free film shows every Tuesday night by Jay Jones at his golf course at Randolph, Wis. Although there has been talk of erecting a theatre at Randolph, the city at the present time is without a house. The shows at the golf course are reported attracting excellent crowds.

U.S. MOVES TO TRIAL WITH CRESCENT CASE

Anti-Trust Trial in Nashville Expected to Set Precedent in Other "Field" Suits by U. S.

Long awaited as a determinant of the legal standing of the "little three"—United Artists, Columbia, and Universal—who are not parties to the Federal consent decree, and the ability of the large independent circuits to continue expansion and present business practices, the Government's field anti-trust suit against the Crescent Amusement Company circuit and the majors mentioned, began on Monday, in Nashville Federal Court.

It is the first of the field suits to be tried. Others are pending against the little three and the Schine circuit in Buffalo Federal Court, and against the Griffith circuit and the same majors in Oklahoma City Federal Court. The Department of Justice also intends to take up the anti-trust action in New York where it left off after the signing of the consent decree. The case is still pending against Universal, Columbia, and United Artists.

Trial Without Jury

The Nashville suit, opened Monday, will last six to eight weeks, observers said. The court is to sit six days a week, mornings and afternoons.

Almost the first move of the defendants Monday was the submission, and then withdrawal, of a motion for a jury trial; hence, the trial is proceeding as before, under Federal Judge Elmer Davies. Chief of defense counsel is George H. Armistead, Jr., representing the Crescent chain. He said, after the withdrawal, that jury trial was deemed unwise because of the case's complexity.

During most of Monday, the time was consumed arguing motions to quash the Government's primary demand for defendants' records.

Unofficial witnesses on Monday were J. Meyer Schine, president of the Schine circuit, and Willard McKay, his counsel, who both said they would observe only the opening days of the suit.

Despite predictions of a six or eight week trial, it may be shorter; for Allen A. Dobey, of the Government's staff, told the court the Department could present its case "in two or three weeks; maybe ten days."

Under subpoena by the Government, the following were present:

Thomas W. Young, manager Memphis branch, 20th Century-Fox; Walter W. Anderson, Paul S. Wilson, H. M. Lyons, T. L. Davis, Atlanta, Ga.; W. Guy Craig and George T. Landis, Indianapolis, Ind.; P. M. Baker, New Orleans, La.; J. A. Pritchard and J. B. Breechem, Charlotte, N. C.; J. J. Rogers and A. M. Avery, Memphis.

Also the following circuit representatives: G. W. Haynes, Memphis, Strand Enterprises, Inc.; Earl Hendren, Erwin, Tenn., Cherokee Amusement Co., Inc.; W. F. Ruffin, Covington, Tenn., Ruffin Amusement Co., Inc.; J. W. Baird, Newport, Tenn., Newport Amusements, Inc.; Louis Rosenbaum, Florence, Ala., Muscle Shoals Theatres; Cowan Oldham, Cumberland Amusements, Inc; Martin Solomon, from Los Angeles.

Judge Davies on Monday refused to compel three Crescent executives to furnish the Government with records subpoenaed; but, he also denied Columbia the privilege of withholding records until called for as testimony. The three executives were Tony Sudekum, Crescent president; R. E. Baulch, secretary-treasurer; and Kermit C. Stengel, executive of two companies affiliated.

They had been asked to submit information about inter-office and extra-office transactions and communications for the years 1934 to 1940.

Mr. Dobey pointed out that the five majors in the decree had furnished records when asked, as had Universal and United Artists. He noted that Columbia, asking to withhold its records, had, by counsel's testimony, nevertheless brought them to Nashville. The result of the argument was the Judge's decision records of the latter be on file for Government inspection.

First prosecution witnesses were called to the stand Tuesday, from Kussellville, Kentucky, and Jefferson City, Tennessee. These are towns in which Crescent had not operated prior to August 11, 1939.

The fact that the prosecution witnesses would come from these towns was disclosed by Robert L. Wright, of Government counsel, who also discussed the Crescent affiliated companies, including Rockwood Amusements, Inc., wholly owned, he charged, by Mr. Stengel, a son-in-law of Mr. Sudekum. With charts and maps, Mr. Wright noted, among other things, Crescent theatre acquisitions and locations of its theatres in 1934, and in 1939, when the present suit was filed. He asserted:

"Crescent virtually dictates to the distributor to whom he will sell, in the area in which Crescent operates."

The first two witnesses were Arthur Mitchell and Carl Hutton, from Russellville, Ky., and Jefferson City, Tenn., respectively. Both men testified to alleged coercion upon them to bring them into the Crescent circuit.

Mr. Michell said that in 1935 he was informed a second theatre would be built in this town of 3,000 population. The day after the report reached him, he said, a man introduced himself as Lee Castleberry of the circuit mentioned, and suggested he sell a half interest in his Dixie theatre to Mr. Sudekum, Crescent head. Mr. Mitchell also asserted that the alleged representative later threatened the circuit would buy him out or build a competitive theatre.

Mr. Hutton also related a story of theaters, by officials of the Cherokee Amusements, a Crescent affiliate.

On the opening day, too, there were arguments over the validity of the subpoenas issued to majors' representatives in New York.

Mr. Dobey, heading the Federal legal staff, said the Department of Justice would prove the defendants were able to secure lower rentals than independents, from the distributors; that they were favored, in clearance; and that the licensing agreements between the defendants were such that independent exhibitors could not compete.

Judge Davies, Wednesday called a government witness' testimony on a Fox salesmen's comments on Crescent buying power "far afield." Mr. Dobey replied it would relate to the case linking Crescent and all eight distributors in a conspiracy. The Judge's comment followed testimony by Ruble D. Page, operator of the Maury theatre, Mt. Pleasant, Tenn. He described opposition to his efforts to buy film in 1938, after Crescent announced construction of a competing house in Mt. Pleasant.

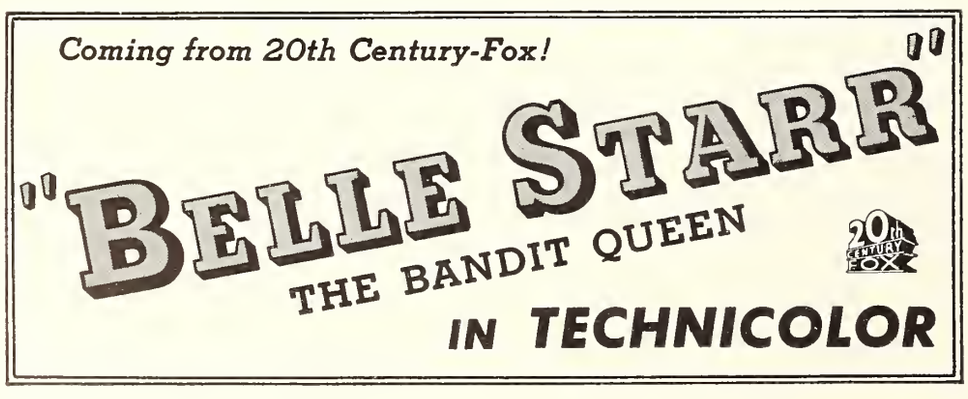
The Schine case is expected to be tried next; and, after that, the Oklahoma City-Griffith case.

Prefect Amends Particulars Bill

Complying with the demands by the majors and the Skouras circuit, the Prefect Theatres, Inc., operators of the Pickwick and Grenwich, Greenwich, Connecticut, last week filed certain additional complaints in its bill of particulars.

Site of the action was the New Haven Federal Court, where Prefect is suing the abovementioned for $5,452,575, alleging violation of the anti-trust laws, by maintenance of conspiratorial licensing agreements and clearance arrangements allegedly contrived to cripple the business of the two theatres.

The defendants had moved two weeks ago for a generally more specific bill of particulars; but were granted only a few requests.



The plaintiffs now state that "collectively produced and collectively distributed," as used in the complaint with reference to the film industry means "the aggregate amount of feature motion pictures produced by the defendant producers and distributors." As to the allegations regarding "collusion," the bill recites that plaintiffs have "no knowledge of and do not presently claim or rely upon any acts of collusion other than those now set forth in the complaint." They do reserve the right, however, to furnish further particulars "when, as and if they may obtain further knowledge and information" prior to the trial.

More Schine Data To Come from U. S.

Federal Judge John Knight in Buffalo late last week ordered the Department of Justice to serve the Schine circuit and Universal, Columbia, and United Artists, with a more specific complaint and bill of particulars. The application for such was made by the circuit several weeks ago. The Judge also granted the defendants ten days after service, to file answer to the amended complaint and bill.

BOOK REVIEW

PROFITABLE PUBLICITY (How to Do It—How to Get It), by Henry F. Woods, Jr. Dorset House, 208 pp., $2.50.

The business of developing publicity in the doing of it and the getting of it is offered in this newest of promotional "how to" books, "Profitable Publicity," a compilation of suggestions and findings based upon the author's years of experience in creating and planting the written word. According to the cover blurb, Mr. Woods has served may accounts in many places. He is publicity director for McCann-Erickson, advertising agents, and a director of the National Association of Publicity Directors. Thus equipped, in some 200 pages plus appendix of publicity syndicates and trade periodicals, he sets down what is intended to be a blue print for publicity—quoting the foreword—"to guide publicity men who are working in the profession, to help students of publicity who may enter the field, and for business men who may find it necessary to publicize their organizations but cannot avail themselves of the services of trained publicity assistance."

The volume, developed in 15 chapters, takes the publicity idea from its inception to a triumphal publicity story in print. Ideas and sources for ideas are presented. Detailed at chapter length are other components, of patterns, preparation and distribution of publicity pictures. Of especial interest to the student will be the generous space given over to the "dont's" of publicity writing and examples to illustrate different types of publicity. There are lists of test questions to sound out how well the reader has absorbed the subject matter. A typical publicity distribution schedule is included.

In the theatreman's immediate sphere, the author touches upon stunt publicity, contests and tieups. He refers briefly to "theatre publications" as an excellent source of outstanding exploitations and press agent promotions.

Since the volume is aimed at publicity in general business, its value for showmen must be largely academic. Able motion picture publicists and publicity-experienced theatre managers will find most of the material familiar.

DOMESTIC PRODUCTION IN MEXICO ON INCREASE

Russian Director - Producer to Make "Diana"; Bull Fight Comedy Sets New Records

by LUIS BECERRA CELIS
in Mexico City

An unusual picture production is in early prospect for Mexico, the film version of Emil Ludwig's novel, "Diana," screen rights to which Arcady Boytler, the Russian who has long been prominent in the Mexican industry as actor, producer and exhibitor, says he purchased for only $3,250. This deal is a result of the famous biographer's recent visit to Mexico. M. Boytler says the purchase had the stipulation that production had to be done in Mexico. Herr Ludwig, it is understood, is coming to supervise the filming. He will also attend the premiere of the picture here in the late Summer.

"Ni Sangre, Ni Arena" ("Neither Blood nor Sand"), a burlesque on bullfighting, featuring "Cantinflas," the tramp comedian, holds the record of setting new high grosses of any made in Mexico picture at its premiere theatre. This film shattered all records for the first week at the swanky Cine Teatro' Alameda here when it grossed $14,950—only $50 short of the first week of "Gone With the Wind" (MGM) at this theatre. "GWTW" played to matinees, always morning shows in Mexico, but "Ni" did not.

"Ni" stayed for three solid weeks at the Alameda and its total gross was $32,150, the biggest business yet at one theatre for any Mexican picture.

The Alameda is far ahead of other theatres here with business this year. According to Manager Mauricio de la Serna, the weekly gross of this theatre is some $2,200 ahead of that of any other local theatre and its business for the first half of this year is about $25,750 over that in the same period of 1940.

"Bolivar" Film Started

Miguel Contreras Torres, a leading producer, and Jesus Grovas, also prominent in production since he left Paramount, for whom he was manager here, have begun work on "The Life of Simon Bolivar," liberator of Venezuela. Naval warfare scenes are being shot at Papaloapan, in the watery region of the Isthmus of Tehauntepec, southern Mexico, where a replica of Bolivar's little fleet has been built. Julian Soler, in the title part, and Francisco Jambrina, in the role of Marshal Sucre, chief aide of Bolivar, are participating in these naval scenes. The cameraman is Jack Draper, American technician who has done much work in Mexico. The producers expect to finish the picture within three months. It is to cost $215,000, a new high for this country.

That the local public, which numbers about 1,750,000, favors pictures over all other public diversions is shown by a report of the civic treasury department that the average annual gross income of local theatres is around $4,350,000.

"Citizen Kane" opened at the select Cine Margerit, newest first run theatre here, preceded by a unique ballyhoo, staged by the exhibitor and RKO. This was a 15-minute broadcast from radio station XEB, repeated twice the day "Citizen" had its local premiere. These broadcasts consisted of the recital of the biography of Orson Welles, in Spanish by exclusive NBC artistes. There was also a radio report of events at the picture's opening at the El Capitan, Hollywood. This exploitation proved to be one of the most effective ever employed in Mexico and is likely to introduce a ballyhoo procedure here.

An acute case of taxes and work difficulties is making the going tough for exhibitors of Vera Cruz state. Four theatres, two each in the two most important key cities of the state, have been driven out of business by these factors. Two of them, the Eslava and Variedades, at the Port of Vera Cruz, are in bankruptcy. Their owners, Espectaculos Veracruz, S. A., did not explain why they had to quit. But there is strong evidence that demands of their workers and high state taxes were too much for them. These theatres were dark for several weeks recently because of a strike to compel the exhibitors to increase salaries. The exhibitors publicly announced that the pay their attaches demanded was out of all proportion to their services and economic conditions, not only in Vera Cruz but throughout Mexico, and drew odious comparisons with the pay other workers received.

These laborites have asked a district court in the port for orders to what will amount to attaching their former employers' money and goods. The workers declared that they suspect that the bankruptcy was fraudulent and that they intend to protect their interests in the liquidation of the business. Both these theatres met their workers' terms more than half way. But so much money had to go in wages and taxes that they just could not carry on any longer.

Two Theatres Close

Minatitlan, a key oil town in southern Vera Vruz, is now without pictures for its two theatres have had to close because of excessively high state taxes. Closure for this reason is expected soon for the only theatre in Coatzacoalcos, important Vera Cruz oil and railroad center. Workers of this town recently provided funds to permit their exhibitor to continue in business.

As pictures are the prime diversion in these towns, citizens and exhibitors have petitioned the state government to reduce theatre taxes. The government has taken the proposition under advisement. It is considered a possibility that most theatres in Vera Cruz must close unless taxes are cut and labor eases up in its monetary demands.

Enrique Vigil, Spaniard who operates a theatre circuit in Tampico, was included among the five Spaniards and two Mexicans of the port, all prominent, who were jailed in mystery arrests by secret service operatives at orders of the Federal Attorney General. The nature of the charges against the seven has not been revealed, but it is understood they are accused of being connected with a Nazist-Falangist spy ring.

The exhibitor and his associates, some of them accompanied by their wives, were brought to Mexico City for trial.

The 16mm. picture "Pulque," story of Mexico's historic and potent alcoholic drink, made by Ing. Javier Frias, an officer of the Cinema Club, local organization of prominent cinematographic amateurs, has been approved for public exhibition by the Federal Film Censorship and Supervision Department which considers that the picture is excellent propaganda in the Government's anti-alcoholic campaign.

This picture was given a special exhibition at the American embassy here and was highly praised.

LIGHTNING KILLS 94 IN MEXICAN THEATRE

A number of victims died in a frantic attempt to get out of the theatre after the lightning struck, the Mexican War Department announced. More than 40 bodies were found in two exits. President Manuel Avila Camacho has ordered an investigation and a careful study of motion picture theatres throughout the Republic and their exits will be made, it was announced.

CATCHINGS-WARNERS IN HOME RADIO WITH SPONSORLESS MUZAK SHOWS

Wired Music Unit To Start Non-Commercial Broadcast Programs; Receivers To Be Adjusted to Bar 'Bootlegging'

Innovation of "sponsorless" radio programs which "may revolutionize the broadcasting industry" was announced this week by Muzak Corporation of New York City, which furnishes wired music programs to thousands of hotels, restaurants, apartment houses and industrial plants throughout the country. Warners have an interest in Muzak. The announcement followed granting of Federal Communications Commission permission to construct a Frequency Modulation station which will transmit strictly non-commercial programs. In issuing the grant, the FCC described the experiment as "unique in the annals of radio broadcasting in this country and worthy of investigation in the public interest."

Muzak plans to provide "quality music, informative news and other programs free of the annoyance of advertising and commercials," through its transmitter, which will be located in New York City, with a power of 1,000 watts, operating on a frequency of 117,650 kilocycles, the same section of the spectrum in which Major Edwin H. Armstrong conducted his Frequency Modulation experiments.

Fee for Each Receiver

In announcing the project, Waddill Catchings, of Wall Street, company president, said, "The experiment is as significant as granting of permission for broadcasting by Frequency Modulation to Major Armstrong. We are confident there is a sizeable public which will prefer and appreciate programs free of irritating commercials." Mr. Catchings is a member of the board of Warner Brothers.

Financing of the system will be on a fee basis, each home subscriber to the Muzak service paying a nominal sum monthly, which fee has not yet been determined. Only those who subscribe will be able to receive the programs since Muzak equipment will be necessary to obtain the broadcasts. This provision is insured because the transmitter will emit a "pig squeal" or discordant sound which can be eliminated only by the special Muzak receiver leased to the subscriber. Bootlegging of the programs, therefore, will be automatically eliminated.

In authorizing the experiment, the FCC conditioned such authorization as "subject to change or cancellation by the Commission at any time, without advance notice or hearing, if, in the Commission's discretion, the need for such action arises," and further stressed that the Muzak operation "will be purely experimental in connection with the development of a subscriber broadcast service. The distinguishing feature will be that those receiving the programs will pay directly rather than indirectly" for radio programs.

Mr. Catchings also announced, "We have agreed with the Commission to make available our patents to others desiring to put out a competing service. The purpose of the patent is not to prevent competition but to make sure that only those who subscribe to the service receive it."

Amplifying reasons for the project, Mr. Catchings said, "There is no basic reason why the American public should be compelled to pay for its radio programs by submitting to advertising announcements," and thus to purchasing products advertised on the air. "The American public has never been given the opportunity to decide that radio should not be sold in the usual way by direct payment for the service." Muzak proposes to determine "whether the public or a sufficiently large portion of the public would prefer to obtain radio programs by direct payment for the service. There will be no advertising in connection with the service and the success or failure of the experiment will depend upon the willingness of the public to pay an amount which will warrant the furnishing of such a service as an established business."

1,000 Subscribers

Muzak now has approximately 1,000 subscribers, 800 of which are located in New York and the metropolitan area and the rest in Boston, Buffalo, Detroit, Miami, Los Angeles and Philadelphia.

Engineers from Wired Radio, Inc., Associated Music Publishers, Inc., and Music Transcriptions, Inc., have been added to the Muzak staff to complete technical plans for the experimentation. The news broadcasts will be obtained from United Press releases, and the objective is to eliminate "repetitious rebroadcasting or re-hashing of the same news bulletins."

Muzak originated in Cleveland about 1935 as a wire service for home set users, utilizing power lines for transmitting programs. In 1936, the company was reorganized, established headquarters in New York and switched its transmission outlet from power to the telephone wire. It is reported that the American Telephone and Telegraph Company has been interested in the company's development from the start. William Benton, formerly of the Benton and Bowles advertising agency, is one of the financial guiding spirits of the corporation.

Muzak was the first company to initiate music as a "morale builder" for workers in industrial plants. Manufacturers of the Arrow Shirts, the Cluett Peabody Company in Troy, New York, is one of the business firms now using Muzak programs to create greater work efficiency. A special division has been established by Muzak to handle increased requests from industrialists concerning its service, since the advent of the national defense production program. Muzak claims that wired music for industrial workers is not intended to act as a "speed-up" but rather to exert a "pleasant, harmonious influence" over large masses of workers and to lessen their fatigue.

Through its affiliation with Associated Music Publishers, Inc., Muzak possesses a great volume of transcribed music available for use in connection with its broadcasts.

The company believes that newspaper publishers particularly will evince great interest in its proposed "sponsorless" programs, and predicts that if the experiment proves successful, it is quite possible that the entire procedure of radio broadcasting will have to be reoriented.

"THERE'S NO PLACE LIKE HOLLYWOOD"

Old as the hills around Hollywood is the case of the star, director or writer who walks off the lot, or gets himself suspended, when executive scissors or blue-pencil circumvents his artistic aspiration.

New as Hollywood is new is the case of Fred Avery, cartoonist supervisor employed for five years by Leon Schlesinger, producer of cartoons for Warner release, who last week differed with the management on the propriety of cutting 40 feet from a Bugs Bunny subject filmed under his supervision.

Producer Schlesinger suspended Supervisor Avery for four weeks. The Avery contract has two years more to run.

Universal's "Juke" Film

The first studio to take screen cognizance of the "juke box" industry, Universal is preparing a musical, "Fifty Million Nickels," based on a background of the automatic phonographs installed in bars, restaurants and other public gathering places. While the film will not deal with the latest development of the coin-operated machines, the showing of motion pictures by an automatic projector activated by a coin, it nevertheless is a recognition of sorts by the film industry of the quasi-competitor. Joseph Gershenson will produce the picture for Universal.

Decker Takes P. R. C. Franchise

The Los Angeles franchise of Producers Releasing Corporation has been taken over by Samuel K. Decker, Louis Rutstein, who owned the franchise in partnership with Samuel Nathanson, will continue operating P. R. C. exchanges in San Francisco, Seattle and Portland. Dr. Decker was formerly Monogram's franchise holder in Detroit.

CUSTOMS "COPS" EYE AXIS FILMS FOR U. S.

All Foreign Pictures Inspected for Propaganda; Fairbanks Reports via Radio on Tour

All Axis motion pictures offered for entry into the United States are being examined by customs officers for propaganda as well as obscene or other content which would make them ineligible for importation, it was admitted in Washington this week. Indications of a tightening of U. S. bans on Nazi films were reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, last week, July 5th, page 13.

While Customs Bureau officials refused to comment on reports that propaganda pictures were being refused admission, Commissioner W. R. Johnson disclosed that all foreign pictures offered for importation were being inspected to determine whether they contained propaganda against the United States.

The commissioner pointed out that it had always been the practice of the bureau to examine imported pictures for moral content, and he indicated that they now were being studied from the "morale" as well as moral standpoint.

Application of the propaganda test to motion pictures would be but a projection of the Administration's drive against Axis activities in this country, marked last month by President Roosevelt's orders closing German and Italian consulates and propaganda offices, including the highly active German Library of Information in New York. Also engaged in the campaign has been the Post Office Department, reported to have confiscated tons of German and Japanese propaganda on the Pacific Coast.

In the absence of legislation dealing directly with the subject, observers in Washington see the Customs Bureau as the only agency which can cope with Axis propaganda films. Department of Justice officials said they had no plans to clamp down on such pictures, although they indicated the situation was being watched and they were familiar with the theatres showing the films and the organizations distributing them.

"Use the U. S. Navy," Fairbanks Urges

In a national radio broadcast, purporting to be the first "unofficial" report to the nation of his special mission to South America, by appointment of President Roosevelt, Douglas Fairbanks, speaking at the Independence Day dinner of the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies, in Washington, last Friday, called for national "united agreement with Secretary of the Navy, Knox, who proposed that the American Navy should be used now to clear the Atlantic of German submarines and raiders" as one way of undermining the "vanguard of Hitler's army" which, he said, "right now is preparing the ground for a Nazi push below the Rio Grande as well as above it."

Mr. Fairbanks, who is a national vice-chairman of the Committee, warned that the "widespread under-cover work of the Nazi machine means that a German invasion of the Americas is not just a fantasy purported by military alarmists, it means that the Nazi invasion of our hemisphere is already under way."

Declaring that the South American countries he toured gave evidences of the democratic spirit and that the people in each country looked to the United States for spiritual leadership in democracy, Mr. Fairbanks warned against minimizing the danger of Nazi propaganda in the southern continent and said, "Nazi groundwork is as plain as that which preceded the collapse of France. If Britain goes down to defeat the signal will be given from Berlin, subversive forces will come out in the open, our time will come at Hitler's choice of that time, not ours. Unless we have gone soft," he said, "unless our belief in our system and our honor is less than our desire to maintain our existence under any conditions, or at any cost, we must act now."

In discussing the President's appointment of him as a special envoy, which, at the time, was reported to have caused diplomatic rumblings in Washington, Mr. Fairbanks described his position as "what might be called a Sunday morning quarter-back of world affairs:" For the second time since his return to America, he scored the misnomer of his mission as a "goodwill tour," and added, "I don't doubt that many of you are wondering how it was that I was designated by the President to go on a diplomatic mission to certain South American countries. But I can tell you what the mission was for, what I found out, what I tried to do, but as to explain why I had the distinction of being entrusted with such Governmental responsibility is as much a mystery to me as it must be to some of you."

Mr. Fairbanks continued to outline briefly his impressions of some of the countries he visited, naming Brazil, Uruguay, Argentina, Chile and Peru. Of President Getulio Vargas of Brazil, he said: "President Vargas has been delegated to extreme powers, but it is ridiculous to assume from that, that the regime under him is totalitarian in the same sense we have come to understand that word. His devotion to the democratic principle and the democratic way of life is well known," and, he added, "he has proved it by actions as well as words."

The Hollywood actor declared, "Until the goodwill policy of the United States was instituted, the true feelings of the people of America toward Latin America had barely been given official expression. There is some hesitation on the part of certain groups in certain places toward accepting our outstretched hand, which," Mr. Fairbanks said, "cannot be denied, nor can it be denied that in view of the past performances of a handful of individual American citizens, Latin American suspicion is not without a certain justification."

The actor added, however, "This note is slowly changing. I promise you I'm not attempting to electioneer or campaign—that time is past—there is no need for it, but I say the people of South America have learned to trust and admire our President."

Mr. Fairbanks warned against those "who think of the countries of Latin America in a bloc," and termed this a "grave and tragic mistake. They are each of them distinct in their geography, climate, customs, economy, culture and manner as the European countries. Consequently, the problems confronting each country vary considerably."

Latin America does not want "charity," he said, and urged Americans to prove "by deeds that they (South Americans) can trade, live by their trade and progress by their trade. Only by living in the framework of democracy can trade be free, can culture be liberal and bellies be full," he said.

CHILE TELLS FILMS TO REMAIN NEUTRAL

Distributors of foreign films in Chile, following a special meeting in the office of the Governor of Santiago Province, announced early this week that the Government of Chile will ban, for the duration of the war, exhibition of pictures having any bearing on the ideologies of belligerent nations or reflecting on their methods of government. The move was characterized as one way in which Chile wishes to preserve neutrality.

Hits Hollywood's 'Goodwill' Idea

"The Hollywood goodwill idea is a lot of bunk so far as Latin America is concerned."

That's the gist of opinion rounded up by Willis Werner, San Francisco newspaperman just back from a three-month trip into Mexico during which he interviewed such Latin producers, distributors and players as Luis Sanchez Tello, Guillermo Haza, Vincente Orona, Arturo de Cordova, Fernando Soler, Rene Cardona, Petro Armendariz, Maria Luisa Zea, Alfredo del Diestro, Lolita Camarillo, Miguel Montemayor, Victor Herrera and others.

"It isn't Latin America which is in need of goodwill treatment—it's the United States," Werner explained. "The folks below the border know more about Americans than Americans know about them. They are genuinely interested and eager to be friends. It's America which upsets the apple-cart by sending down arrogant tourists and insulting films.

"If Hollywood picture people are honest in their expressed desire to spread goodwill, they could do more by giving Mexican and Argentine films a break in this country than by any other means—and that doesn't mean remaking them or butchering them for American release."

Moore's Decoration

Publicists Guild Votes in N. Y.; No Disney Peace

Members of the eastern unit of the Screen Publicists Guild on Wednesday, cast their ballots in a National Labor Relations Board election. The polls were taken at each of the home offices, under the supervision of NLRB Board examiner Charles Kramer.

An immediate consequence of a Guild victory in the election would be negotiations on the closed shop contract with demands for wage increases, job security, and seniority provisions.

Results of the voting were not to be disclosed until next week.

The Guild, early in the week, predicted "overwhelming" victory, asserting that "SPG membership ranges as high as 97 per cent of eligibles in many companies."

Disney Strike Continues

In Hollywood, meanwhile, the strike by the Screen Cartoonists Guild against the Disney studio entered its fifth week, as a mediator, Sanley White, came from the Labor Department.

On Monday, Disney representatives refused to negotiate with strikers' spokesmen, charging they scuttled an expected settlement last week.

Mr. White conferred Monday and Tuesday with both sides.

Ohter American Federation of Labor unions supporting the Guild withdrew Wednesday, and members were to return to work later that day. Willie Bioff, IATSE west coast leader, under indictment in New York for extortion, and in Los Angeles for income tax evasion, was reported a collaborator in the negotiations.

Mr. Disney last week sent the following message to the strikers:

"I believe you are entitled to know why you are not working today. I offered your leaders the following terms: All employes to be reinstated to former positions; No discrimination; Recognition of your union; Closed shop; Fifty per cent retroactive pay for time on strike—something without precedent in the American labor movement; Increase in wages to make yours the highest salary scale in the cartoon industry; Two weeks' vacation with pay.

"I believe that you have been misled and misinformed about the real issue underlying the strike at the studio. I am positively convinced that Communistic agitation, leadership, and activities have brought about this strike, and have persuaded you to reject this fair and equitable settlement. I address you in this manner because I have no other means of reaching you."

MBS Strike Threatened

On Tuesday, in Chicago, directors of the Mutual Broadcasting System met to discuss the strike by the American Federation of Radio Artists against the Cincinnati outlet, station WKRC, and the threatened spread of the strike to the whole system. The union has set Sunday as a "deadline" by which the chain must cease "feeding" programs to the struck station, or face punitive action, which would at the outset bar performers from any such program.

Mutual has told the union its contract with the station forces it to supply programs.

In Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Hugh Willis handed down a decision meaning, observers said, hat an employer has the legal right to discharge employees who are members of one union, when he signs a closed shop pact with another union.

In the action, Leo Stockwell and Earl W. Keeler, projectionists and members of the United Electrical and Radio and Machine Workers Union were denied an injunction to restrain the Vinstrand Theatres, Inc., from discharging them following the signing of a closed shop agreement with the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, affiliated with the A. F. of L. The U. E. R. M. W. U. is connected with the C. I. O.

Modification of a preliminary injunction restraining picketing of the Bulls Head Theatre in Scranton, Pa., by AFL projectionists has been refused in an opinion handed down by President Judge Will Leach of the Lackawanna County Court.

The house, operated by R. A. Lesaius, was the scene of a controversy between the CIO operators union and Local 329, IATSE and MPO Both unions alternately picketed the theatre and eventually a contract was negotiated by Mr. Lesaius with the CIO Group. However, the AFL union continued picketing and Mr. Lesaius sought an anti-picketing injunction.

Theatre Building War in Camden

A theatre building war between two important independent circuits, and one that threatens to have serious repercussions to the entire territory, is being watched with interest by the Philadelphia film industry. The war started last month when the Sam Varbalow interests announced the erection of a new house at Broadway and Walnut Street in Camden, N. J. It was then announced that the A. M. Ellis interests were also building a new theatre at 2601 Federal Street, also in Camden.

Then, earlier this month, it was announced that the Varbalow interests were invading Camden's Parkside area, where the Ellis circuit operates a theatre. Although the Varbalow holdings are the bigger of the two, both circuits are important in the local and surrounding area.

The Varbalow circuit, operating entirely in southern New Jersey, includes the Rio, Savar, Victoria and Walt Whitman in Camden; Highland and New Century in Audubon; Glassboro in Glassboro; Little in Haddonfield; Ritz in Oaklyn; Broadway in Palmyra; King in Gloucester; and the Broadway theatre in Pitman. The Ellis circuit, apart from Mr. Ellis' personal interests in other Philadelphia houses, includes four theatres in Camden, the Broadway, Towers, Liberty and Parkside; and the Broad and Dante in Philadelphia.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

ADAM HAD FOUR SONS: Ingrid Bergman, Warner Baxter, Susan Hayward—One of the finest Columbia pictures I have ever run. While the title hurt a little, people who saw it the first night raved about it so much that we have an excellent second night on the show. A sleeper if there ever was one.—M. Zimmerman, Jr., McHenry Theatre, McHenry, N. D. General patronage.

ARIZONA: Jean Arthur, William Holden—Fair business. Not up to expectations.—Reek A. Felziani, Midtown Theatre, San Francisco, Calif. Neighborhood patronage.

I MARRIED ADVENTURE: Osa Johnson—I enjoyed this, but comments were divided.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

LONE WOLF TAKES A CHANCE, THE: Warren William—Columbia is smart to take a star like Warren William and put him in this series, but the best thing about it is that it falls in the program class so that a town like this can make a few dollars and have some reserve. Other companies should follow suit and take some of their better stars, star them alone in one program picture a year and drop it in the program class and we can do good and make a little dough.—M. Zimmerman, Jr., McHenry Theatre, McHenry, N. D. General patronage.

Film Row to Move

Philadelphia's film row on Vine Street will soon pass out of existence. The Pennsylvania State Legislature has approved a $50,000,000 project providing for the widening of Vine Street as an approach to the Delaware River bridge. As a result, all the buildings on the south side of the street will be torn down to make way for the approach. Such splitting of the film row will necessitate a search for new quarters on the part of Columbia Pictures, Paramount, United Artists, Republic, The Hollywood and Capitol independent exchanges, Horlacher's film delivery service, and a number of theatre equipment, premium and printing concerns. Most of the properties are rented. However, Columbia erected a new exchange building two years ago.

Lewis Named Sales Head

Myke Lewis has been appointed general sales manager of Football Newsreels, which is producing and distributing "Football Is News," a short subject, starring Norman Sper, gridiron expert, who will predict the outcome of the important college games of the coming season. Mr. Lewis plans to start on a country-wide tour on June 20th.

RKO Books Stage Show

Following a successful appearance in one RKO theatre, the circuit has booked Zeke Manners and His Gang into 12 additional houses. At each of the stage shows the audience will be asked to participate.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Aviation

Already, before actual work has been launched on their initial subject, "The First of the Few" in which the life and works of Spitfire designer R. J. Mitchell will be dramatized, British Aviation Pictures announce two more for production.

These will include "Eagles Up," a dramatic and factual treatment of the American Eagle Squadron, its formation and achievements. The other will be a screen saga of the Anzacs, and the part they have played in the present war. Probably "Eagles Up" will be set for production concurrently with "The First of the Few." George King and John Stafford are the moving spirits of British Aviation Pictures.

British National, one of the most active and prolific production organizations in the country, not content with having maintained an unbroken consistency of film-making during the Blitz, and with "The Common Touch" in full swing at Elstree, now announce the impending production of two more new subjects, an "Old Mother Riley" comedy, and a Leslie Hiscott production, "Seventh Survivor," which will be made at Teddington.

Meanwhile John Baxter, whose "Love on the Dole" is one of the prestige successes of the year, is at work on "The Common Touch" at the Rock Studios, Elstree. For lack of a more suitable term the Baxter film might be called "a dosshouse drama." Most of its action is set in a lowlife dosshouse, and its characters are drawn from the less fortunate grades of modern society, all material at which Baxter is known to excel. Geoffrey Hibbert and Joyce Howard, who played with notable effect in "Love on the Dole," are starred, whilst the other roles include characters cast for such plebeian exponents as Edward Rigby and Wally Patch. Baxter produces as well as directs.

"Hatters Castle," with Lance Comfort directing his second film, is under way at Denham, where producer I. A. Goldsmith is making the pictures for Paramount release. Robert Newton, the now famous "Bill Walker" of "Major Barbara," is in the cast, as are also Emlyn Williams and Deborah Kerr. The film is adapted from A. J. Cronin's novel and treats of family problems in a Scots household ruled by stubborn and retrogressive father.

The work of the pilots who ferry American bombers to the battle front of Britain, is to be dramatized by Max Milder's Warner Brothers organization at Teddington, in a film already titled "Flying Fortress." It is the next film to go on the floor and will follow the current production which was launched as "You Can't Escape for Ever" and is now retitled "So This Was Paris." Likewise retitled is the subject to follow the U. S. bomber story, and which, conceived as "Death Over Portugal" will be launched eventually as "The Road to Lisbon."

Buchanan Active

Producing not only government sponsored documentaries, but entertainment comedies is Andrew Buchanan, moving spirit of Films of Great Britain, Ltd., and Andrew Buchanan Productions. Buchanan, who this month attained his majority in the motion picture industry, and who has five books to his credit, has just completed his latest comedy, "Surprise Broadcast," in which Jean Colin and A. E. Matthews appear and for which music and lyrics were written by George Posford and Harold Purcell.

One of his more recent documentaries, "Religion and the People," a survey of the social work of all denominations and creeds in Britain. The Films of Great Britain unit will concentrate on serious stuff documentaries, etc., and Andrew Buchanan Productions will devote itself to lighter fare.

20th Century's film on Pitt the Younger to be titled "The Young Mr. Pitt."

As a result of her work in "Jeannie," Barbara Mullen has been placed under contract to producer Marcel Hellman.

"Nation in Exile"

Derrick De Marney, Concanen Films, producer, and Eugene Cekalski, Polish director, have just completed "A Nation in Exile," which has been made with the full co-operation of the Polish Government. It has been photographed by Ernest Palmer and Cecil Cooney. The music was composed by Boleslaw Leitgeber, First Secretary to the Polish Embassy.

Concanen have two other films in active preparation—one dealing with the Polish Merchant Service, and the other, a day in the life of the now famous "303 Squadron."

The company has also just completed Documentary Polish Magazine No. 3 showing the Polish activities during the period of January to May (1941) in this country. As usual, both Polish and English versions have been made.

"Tower of Terror," the Argyle melodrama about a lighthouse—and other things—is in full swing at Welwyn, where Laurie Huntington is directing Wilfred Lawson, Michael Rennie and Movita (Mrs. Jack Doyle). Lawson is a mad lighthousekeeper who is contact between the German Secret Service and its British counterpart.

Anatol de Grunwald and Terrance Rattigan, one of the most successful writing teams in the country, who worked together on "Quiet Wedding," have been signed again by Paul Soskin to work on his Fleet Street opus. "Quiet Wedding," incidentally, is currently enjoying a second West-end premiere.

Final touches are now being applied to script of his Fleet Street film by Paul Soskin. He has recently explored Wales for Norwegian exteriors and was accompanied by writer Terence Rattigan and director Anthony Asquith.

Leslie Howard has been selected by George King for the role of Reginald J. Mitchell, English engineering and aviation genius who created Britain's Spitfire, around whose life "The First of the Few" (British Aviation Pictures) is devised. He will also direct the film.

Production is scheduled to be launched sometime this month at the Denham studios. General Films will distribute.

Dr. Ralph Vaughan Williams, one of Britain's most distinguished composers, is writing an orchestral score for Ortus Films' "49th Parallel." Dr. Vaughan Williams, who is Keeper of the King's Music, has already started recording at Pinewood, the recording studio at Denham having been damaged recently by enemy action.

BRITISH EXHIBITORS HARRIED BY GOVERNMENT CONFUSION ON DRAFT

Promise of Exemption for Staffs Pending Study of Personnel Ignored by Labour Ministry; Morale Importance Stressed

by AUBREY FLANAGAN

Whilst one section of the Government is promising that the industry's personnel shall not, for the time being, be called into the Forces, and another is ignoring the guarantees made by the Minister of Labour and registering employees in the ordinary way, yet a third section has this week given unequivocal indication that they believe the picture house has a vital role to play in the social structure. Both producers and exhibitors have thus begun to wonder even more where exactly they stand.

Despite the undertaking of the Ministry of Labour that until the whole position regarding studio and picture theatre personnel was cleared up no further men would be called to the Forces, the fact is that at Labour Exchanges throughout the country, operators and others are being called to register for other work. Employment in picture houses is virtually being treated by some officials as luxury work.

On the other hand a Committee representing Government departments has issued a circular to regional commissioners suggesting a furtherance of the Holidays at Home movement. In the course of this it is suggested that cinemas may assist by organizing special matinees for the three holiday months of July, August and September.

Special Matinees Suggested

Already the matter has been raised at one CEA Branch, that in Leeds, Yorkshire, where a letter from the Chief Constable voiced the desire that special matinee, morning and afternoon performances should be introduced for the benefit of war workers.

It is reported that the idea originated with the Ministry of Information, in conjunction with the Ministries of Labour and Health.

CEA Headquarters have likewise been approached by the Ministry of Information, who ask for support for the idea from exhibitors throughout the country.

Some resentment has thus increased in the exhibitor mind at the dilatory and contradictory way in which the manpower problem is being handled with, as already recorded, one section of the Administration acting against the expressed policy of the other section. The pedestrian slowness with which the Ministry of Labour Manpower Panel, which is considering the question from the viewpoint of production, is operating has further provoked discontent throughout the industry. Last week it adjourned for another three weeks, with little likelihood of a report of recommendation being ready for many weeks to come.

The positive policy advocated by the Government Committee is naturally regarded in trade circles as an argument in favour of reservation of projectionists and essential theatre employees. It will be used as a point of persuasion in deliberations with the Ministry. It is thought as definitely establishing the importance of the cinemas' role and enhancing claims for preferential treatment or grading as essential.

So far as Leeds is concerned a sympathetic reception was afforded the idea, but that sympathy will probably only be maintained if reciprocal treatment is offered in return.

It is the Government's object to discourage travelling as far as possible, but to provide compensatory amenities in the areas where the workers live. Exhibitors have already pointed out that it is not necessarily in synchrony with the Government's noncommital attitude to Sunday cinemas.

Although some collaboration can be expected from the CEA if reciprocity is offered by the Government, a national policy would not seem to be easy. Conditions vary locally. The matter is more likely to be considered by branches and districts before any national pronouncement is made by the parent Association.

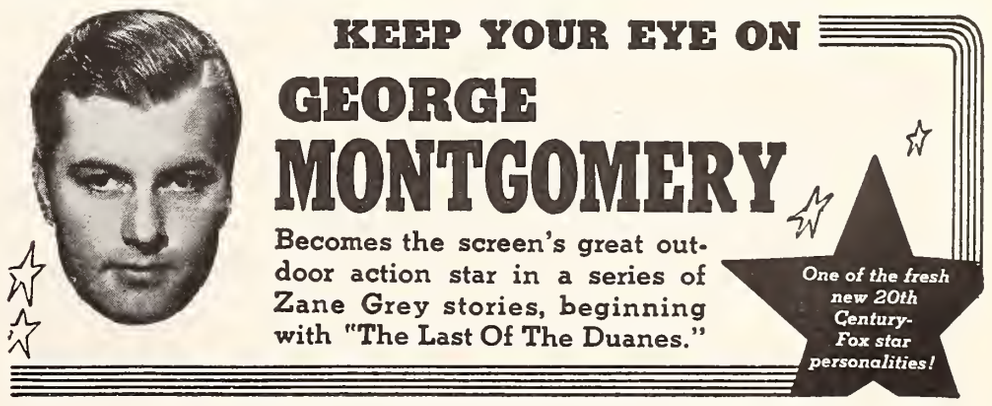
Openings for matinees and afternoon shows obviously call upon already depleted personnel to work longer hours. Many theatres are already working with no margin of staff and where they are to recruit further labour from it is not easy to see.

BRITISH TO PRESS EXEMPTION FIGHT

British exhibitors are expected to make further efforts to have the Government grant exemptions from military service to film technical employees. On the suggestion of the London Branch of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, the exhibitor group is expected to join with the National Association of Theatrical and Kine Employees in a plea to the Ministry of Labour. They also are expected to ask Ernest Bevin, Minister of Labour, to instruct local labour exchanges to follow his recent promise that projectionists would not be called for service pending a final decision on the industry plea for exemptions.

Meanwhile throughout the country, at almost every exhibitor group, complaints are being voiced, and, in spite of Ernest Bevin's promise that no further men would be called up pending the decision on picture house manpower, more and more employees are being called upon to register and are being treated by Labour Exchange officials as though no guarantee had been given by the Ministry.

Into the bargain, staffs, having failed to get a guarantee from their employers that they would be reserved, are taking time by the forelock and in many places enrolling in other industries. The fact is that exhibitors have nothing to show that their staffs might be free of apprehension that they might be called up for national service.



Lower Age Suggested

A suggestion has been put forward in one exhibitor group that projectionists should be reserved at the lower age limit, between 18 to 20, so that their knowledge, acquired as trainees, might be used by the industry for a year or two.

An increasing suspicion is noticed in enlightened circles within the industry that not too much should be expected from the Manpower Panel, which is sitting to make recommendations on studio labour. Weeks have gone by and little concrete has been achieved. It is now felt that any report of recommendations which is made to the Ministry may prove nebulous in content, is less likely to be a direct suggestion to the Ministry than a factual record of needs in films and manpower as evinced by the industry, the Government departments and the Services. It will probably avoid judicial recommendation, preferring to pass the buck to the Ministry of Labour itself.

The Board of Trade's contribution to the situation recently was a statement in which it was pointed out that statutory obligations were still imposed upon exhibitors and renters and it was hoped that any decision to be taken ultimately would bear that fact in mind.

Meanwhile a questionnaire is being sent out to exhibitors, not by the Ministry af Labour, as originally believed, but by the Board of Trade. In this exhibitors are to be called upon to give details of their staffs, trade, and other material which it is believed will assist the Government department to a suitable decision.

BMI A THREAT TO ROB COMPOSERS, SAYS ASCAP

Demands Radio - Music Unit Answer Questions on Policy Toward Composers, Families

Charging that "the very existence of Broadcast Music, Inc., under radio domination is a threat to rob composers of the rights granted them by the copyright laws of the United States," the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers in a statement released to the press last week posed six questions which they "demanded" BMI answer to clarify its relations with composers. Arguing that ASCAP is dedicated to the principle that 'no man or woman in the United States who writes successful music, or anyone dependent upon him, shall ever want,'" ASCAP further charged that "BMI is attempting to destroy all this, in the words of one of its recent song titles, 'With a Twist of the Wrist.'"

Policies Questioned

The ASCAP quiz centered on the following six points: 1. How much money has BMI received for performing rights during the past year? 2. How much money has BMI paid composers during the past year for performing rights of their music? 3. What provision has BMI made for the relief of composers during sickness and distress? 4. What provision has BMI made for the widows and orphans of composers who die but whose works live? 5. What provision has BMI made to make payments to composers of standard music whose compositions are rarely, if ever, played on the air but whose work is essential to the development of American musical culture? 6. What provision has BMI made to insure continued payments through years to come to composers who write hit songs now but whose output may dwindle or cease in a few years?

BMI proposes to ignore ASCAP's demands for replies to their quiz and has refused to answer the questions. One official of the network music firm termed the ASCAP query "patently, definitely an effort on their part to put us on the defensive. Our answer," he said, "won't serve to clarify the situation because we do not regard them as honest questions. We aren't going to be 'fall guys' for ASCAP."

The ASCAP quiz came about following announcement of BMI's suit against the Society over performing rights of songs in the E. B. Marks catalog which were written by ASCAP's composers and which BMI claimed was by no means "a suit against the songwriters." Refuting that contention, John G. Paine, the Society's general manager said, "How can BMI make any such contention when ASCAP does not exist apart from its membership? The suit plainly seeks to take away the writers' rights from their own Society and to vest these rights solely in BMI which is owned by the radio broadcasters. It is simply one more attempt," he declared, "to destroy the value of rights now vested in the creators of American music."

Mr. Paine contends that ASCAP is a "voluntary association of composers, authors and their publishers maintained by its members for their collective security and to guard against piracy of their works."

No mention was made in the press release of the Society's announced anti-trust suit against BMI, CBS, NBC, RCA and NAB.

Meanwhile, following disclosure that "errors of bookkeeping" had been made by BMI in allocating royalty payments for the first quarter of 1941, a group of affiliated publishers last week organized the Independent Music Publishers Association, to handle complaints to determine policies, operating as a trade group similar to the Music Publishers Protective Association, which is composed of ASCAP members. The new group appointed Peter Doraine to be the chairman and to "cooperate with BMI in obtaining the highest degree of accuracy possible in its system of performance payments." Approximately 50 publishers met to organize the association.

Consider Networks Proposals

Negotiations between the Society and the networks, meanwhile, for the return of ASCAP music to NBC and CBS airlanes, are still at the impasse stage. The Society's board of directors held another meeting on Thursday for further consideration of the networks' proposals. No change in the status of those proposals, however, has been indicated.

It was reported that David Podell, who has been retained by ASCAP as trial lawyer for the anti-trust conspiracy-restraint of trade suit against the networks, appeared at this meeting to discuss various legal phases of the suit which the Society has not yet filed in Federal courts.

Broadcasting and television rights in the music of twelve new publishing companies are now available to all Broadcast Music, Inc., subscribers, BMI announced this week. The new publishers are: American Melodies; Block Publishing Company; Eugene Casivant; Fine Songs; Freeman Music Company; Graham Music Company; Greater New York Music Corporation; Reid and Singer Music Publishing Company; Sheppard Music Corporation; Stark Music Printing Company; Urban Publications and Worldwide Music Publishers. This increases the number of music publishing firms affiliated with BMI to 194.

'Bomb' Bill Is Passed; Billboard Tax Cut Dies

A bill making it a felony to toss a stench bomb into homes or business houses has been passed by the Missouri House of Representatives and is now in the Senate. The measure was sponsored by St. Louis independent theatre exhibitors.

New Jersey State legislature on Tuesday, July 1st, defeated a bill to reduce license fees of billboards along New Jersey highways. The bill would cut the fees for billboards one-third, providing for a scale of one cent, instead of three cents, a square foot up to the maximum charge of $25 for all boards over 800 square feet. Legislators attacked the bill, saying that it would result in more billboards, and urged instead that the license fees be increased.

Associated Theatres of New Jersey Reelect

Irving Dollinger, president, and all other officers were reelected at the annual meeting of Associated Theatres of New Jersey, film buying and booking organization.

Other officers are: Jack Unger, vice-president; David Mate, secretary; Sidney Seligman, treasurer, and Harry H. Lowenstein, chairman of the board.

Polish Film Acquired

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

AT LONG LAST

Now it appears that exhibitors are becoming more concerned with selling the motion picture rather than a motion picture.

As related conspicuously in last week's issue, wide attention is turning to the institutional advertising campaigns offered by Philadelphia newspapers. The plan is under consideration in other sectors and the success of it will have much to do with convincing exhibition, at long last, that the institution of theatre entertainment rates as much importance as the individual attraction.

For years, this department has been pounding in favor of institutional advertising, if only from this stand:

That this industry, so vital in producing continuous entertainment within reach of millions, cannot afford to rest its foundations only upon the ephemeral values of picture "names" and rapidly changing story trends.

That this industry, maintaining these entertainments at consistently high standards, can do no less than sell it as such to a waiting public that by all means can be sold.

ON THIS; ON THAT

Reported here by Don Chambers as the first of its kind to be held in this country, the children's "aluminum matinee", put on at the Paramount, in Springfield, promises to be taken up widely by other exhibitors concerned with their part in the national defense. Directed by Nathan E. Goldstein, Western Massachusetts Theatres head, the Springfield project brought enough of old aluminum articles to fill two one-ton trucks, each piece serving as admission for the child bringing it.

Enthusiastic community and newspaper endorsement has encouraged Mr. Goldstein to schedule this potent goodwill builder in other circuit situations.

To the growing list of circuit publications received at this desk we add—and with pleasure—the meaty Stanley-Warner Philadelphia Circuit Advertising Bulletin. Sponsored by Ted Schlanger, division head, and ably edited by Ev Callow, the new weekly does an excellent job of keeping the Warnermen informed of the selling possibilities of coming dates.

An endeavor to give added exhibitor service is indicated—and applauded—in Warners' pressbook for "Underground". A streamlining of format gets away from unwieldy bulk and makes for easier handling. More ad layouts and publicity stories also serve to give the questing theatreman a wider choice in determining his point of box-office attack.

The national co-op campaign, not always realized, leaps into the spotlight with the gratifying results attained by Paramount's merchandising tiein of the Benchley short, "The Forgotten Man", sponsored by the Saturday Evening Post as a feature of Father's Day promotion. According to Paramount, more than $370,000 was the total of newspaper advertising taken by participating retailers in 530 cities, some 1,500 separate ads plugging the hookup.

Arrestingly titled "Hash—From Hollywood to Holyoke", and pointed up by a cut of the author, is the new Hollywood gossip column now running in a widely read local weekly and by-lined by Round Tabler George Laby of the Victory in that Massachusetts metropolis. Laby's stuff is punchy and timely, carries easily digested credits for all the circuit's Holyoke houses.

This department is entirely willing to add a few nip-ups of our own to the many thrown in all quarters on behalf of "Sergeant York", and especially as concerns us here, for the picture's tremendous exploitation values. It should set a-tingle with anticipation every showman who looks forward to playing this grand entertainment.

There is much more to radio promotion than meets the eye, according to the findings of Bill Morton who explores the subject at length further along in these pages. The ever-ready willingness of radio to cooperate with the theatreman, as Morton points out, is certainly something to study.

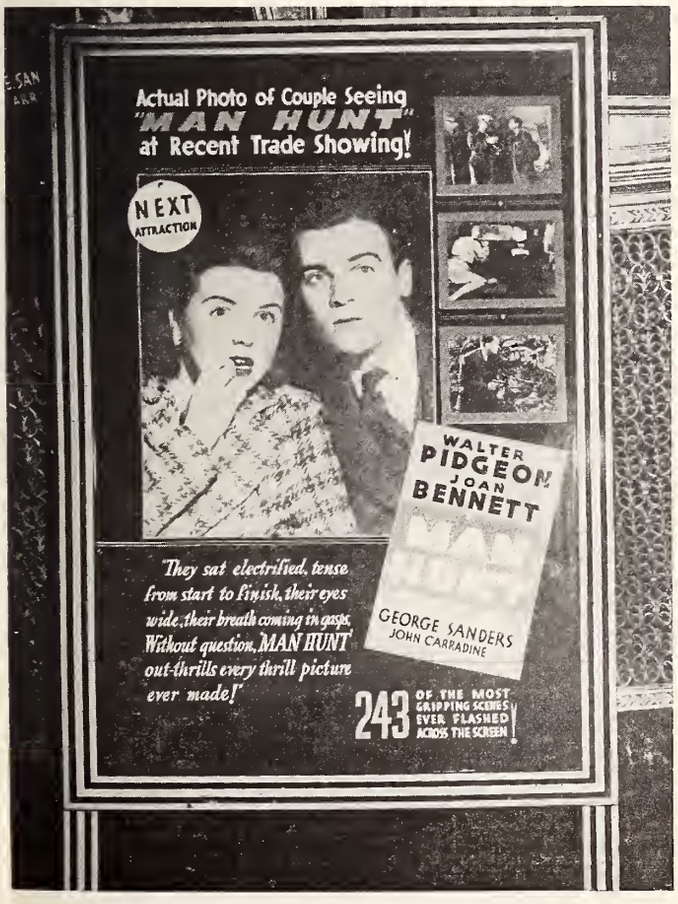
Round Table In Pictures

Lobby stunt used by Elihu Glass at Fabian's Paramount, Staten Island, to exploit "Woman's Face" consisted of large cutout figure with opening where head should be. Tieup was made with local photographer to set up his equipment and take pictures of patrons who stepped up to pose with the figure. Easel alongside carried appropriate tiein copy.

To sell his double horror show of "The Black Cat" and "Invisible Ghost" at the Chakeres Majestic Theatre, in Springfield, Ohio, Gene Scott featured an eerie foyer display to plug the dual bill. For further effect, Gene turned down his house lights and ran a white sheet down the screen before trailer.

Planted in one of the finer stores located in Buenos Aires was effective window display arranged by Guillermo Fox, Paramount publicity director in Argentina, for advance on "Lady Eve" at the Ideal. Cutout figures of Stanwyck and Fonda were planted atop compo apple which also carried title.

To attract youngsters in the vicinity of Loew's Melba Theatre, in Brooklyn, Manager Ed Burke constructed out-front display to sell Republic's serial, "Captain Marvel". In addition to scene stills, Burke plugged distribution of the Whiz comic books.

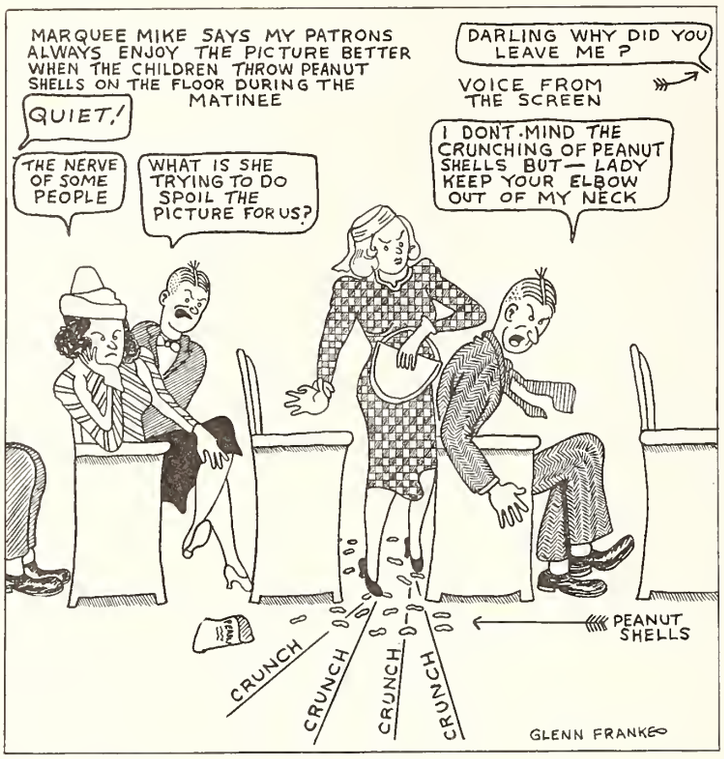


Giant cutout head caricature of George Bernard Shaw was constructed by Bob Berezin ahead of "Major Barbara" opening at the Elgin, in Ottawa, Ontario. Picture copy was imprinted on the forehead of the Irish dramatist. That's Bob admiring his setpiece below.

Six-foot animated display of Goofy riding a trick horse was planted in lobby of the Palace, in Canton, Ohio, by R. E. Russell for his opening of "The Reluctant Dragon". Gag copy alongside read: "You don't have to be Goofy, but it helps. See Goofy in 'How Not to Ride a Horse'."

Blowup of couple supposedly "electrified, wide-eyed and tense" from having just seen "Man Hunt" at a recent trade showing was used for eye-arresting lobby display by Bill Israel ahead and during run of that picture's opening at Warners' Fox Theatre, in Philadelphia. Spotted at side were suspense-sequence stills, together with cast and playdates.

On behalf of recent "Hartford Week", Fred Greenway, pinch-hitting for vacationing Lou Cohen at Loew's Poli, created an effective lobby display featuring summer hits and plugging the week. Through cooperation of Chamber of Commerce, photo of lobby was planted in local papers, in all of which theatre and show were prominently mentioned.



Street stunts are the order of the day in Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, too, as witness bally used by James J. Bulnes at the Globe Theatre for advance on Republic's "Drums of Fu Manchu" serial. Native boys, dressed in yellow satin Chinese costumes, distributed heralds.

In conjunction with his regular Saturday morning kid matinee and the opening of "Billy the Kid", Round Tabler Les Pollock at Loew's Theatre, in Rochester, featured a grab-bag giveaway. Above is reproduced part of the giveaways, contents of which were promoted.

Burke Ties "Power Dive" To Local Aero Club

Contacting local Aero Club, Bill Burke for "Power Dive" at the Brant Theatre, in Brantford, Ontario, had 30,000 heralds imprinted with club plug, in exchange for which plane from airport flew over city three days in succession ahead of opening dropping the heralds announcing picture's opening. As previously announced in local dailies, a number of these heralds were lucky numbered and good for free admissions opening night. During run, airport gave free rides to customers picked at random from audience, pilots present at each performance to make presentation from stage.

Model aircraft company local dealers were contacted and arrangements made for a model plane building contest for the children to be held on stage Saturday afternoon. Merchants made up and distributed heralds in this connection, five and dime stores coming through with window and store displays on material required for the contests. Stores also donated plane kits as prizes, while aviator from flying club did the judging.

Fight Pictures Get Quick Coverage by Egan

With no paper or stills or other material available on the short notice of Pete Egan's booking of the Louis-Conn fight pictures at the Palace, in Calgary, Alberta, Canada, the theatreman went to work by contacting local radio announcers and within three hours the folks were aware of the fact that the pictures would be shown at his theatre. Window cards were made up locally. Through tieup with telephone company, on all calls of inquiry coming through for the correct time, operator also proffered the information that the Louis-Conn pictures could be seen at the Palace.

Heflinger "Golf Revue" Attracts Sportsmen

Golfers throughout the area were catered to recently at the Lafayette, in St. Louis, Mo., with a "Golf Revue" composed of sports shorts put together in a 40 minute unit by Manager John Heflinger, which according to the Round Tabler, went over quite successfully. The shorts were: "Saving Strokes with Sammy Snead"; "The Trouble Shooter" with Horton Smith and "Swing With Bing" with Bing Crosby and Andy Devine.

Heflinger rounded out his campaign with newspaper publicity, a thousand postcards to golfers and three-day announcements on Station WEW sports program.

Contest closes on September 15 and entries may include one 8 mm. or one 16 mm. film in color or black and white not to exceed 400 feet.

Sport Style Show Increases Grosses

Something much more than a fashion show, is how Jimmie Redmond described the recent "Summer Sport Debut" put on at the Bonham, Fairbury, Nebr., as a stage presentation for two days with the cooperation of leading women's store. Some 25 local girls participated as models, the "debut" running for 90 minutes.

The presentation was restricted to what the young girl will go for this summer in sports wear. Instead of having the models come on stage to pose and then off, in the usual manner, Redmond had the styles shown against appropriate backgrounds and action. Scene one, for instance, was a woods setting with camp fire, coffee brewing, models eating lunch around the fire, each of the girls in a different sports apparel. Each model had some action to go through, coming down stage to display the garment worn so that the audience could get a close-up.

Other scenes enacted, with the models apparelled in keeping, were swimming, tennis, golf, office, street wear and fishing. The cost to the theatre, according to Redmond, was eight dollars and forty cents.

This was accomplished by promoting the leading women's store for all the styles worn, including shoes and hats, store also paying for the model hire. All stage settings were borrowed from merchants in exchange for short plugs. Background settings were constructed at the theatre of stage scraps plus a lot of hard work. For an unusual opening, as the curtain was lifted, the theatre was scented with gardenia perfume, furnished by a local pharmacy.

The success of the presentation is to be noted in the increased grosses of the two-day showing, more than doubling the average "take" of the same period in the last eight weeks. Despite heavy rains for the date, the Round Tabler reports that the second day topped the first, with many requests to hold the show over.

Theatremen Report on "Captain Marvel" Serial

Exhibitor-newsdealer cooperation continues in connection with promotional tieup arranged between Republic and Fawcett on the serial, "Captain Marvel," with William M. Weiss manager of the Capitol, in Passaic, N. H., promoting distributor for bulletins to all their dealers in the territory together with full-color displays tying in the opening with their Whiz Comic magazines. Week ahead poster boards were covered with picture copy, trucks bannered and comic books distributed to all kids attending opening chapter.

Highlight of the campaign put on at the Crown, in New London, Conn., by Barney Dobrans was crashing of local Memorial Day parade with appropriately bannered trucks calling attention to the serial's opening. Full week ahead special trailers were run, flash heralds distributed, theatre carried a box in their regular ads stressing opening and giveaways and lobby featured attractive blowup of Captain Marvel.

The Boxoffice Value of Radio From Both Sides of the Fence

Theatre-Radio Publicity Head Calls Broadcasting a "Boon That Can Make a Boom"

by BILL MORTON
Publicity Director, RKO Albee, Providence, R. I.

One of the most active Round Tablers, the author, publicity director of the RKO Albee, in Providence, R. I., is now filling a summer engagement in the same capacity for radio station WFCI, in nearby Pawtucket. Morton has had much experience in theatre and radio publicity, which led us to ask him to tell the members something about radio exploitation from the viewpoint of the theatreman.—MIKE.

Radio certainly is a hidden gold mine for the theater manager who is willing to get out of his office chair, travel around to the radio stations and make himself known. He has no right to continually make assertions that the radio is keeping people away from his theater. Radio can be, and is, the greatest selling entree for the theater into any home, at a cost which, depending upon the theaterman's aggressiveness, can be small or non-existent.

Radio has been a boon to many showmen in situations where the newspaper has a tendency to be independent and habitually give nothing in the way of space. This is the time for the theater to pay a little attention to radio because it is a Boon that can make a Boom.

Favors Close Contacts

Logically, the most important thing any theater manager can do to facilitate getting a foothold on his local radio situation is to make himself known to the station manager. Simple, isn't it? Become his friend; don't bother with his commercial salesmen, and you will soon find yourself promoting radio programs, at no cost, provided you are exploitation-minded.

Here is an instance where just knowing the managers of three local radio stations proved a bonus to this Round Tabler. Upon being informed, at two o'clock one Saturday afternoon this past Spring, that RKO Radio Pictures had finally decided to release Orson Welles' picture, "Citizen Kane," I telephoned the managers of the three stations and advised them of the news-worthiness of this item, insofar as this was definitely of interest locally and otherwise. By 2:15 arrangements had been completed for all three stations to go on the air with a special news flash, "Radio Station Blank has been advised by a reliable news source that, regardless of its controversial nature, Orson Welles' picture, "Citizen Kane," will be released by RKO Radio Pictures and will be shown locally in the very near future." This time would have cost the theater $45; however, it was given gratis, and you can bet that the morning's mail carried a couple of pairs of passes for each station manager, and everyone was happy about the whole thing.

Recommends Pressbook Transcriptions

Quite often the press book informs the theater manager that a 15-minute transcription, telling the picture's highlights, is available. Most of the time, however, the manager doesn't bother to send for it, but this is what will happen if you have the contact —and the record! You can take the transcription to the station; they will play it over and arrange a spot for it and, as has happened here, the station has given the time and on both sides of the program used local tie-in copy . . . for "no."

Recently we played "Buck Privates" . . . a natural tie-in for this feature was a contact with the 6th Area Army Corps, stationed in Providence. A large number of men from the post came down to attend a screening of the picture; we arranged with the station to have a mike in the lobby, to interview the soldiers, the mother of a lad who had been drafted, a lad who was to be drafted, and so on; at the end of the show the announcer said, "And now everyone is being seated, the house is being darkened, and here is the preview of "Buck Privates." The radio column of the paper naturally gave us space on this broadcast. The 15-minute show cost us nothing but the $15 line charge . . . if we bought the time it would have run to $75.

Quotes Instances of Tieins

Another instance of free tie-in time was on the "Information Please" program. The station had sold all its commercial time on both sides of the program; consequently we couldn't buy a spot. However, we were playing the picture, and it was to our advantage to have an announcement tieing the picture, program, and theater together. The deal when consummated had the radio station giving the theater a plug on both sides of the program for "no," and the theater using a two-frame trailer advising the audience to listen to Information Please on Station Blank after seeing the picture.

"Man On Street" Program

On a Bing Crosby picture which played this house, the station gave plugs on both sides of the program for a two-frame trailer. A follow-through on this had the Kraft Company, who sponsor the program, distribute, through their local office, fliers plugging the picture.

The most common tie-up between theater and radio to date, however, is the street broadcast. The radio station does a daily 15-minute broadcast from in front of the theater, doing sidewalk interviews. This usually runs six days a week, and all the theater manager has to do is supply the radio station with six to eight pairs of passes to be given to the participants in the program. During the show the theater's feature is mentioned no less than four times; his theater is also mentioned every time passes are awarded. Should the theatre try to buy this time, the commercial rates would cost him approximately $100.

Quiz Show Brings Returns

Another type of show which has become popular, and has also proven an entree for theater men who are interested in promotion, is the currently-popular Quiz Show. This type of program takes place from the stage, and has the audience participating in it. The theater manager might run a trailer a week in advance of the radio program. The radio station usually, in the course of the week previous to the program, will advise listeners every day that the program is going to take place; it is reasonable to think that the name of the theater is mentioned about 35 times in an average 30-word plug over the period of a week. Buying this time would cost the theatre approximately $105. Yet the theater manager is the first one to yell, and loudly, when he's asked to stop his feature two minutes before eight and not start it again until 8:30, even though it does bring b.o. gains.

Suggests Gossip Show Idea

I'm currently doing a quiz program from the stage of a Pawtucket theater. The management announces the program via trailer on the screen every day, seven days. He awards passes to all contestants on the program; he also awards passes to persons who mail in questions that are used on the air. The station has plugged this program, naming the theater, every day.

Another type of show that might be used to advantage with a local radio station is a fifteen-minute Hollywood gossip column. The time could undoubtedly be promoted for "no"; it has been in several cases. Of course you face the possibility of the station manager's telling you that there is nothing new about that type of program and that he can get much better service on a Hollywood show direct from the Coast. So, right then and there, you present him with a little different twist to make your chatter show just a little bit unusual. You tell him that you will do Hollywood gossip, as expected; if there is a celebrity in town you will arrange to have a ninterview on the program, and in the last couple of minutes of the show you will give a short biography of some well-known movie star, and preface it with five names of prominent screen stars, one of whom is described in the biography. If the listener sends a card to the station correctly identifying the star described, you will send him a pair of passes. Of course the prizes are being awarded by your theater; the program opens and closes with an announce-

Managers Sponsor "Beauty" Contests

In the center of a widely-famed peach-raising territory, Manager Jack Thomas of the Strand, in Clarksville, Ark., recently tied in with the annual county each Festival to have the Queen of the Festival crowned upon the stage of the theatre. This was accomplished by the Round Tabler in agreeing to an equal split on grosses above average business and figured by him as an excellent arrangement since the ceremonies had always attracted capacity crowds.

The outstanding event, the contest to select the "Queen," was handled on the basis of votes, 100 for a dollar, the returns depended upon to finance the entire festival. Thomas aided the cause by extensive advertising of the crowning with both newspapers carrying front page stories and also pictures of the ceremonies.

Another similar annual event rated highly by public and participating merchants is the Beauty Pageant put on by Carmon Phillips at the Onate Theatre, in Belen, New Mexico, in which local girls compete for the title of the year's "Miss Belen," appearing on the stage in bathing suits and evening gowns.

This year the event ran three nights, the first two for the preliminaries and the finals decided on the last night of the program, the winners selected according to poise, personality and figure. Phillips underwrote the entire cost with the cooperation of various merchants, each of whom paid an entrance fee to take care of cups to winners, outside advertising, special swimming parties and other festivities. Newspaper support here also was extensive and Carmon reports much local enthusiasm for the dignified handling of the event and quality of contestants.

Ackery Ties "Wolf" Premiere To Knox "Local Boy" Angle

For the Canadian premiere of "The Sea Wolf" at the Capitol, in London, Ontario, Manager William K. Trudell built his opening around the "local boy" angle, since Alexander Knox, author, playwright and actor appearing in the picture was a former resident of London. Designated as a "Homecoming Week," local merchants got behind a movement, which was officially and enthusiastically approved by Mayor Heaman in a letter addressed to the citizenry. Papers came through with stories and art, special letters over Trudell's signature were addressed to friends of the star, still residing in London. Also honored in the celebration were Jack Warner and Gene Lockhart, another featured actor in the film, both of whom claim London as their birthplace.

Photos of Postmaster May receiving from Mayor Heaman package containing keys to the city to be sent to Knox were planted in dailies, as were pictures of Mrs. Knox being greeted by Mayor on stage opening night. Promoted gifts of flowers and radio were given to the star's mother in addition. Special parade to theatre opening night was headed by police escort and ad was run in personal column of paper requesting relatives of Knox and Lockhart to contact theatre management.

HOME-MADE RECORDS PLUG PRESTON SHOWS

Ingenious and costless tieup has been arranged by Les Preston at the Capitol, in St. Thomas, Ont., Canada, through cooperation of local music store. Dealer has installed loud speaker equipment in front of shop, over which is played recordings from current and coming attractions at the theatre. After each recording they play a small "home-made" 6-inch record carrying the message: "The music you have listened to is from the picture now playing [or coming] to the Capitol".

In addition, merchant supplies Preston with recordings for use in the theatre, along with discs carrying the words: "The music you have just listened to is from the picture [coming attraction] starring [stars] coming to this theatre [date]".

Stadler Sells "Virginia" With Effective Contests

Contests highlighted Art Stadler's "Virginia" campaign at Schine's Auburn, in Auburn, N. Y., first of which was planted with cooperating local furniture dealer. Guest tickets went to the first 10 listeners who were able to identify a series of "Virginia tunes" that were played on merchant's radio program. Second stunt consisted of large display board in the lobby of the theatre with about 25 red seals displayed. Under each seal there was a slip of paper bearing the name of a party whose first name was Virginia. Tickets went to anyone named Virginia who was fortunate enough to remove the seal covering her name. Word-of-mouth advertising brought many girls so named to the theatre to try their luck. Through cooperation of the State of Virginia Chamber of Commerce, Stadler received an elaborate display suitable for a window exhibit, consisting of large map of the state surrounded by panels. Chamber also supplied the theatreman with folders and travel literature which were distributed ahead of playdates.

Saxton Holds Search for Typical "Ziegfeld Girl"

For "Ziegfeld Girl" at Loew's Century, in Baltimore, Bill Saxton and George Avis tied up with the News Post to select the city's typical Ziegfeld Girl. As a result over 100 aspirants were booked with daily space run up to one-half page. Winner was given trip to New York with a week's stay and all expenses paid, in New York, the Journal American followed through with feature story and photo. The traveling Ziegfeld Girls and original costumes were utilized by the Loewman for a fashion show at one of the city's more exclusive shops. Store put on two shows, took large newspaper space to spotlight the event. Other fashion shops were tied in along the same lines, elaborate window displays obtained and a number of special features in rotogravure sections promoted.

More About Radio By Bill Morton

ment to this effect, and also that the passes are being given to see your current feature.

Then, too, the exploitation-minded theater man can arrange a theater clock with his radio station, whereby they tell the time the attractions go on at the theater, and the theater runs a trailer advising the public to tune to the station for sports programs, etc.

Incidentally, who ever heard of a newspaper giving a theater regular advertising space for "no," after appearing on the amusement page consistently for years? Radio, on the other hand, should you elect to buy commercial time, that is a 35 or 125-word plug on a weekly basis, will, at the end of a period of weeks, either give you a rebate on the full price of one of your plugs, or arrange to give you two for "no."

Here's still another type of program that I might suggest. Arrange with your leading restaurant or hotel for a "Dinner at the Waldorf" (or whatever the name may be) program. On this show you interview guests at dinner; if there's a well-known personage in town, try to interview him on the show. You might give passes to all the participants on the program if the picture is plugged accordingly. Since last October, until the theater closed for the summer, I conducted a series from a Providence nightclub; a half-hour dance program was interrupted at its mid-point while I interview well known stars of stage, screen and radio always trying to bring about mention of the feature our house is playing that week.

Merchants Contacted for Commercials

Another suggestion: find out from your radio station what local business firms are buying commercial time. Then try to sell one of them on the following plug: "We are located at 16 Blank Street, right across from (or right next to, or near) the Blank Theater. This brings out the point that the theater has been there for years, and fixes the firm's location (and the theater's) firmly in the minds of the general public.

So, Round Tablers, if you're tired of receiving the customary "No" from your newspaper on special stories, gags, contests, lay-outs, and so on, turn to Radio. Station managers are always on the alert for something new, something novel, something to tie-in with the lives of the people in the community . . . and they'll welcome new ideas with open arms.

Novelty Teaser Campaign Features "Girl Crazy"

A six-day novelty teaser contest was landed in dailies for "Love Crazy" by Joe Ruddick of the Gillioz, in Springfield, Mo., consisting of different shots of William Powell dressed in woman's attire. Below cut was a list of prominent women with the words "Guess who." No further cue as to the identity of Powell was given, guest tickets were awarded those correctly guessing star's name. Last day box was run with copy: "For further details and a definite answer to the picture puzzle, see William Powell and Myrna Loy in," etc., etc.

EXPLOITATION BRIEFS FROM A-FIELD

Made entirely by Joe H. Feulner, Des Plaines Theatre, Des Plaines, Ill., was the lobby display for "Back Street" made from beaver board and a three-sheet. Cutout circle with flashing lights inside was used with star heads, names and titles; the heads were recessed in a shadow box. Scene stills were planted alongside. "Flight Command" brought a tieup with local dealer on a model plane contest for promoted prizes. Three-week serialization was planted in paper with theatre name and playdates displayed.

Teaser lobby stunt was used for "Tall, Dark and Handsome" by Robert Busch at the Jeffery in Chicago consisting of rocker set in motion by a small motor under the platform. Card at side read: "I'm still rocking with laughter," etc.

For showing of "South of Suez" at the Royal, in Enid, Okla., Roy Shield, manager, and his assistant Russ Acker put up a special front with a glass faced box into which were placed four large rattlesnakes. These had been caught on the local annual rattlesnake drive and there had been plenty of previous publicity about them, hence they proved an attractor. On "Christmas in July," Shield decorated his lobby complete with giant tree Christmas decorations, etc., and copy "May we be the first to wish you a Merry Christmas, as you will get your first taste of Yuletide when you see."

As a goodwill gesture to graduates, J. H. Luter at the Grand, in Fitzgerald, Ga., mailed letter and invitation cards to attend show as his guest. Card carried small cut of students in cap and gown. For "Pot o' Gold," Luter planted an iron pot filled with gold discs on a tripod and stationed it in his lobby, offering guest tickets to those coming closest to guessing correct number contained.

Centering his campaign for "The Great Lie" around the "Great Lie Club" press-book stunt, Ken Prickett at the Long-Griffith El Rancho, in Victoria, Tex., had certificates of membership printed up and distributed to patrons at theatre. In addition staff carried these with them when off duty and passed them out to people in the business districts.

Plenty of publicity and free ads were garnered by Maurice Crew, Strand, Waterloo, Ia., when the "Ziegfeld Girl" exhibit appeared in his city. Merchant paid for three column full ad, additional publicity being garnered through the fact that Joe E. Brown, Jr., son of the comedian, is manager of the local ball team. Interview was also had over radio station with picture plugs.

Local boys became city officials, ran the stores and shops and walked beats with patrolmen as part of the Men of Boys' Town" campaign put over by A. R. Clausen, Adler, Waupaca, Wis. He had complete cooperation and derived plenty of excellent publicity and comment.

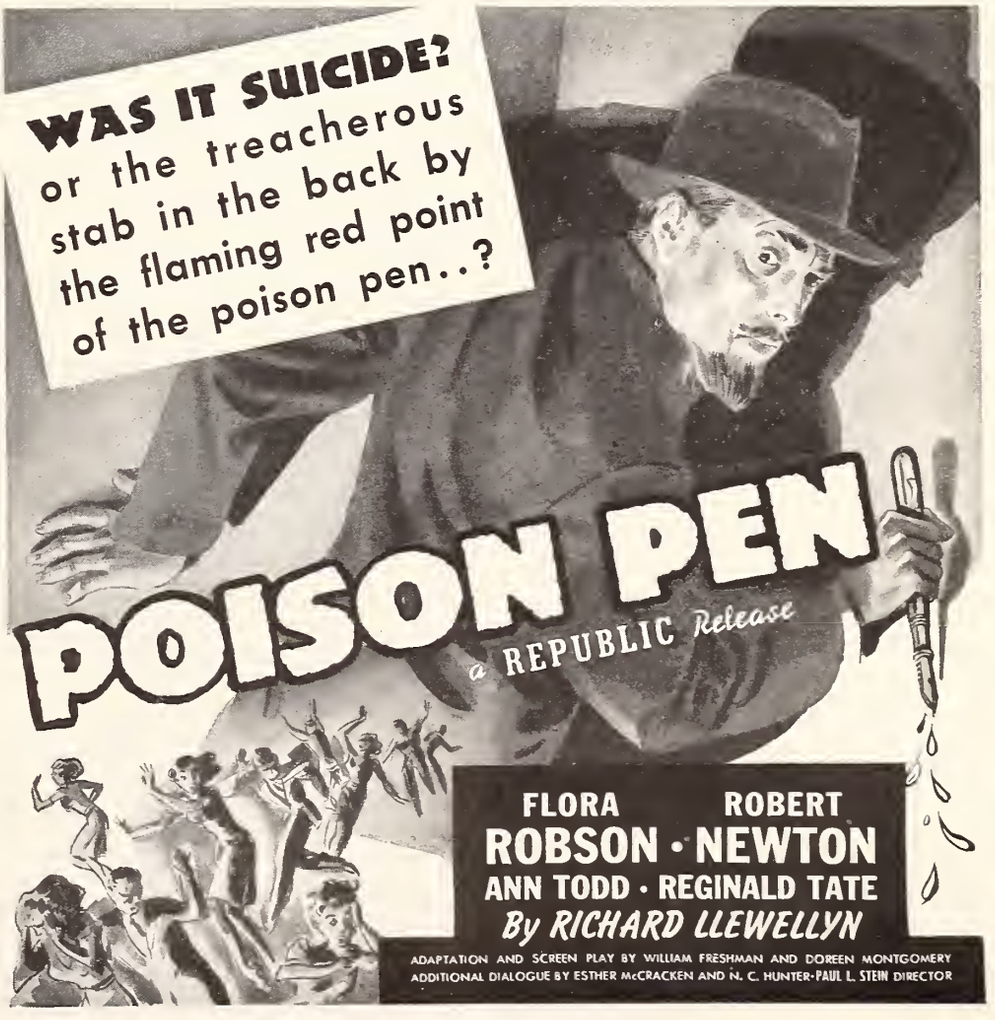
Woman cosmetician in the lobby of the theatre told patrons about "A Woman's Face" in addition to giving beauty talks as part of the campaign for the film executed by James Keefe, Cambria, Johnstown, Pa.



Sid Scott's campaign on "Keep Your Seats, Please" at the Capitol, in Sudbury, Ontario, was centered around the cooperation of local distributors of the George Formsby records, music stores and radio station and the patriotic theme "Britain Delivers the Goods." Merchants tied up with attractive window displays, music store on main street rigging up loud speaker so that hit tunes from picture were carried out to the streets. To reach the transient public, inserts were spotted in hotel foyers, railroad stations, bus terminals, etc. Aiding in putting over the campaign was Max Phillips, assistant.

Numerous merchant co-op ads were promoted by A. Kent Craig for "Kitty Foyle" at the Capitol, in St. Catharines, Canada, in addition, stores came through with effective window displays with appropriate tie-in copy, each of which featured a blowup of Ginger Rogers, together with scene stills.

To give the workers in plants around Pittsfield, Mass., a chance to see the pictures playing at the Capitol Theatre, Edward Dowling announced recently that each Tuesday morning he would run a continuous show starting at 10 a.m. Local paper devoted editorial and readers to the special show.

OBITUARIES

Charles Ulrich, Publicity Agent

Charles Kenmore Ulrich, newspaper man, novelist, playwright and motion picture publicity agent, died at his home in Long Island City, N. Y., Saturday, July 5th. He was 82 years of age.

Mr. Ulrich was one of the leading playwrights for amateurs and was credited with designing and compiling the first pressbooks of the motion picture industry with a catalogue of accessories, advertising and publicity centered around a particular picture for use by exhibitors in promoting the film.

In 1881 Mr. Ulrich wrote his first play, "An Aeronaut," and followed this with 41 other plays and vaudeville sketches. In the following years he worked for various newspapers throughout the country and later spent some years in Texas, Arizona and New Mexico before he settled in San Francisco. He spent 20 years in that city and then returned east. In 1903 he joined the staff of the Chicago Tribune. Six years later he became a special writer and correspondent for the New York Herald and traveled extensively through South America and the West Indies.

In 1918 Mr. Ulrich became a member of the Paramount Pictures publicity staff, then headed by John C. Flinn. He was later with Producers Distributing Corporation and Pathe. In 1931 he was with the N.R.A. film code office.

Mr. Ulrich is survived by his widow and three children, two daughters and one son.

C. F. Eyton, Film Executive, Dies

Funeral services for Charles F. Eyton, 70, for many years a film executive, who died of pneumonia, Wednesday, July 2nd, were held in Hollywood, Saturday, at the Hollywood Cemetery Chapel. He is survived by one sister.

Mr. Eyton was associated with Oliver Morosco in theatrical enterprises and participated in the merging of Mr. Morosco's film producing company with contemporary organizations making up Famous Players-Lasky Corp., which subsequently became Paramount. He was a production executive for that company, and later became general manager of the Paramount studios. He was also secretary of the Hollywood Athletic Club since its founding in 1916.

Craig Williams

Craig Williams, stage and film actor, died Friday, July 4th, at his apartment in New York of a heart attack. He was 64 years old. Between stage appearances Mr. Williams spent some time in Hollywood and appeared in film productions with Bebe Daniels and Gloria Swanson. He was a member of the Friars Club and the Actors Fund of America. He leaves a widow, Mrs. Beatrice Williams.

Frank Coffinberry

Dr. Carl E. Conn

Dr. Carl E. Conn, 66, head of the surgical staff at the Hollywood Hospital in Hollywood, Cal., and staff surgeon for the Warner studio, died in that city, Monday, July 7th.

Sam H. Harris, Stage Producer

Sam H. Harris, one of the most successful of Broadway theatrical producers, died of pneumonia in his suite at the Ritz Carlton Hotel in New York, Thursday, July 3rd. He was 69 years old.

Mr. Harris, who attained theatrical fame as a partner of George M. Cohan, and later as an independent producer, never fully recovered his health after undergoing an operation for appendicitis last March in Florida.

Following an early career as a prize fight promoter during which time he handled the light-weight sensation of the day, Terry McGovern, and later as owner of race horses, Mr. Harris turned to the stage to become one of its greatest producers in association with Mr. Cohan and later as an independent producer during which time he produced 28 hit productions and won the Pulitzer prize for "Icebound," "Of Thee I Sing" and "You Can't Take It With You." He was the only independent producer to thrice win this award.

In 1935 Mr. Harris and Max Gordon signed an agreement with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer whereby the film company financed all their Broadway productions during the 1935-36 theatrical season, a deal that was described as the most extensive of its kind ever arranged between Hollywood and Broadway. THEY MEET AGAIN (RKO Radio)

Dr. Christian Drama

Produced by William Stephens. Directed by Erle C. Kenton.

SYNOPSIS

Dr. Christian (Jean Hersholt) arranges a surprise birthday party for little Jane Webster (Anne Bennett), a motherless nine-year old. The party boomerangs when a bank examiner finds a shortage in the books of her father, Bob Webster (Barton Yarborough). Webster is convicted on circumstantial evidence. Convinced of his innocence, Dr. Christian enlists the aid of his housekeeper, Mrs. Hastings (Maude Eburne), the town postmaster, Roy Davis (Robert Baldwin) and July Price (Dorothy Lovett), his assistant.

They feel that only an officer of the bank could have stolen the funds without Bob's knowledge. Mrs. Hastings, consulting the stars, suggests to Dr. Christian that Bill Merrill, Jr. (Frank Melton), son of the bank president, could have committed the theft. The doctor sends Roy Davis to Chicago to find out about an affair that young Merrill has been carrying on.

Dr. Christian goes to St. Paul to see the Governor about pardoning Bob Webster, in order to save Joan's life, as the child has lost the will to live. Through a misunderstanding, Dr. Christion is confined in jail as a drunken reprobate. The Governor, however, knows the doctor well and has him released. Meanwhile in Chicago, Roy has obtained damaging evidence against young Merrill, who confesses when confronted with the evidence.

With her father at her bedside, Jane recovers, and is eventually able to sing in the finals of a song contest. She wins before an audience including Judy, the Governor, her dad and Dr. Christian.

Western

Associate producer, Harry Grey. Directed by William Morgan.

SYNOPSIS

Gene (Gene Autry), a youthful rancher in a valley facing flood devastation, joins his fellow ranchmen in an effort to force the lumber people to plant new trees to replace the ones they cut down. Unable to make headway with the lumber camp foreman, he and Frog (Smiley Burnette) go straight to the owner of the lumber company, old Asa Wentworth (George Cleveland). Old Asa is dominated by his willful grandaughter, Billie (Maris Wrixon), who imagines herself in love with Larry Drew (Robert Kent), ruthless general manager of the company.

Asa does not approve of Drew's tactics but is afraid open opposition would drive Billie to elope with Drew. Asa, Gene and Frog connive an elaborate plot to have Mount Warner declared a State Park, in order to prevent the ruthless stripping of trees. They enlist the aid of Mrs. Peobody, wife of the state's lieutenant-governor, an ardent animal enthusiast. Billie, meanwhile, spreads the rumor that there is no wild life, to speak of, on Mount Warner.

When Billie takes a number of her friends to see for themselves, Gene and Frog stock the place with game. Before the party leaves Mount Warner, a storm comes up. Billie is able to see for herself the mutilation of the mountain top, and she is won over when Gene and Frog rescue old Asa from certain death.

SYNOPSIS

Ann Rider (Ann Todd), daughter of the Vicar of the little village of Hillsdale, while at a dance, receives a telephone call from David (Geoffrey Toone), her fiance, in Australia. He tells her he is sailing for home at once and that they can be married as soon as he arrives. Ann tells the Vicar (Reginald Tate), her maiden aunt, Mary Rider (Flora Robson), and the townsfolk at the dance, including Connie Fateley (Catherine Lacey), the local dressmaker, and Sam Hurrin (Robert Newton) and his wife, Sucal (Belle Chrystal).

The next day, without warning, the peace of the village is shattered when a series of malicious letters, accusing various of the townspeople of indiscretions, appear in the mails. Among others, Sam Hurrin is told that his wife, Sucal, and his good friend, Len Griffin (Edward Chapman) are carrying on an affair. The Vicar and his sister insist that the letters be ignored but the gossip continues.

Connie Fateley is accused of writing the letters, and, unable to stand the false accusations, hangs herself in the church belfry. Scotland Yard men arrive to look into the situation, but before they can solve the mystery, Sam Hurrin kills Len Griffin. Finally the search is narrowed to the home of the Vicar. Realizing that denial is useless, the Vicar's sister, Mary Rider, tells her astonished brother that, as an old maid, her whole life has been devoted to Ann. Rather than lose her, she had decided to break the girl's engagement to David. She had sent letters to others to avoid suspicion. When the police arrive with their warrant for her arrest, Mary Rider dashes to the cliffs and hurls herself into the rocky crags below.

RUGGLES OF RED GAP (Reissue) (Paramount)

Comedy

Produced by Arthur Hornblow, Jr. Directed by Leo McCarey. From the story by Harry Leon Wilson.

SYNOPSIS

Ruggles (Charles Laughton), ultra-conservative valet to the Honorable George Vane Bassingwell (Roland Young), learns that as a result of a card game he has been awarded to the rich and wooly Americans, the Frouds—Egbert (Charlie Ruggles) and Mrs. Effie Froud (Mary Boland) and is to leave his native England for the American west.

When they arrive in Red Gap, Ruggles amazed at all that happens to him in a dignified manner is announced to the populace as a retired British soldier. His career being hectic for one and all, it has a touch of pathos when the snobbish Mr. Belknap-Jackson to whom he has been accredited, (Lucien Littlefield), of Boston, fires him. His associations with Mrs. Judson (Zasu Pitts) having convinced him that love might also be for him, and his recital of Lincoln's Gettysburg address consolidating his belief that he is one of all men who are created equal, Ruggles goes into trade as a restaurant proprietor.

Although his action blasts Mrs. Froud's plans for a swanky party and chills the plans of the newly arrived Honorable Vane Bassingwell, an elfish spirit who finds much in common with Froud, it is a triumph for Ruggles as he extracts a popular revenge upon the snooty Mr. Belknap-Jackson.

THE STARS LOOK DOWN (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

English Mining Drama

Produced by I. Goldsmith. Directed by Carol Reed. From the book by A. J. Cronin.

SYNOPSIS

David Fenwick (Michael Redgrave), coal miner and descendant of a long line of English miners, wins an Oxford scholarship. His ambition is to enter politics and better the condition of his people. He and his father, Robert (Edward Rigby), know Scupper Flats, where coal is being mined, is unsafe, and in danger of collapsing under tons of water. They induce the miners to strike but the union, influenced by Barras (Allan Jeayes), mine owner, refuses to support the strike. Barras closes the mine to starve them out. Martha Fenwick (Nancy Price), stern wife and mother, disapproves both of the strike and her son's college ambitions. David goes to Oxford.

Joe Gowlan (Emlyn Williams), son of a miner, leaves for Tynecastle and becomes a bookmaker. He has an affair with Mrs. Millington, wife of a coal magnate and induces her to influence her husband to take him into the latter's coal business. To accomplish that he schemes to get rid of Jennie Sunley (Margaret Lockwood), daughter of his landlady, by maneuvering to have her often in David's company, then, pretending jealousy, to leave her. Jennie vamps David into marrying her. He quits college and becomes a schoolmaster.

Barris promises to close Scupper Flats, but Joe Gowlan, now working for Millington, offers Barras an advantageous contract, and Barras convinces himself that Scupper Flats is not dangerous. David protests to the union, but one of the union directors points out that his protest is probably due to enmity, since Jennie and Joe are often seen together.

The mine collapses and all below die, including David's father and brother and Joe's father. Barras, filled with remorse, dies from a stroke. David is now looked up to by the union leaders but he turns away from them to take up his original plan to work for public ownership of the coal mines, now actively backed by the Parliament leader.

FORCED LANDING (Paramount)

Air Melodrama

Produced by William C. Thomas and William C. Pine. Directed by Gordon Wiles.

SYNOPSIS

Dan Kendall (Richard Arlen), an American pilot, and his mechanic, Christmas (Mikhail Rasmuny), are on their way to report to Colonel Golas (Nils Asther), Dan's superior officer in charge of the air force of an independently governed island. On their way there, they encounter Banshek (J. Carrol Naish), the rebel leader, who is looting the public market with his men.

A gun battle ensues and Dan protects Johanna Van Deuren (Eva Gabor) from the flying bullets. Dan and the girl head for a restaurant, where Colonel Golas takes them by surprise and orders Dan to leave the cafe. Dan refuses to allow Golas, who is in love with Johanna, to bully him. Dan and Christmas wind up in jail.

Dan and Christmas are released from the jail by Golas who assigns the American to fly a cargo to Fort Ponasta, where Johanna's father, Hendrik Van Deuren (Victor Varconi) is in charge. Golas actually is determined to keep the improved fortifications at the fort from being completed. Dan on arrival at the fort finds that the natives refuse to work any longer without pay. He convinces them to carry on for a few days longer on the promise that he will deliver the gold. Dan and Johanna take off for the capital.

They are captured by the rebel chief when they attempt to land near the wreckage of a plane they have spotted. Dan saves Banshek's son from death and in return, he and Johanna are released. After their return home, Dan is assigned to fly the gold to the fort. Johanna stows away on the plane. Golas is to escort them in another plane. Johanna discovers a time bomb in the freight cabin and warns Dan in the nick of time.

Golas sees them throw it overboard, realizes that his sabotage plans are about to go haywire and starts firing on them. Dan's only weapon is a keg of nails, which he dumps on Golas' plane. The nails splinter Golas' propeller and he crashes. Dan becomes the island's hero.

GAMBLING DAUGHTERS (Producers Rel. Corp.)

Melodrama

Produced by T. H. Richmond. Directed by Max Nosseck.

Lillian Harding (Gale Storm) and Katherine Thompson (Janet Shaw) follow Professor Bedoin (Sigi Arno), French instructor at the exclusive Lakeside School for Girls, to the Angels Roost, a nearby roadhouse. Chance Landon (Roger Pryor), member of a gambling ring, recognizes the two wealthy girls and persuades them to try their luck, but Bedoin, seeing them, insist they return to school.

The girls return the next night and lose heavily. Katherine is forced to steal family jewels to make good her losses, and when Lillian balks at doing the same thing, Chance threatens to sell love letters she had written him to a scandal sheet. Lillian also steals some family jewels. Jimmy Parker (Robert Baldwin), insurance investigator, posing as a gym instructor, arrives at the school and finds some of the jewels in Katharine's possession. The girls confess and Jimmy agrees to help them.

They lure Nick (Eddie Foster), another member of the gang, to the school gymnasium, but before they can get him to "talk" Nick is mysteriously shot. The gun is planted on Walter Cameron (Charles Miller), father of Diana (Cecilia Parker). She believes him to be a well-to-do banker but actually he is being used by the gang. Cameron is arrested.

The following day in class Bedoin crushes a rose in his fingers, a motion that Lillian recognizes from a brief glimpse she had of the "boss" in the Angels Roost. At a signal the girls rush Bedoin and overpower him. Cameron is cleared and Diana looks forward to a romance with Jimmy.

Jim Dandy is adrift on a raft with a venetian blind for a sail. The raft soon reaches the shore of a peaceful little island somewhere in the South Seas. Footprints in the sand lead Jim Dandy to a South Seas beauty—Sarong-Sarong, by name. Jim and Sarong-Sarong are chased by headhunters. Jim is captured and seems doomed to be cooked in the pot when a strange witch doctor appears and frightens the natives away. KITTY GETS THE BIRD (Col.)

Fable Cartoon (2756)

A cat attempts to sneak off with the turkey. In anger, the lady of the house is about to cast the cat out into the cold, but a terrific blast of snow causes her to soften and reconsider. She warns the kitty to stay away from the turkey while she goes out shopping or out he'll go. While the lady is out, an audacious little mouse prepares for a turkey feast as the cat, in fear of being blamed, vainly pleads with the mouse to leave the turkey alone. Kitty finally is forced to wrest it away from the mouse, just as Madam returns to catch him and out he goes.

POLAND FOREVER (World Pictures)

Here is Poland before the war—the scenic highlights, the industries and pleasantries; during the invasion—the bombings, the terror, the siege of Warsaw and the refugees; and now—the armed forces of "Free Poland" fighting back. The scenes of the bombings and the onrush of the Nazi war machine, although depicted in newsreels, gains immeasurably in emotion when preceded by the peaceful scenes of a Poland before the war. But the very fact that it is about war and suffering makes it a subject of grimness.

FIGHTER PILOT (Col.)

Cinescope (2979)

The theme of this subject is the indomitable spirit that is prevalent in the squadrons of the R.A.F. Lashed inside the cockpit in actual combat, cameramen accompany the flyers, revealing their tense feelings when in the air and in contact with enemy planes. The subject matter is all the more dramatic since these scenes are of actual combat, not staged.

ROLLING RHYTHM (RKO)

Sportscope (14,311)

Roller skating has increased in popularity in the last few years. Today, it is a recognized form of amateur competition and at roller carnivals, such as the one filmed at Madison Square Garden in New York, entries are judged on the same events, and by the same rules as prevail in competitive ice skating. Featured in this subject are Martha Weed and Rita Lugenbuhl, a pair of tomorrow's champions, and fourteen year old Lois Goeller, junior figure skating champion of 1940. The subject ends with an exhibition dance by professionals Dorothy Kolbe and William Opatrny.

THE RED ARMY (Artkino)

This short subject is a Russian produced film of the power and size of the Red Army. In its own way, this too presents only the better side of army life in the Soviet Union and shows such scenes as young men in training for officer's commissions, a military revue in Red Square in Moscow, and Stalin reviewing his forces. The commentary in this subject is spoken in accented English but, nevertheless, is understandable.

Narrated by Frank Craven, who has been provided with a script as warm and simple as his dialogue and Yankee humor, the film tells of the growth, decline and present-day rebirth of the American soil in that section of the country. The photography is aided by a musical score by John Alden Finckel.

INFORMATION PLEASE No. 11 (RKO)

(14,211)

Jan Struther, popular British writer, makes a return appearance with the board of experts. The examination starts with a poser about motion pictures and moves on to a question about spinsters in which Mrs. Struther supplies a definition of forelorn women. Pantomimed episodes of history, identification of period costumes modeled by children, and a pair of lively gossips whose vituperative conversation refers to fictional characters, follow. The final question concerns props that might have been useful to several legendary characters. The board, consisting of Oscar Levant, John Kiernan and Franklin P. Adams, missed one question—they failed to identify the Battle of Bull Run.

LASSO WIZARDS (Par.)

Sportlight (RO-11)

Practically every type of roping is featured in this sport subject. The cowhand cutting the calf from the herd, then roping the critter for inspection or branding, is but one of the many types. It takes two strong ropes, two horses and two cowboys to rope a bear. Cowboys aren't the only roping experts. At the Thomas Jefferson High School in San Antonio, Texas, no girl is considered well educated unless she can handle a lasso. Chet Byers is a master manipulator of the rope. Sam Garrett, present world titleholder, displays several tricks of his trade. Finally at the C-Bar-G Ranch in California, cowboys use lariats instead of mallets in their version of polo. Narrated by Ted Husing.

I'LL NEVER HEIL AGAIN (Col.)

Three Stooges (2408)

King Herman, the six and seven eighths, is ruler of Moronica. When he is driven into exile a dictator with a little Toothbrush mustache, Moe, takes his place, together with an air marshal named Gen. Herring, played by Curly, and a minister of propaganda, Larry. The dictators prosper for a time. War breaks out. Then King Herman's advisors send Gilda (Mary Ainslee), his daughter, to try to win back the throne. She convinces Moe his fellow dictators in Europe are trying to double-cross him. He summons the other dictators. While they all fight for possession of a globe of the world, a bomb, disguised as a billiard ball, goes off and the dictators go wherever dead dictators can go.

NEW ENGLAND 8 MILLION YANKEES (RKO)

March of Time No. 12 (13,112)

In this twelfth issue of the current series, March of Time focuses its attention on the six New England states. A topical note runs through the subject, which concerns New England's relation to the war abroad, but there is more in this of a documentary and ageless record of the New England Yankee, than of this war or any war. Taking a typical small town—Exeter, New Hampshire—the New England way of life is summarized in the quiet existence of the townspeople. The war, however, has affected New England. Its industries, especially its shipyards, are operating at full blast as is shown here. Uniforms—soldier and sailor—also are prevalent in New England.

USE IT!

On the opposite page appears the master index to Product Digest, a cumulative catalogue of all information available to date on 1940-41 product and which has been published in preceding issues of Motion Picture Herald.

Check the title of any feature that you want to look up, turn to the designated page or pages of your file, and you will find all buying and booking information available up to this very minute — synopses, casts, credits, release dates, production numbers, running time, review references, Round Table references and Legion of Decency ratings.

Product Digest is published every other week alternately with the regular Release Chart.

The Release Chart carries, as always, an alphabetical index of titles, a breakdown by companies, star information, release dates, running time and review references. The Release Chart, published every other week, is a compact compilation of certain important booking information.

Product Digest, on alternate weeks, is cumulative, a more extensive compilation of similar information. The Release Chart is complete in itself. Product Digest carries only current information, but if you maintain a complete file of Product Digest, you will have, at your instant service, synopses, casts and other detailed data which could not conceivably be compressed into one issue. The cumulative alphabetical index of Product Digest, however, is a reference to all information that has been printed to date in all the issues of Product Digest.

If you misplaced or have not saved any issue of Product Digest, write for duplicates.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

MARTIN QUIGLEY, Editor-in-Chief and Publisher

Vol. 144, No. 3 — July 19, 1941

"MUST BE SOLD"

MANY a reviewer of pictures for the trade will have special interest in some recent words from Carl Leserman, set down in a Warner Brothers house organ.

"A great many films have abundant merits that are never fully sold to the public. This applies particularly to the productions which draw the trade paper reviewers' comment that they have good qualities but must be sold. Too often this phrase is taken by exhibitors as a damning statement. Actually it is a confirmation of a picture's merits, proof that it has potentialities which the showman can turn into box-office results according to his ingenuity and enterprise. Every article in a competitive field must be sold. That goes for limousines and chewing gum as well as for entertainment. United States defense bonds are tops in merit, yet Uncle Sam has put behind these bonds the biggest selling campaign in the country today. Even bread, the basic necessity of life, must be sold."

The ideal alike of producer, distributor and exhibitor is a picture so appealing in all its components that it does not have to be sold—merely announced. Three times in the history of the industry that has been achieved, in appreciable degree. First it was done with a one-sheet in the nickelodeon lobby announcing "Biograph Day". A few years later "New Chaplin Comedy" were the magic words. In 1940 they were: "Gone With the Wind".

There was, in fact, plenty of selling behind these products, too, only it was indirect—and highly cumulative.

The processes involved are not available in measure to support the theatre against its countless external competitions.

The star system, which evolved against the will of the picture makers, became its most effective selling instrument and for some years was substantially the only selling instrument in use, from studio to screen. The star is, obviously, a presold personality. The star personality is still today, despite many invading influences, both within and outside the industry, the prime box-office asset. That is as old as the theatre itself.

WHEN the reviewer remarks that the picture "has to be sold", he means that names and the title will not be enough to arrest the attention of the customers but that there is that contained which will give them entertainment if they can be induced to go in and look.

That does, indeed, make a demand on the retailer—because, when a picture "has to be sold", the selling has mostly to be done at the point of sale, the box office.

But, in turn, that order of selling requires abundant information about the product, most particularly with respect to those less obvious selling points of content. That the retail showman must have if he is to create and relate a buying state of mind among his customers to his playdate.

Such service to the product and the exhibitor Motion Picture Herald seeks to render, from story purchase through production, preview and exploitation, all the way from first run to the areas of "What the Picture Did for Me", and including the Round Table which presents so much of "What I Did for the Picture". Substantially every motion picture in the market gets that sequence of attentions.

What the producer-and-distributor does and says about the product in display advertising attentions becomes at once to the exhibitor a source of direct information and a source of inference. The exhibitor inevitably tends to do his selling on the pictures that are sold to him. If he is in any manner infected by silence, it is not with interest or enthusiasm or nticipation.

If it is true, and it is, that "a great many films . . . have abundant merits that are never fully sold to the public", it is also true that they are not sold to the exhibitor.

HERO YORK

THE trade, the press and the public appear to think well of "Sergeant York", the picture. This, as of 1941, is of a certain special interest to your editor who, twenty-and-odd years ago, then in newsreel production, put that same Sergeant York, hillbilly hero of the A.E.F., for the first time on the screen in a five hundred foot splash which recorded his arrival at the debarkation port of Hoboken and pictured his waiting family, friend, preacher, home, church and sweetheart in the hills of Tennessee. The picture was a newsreel sensation of the period. Immediately, an official of the Tennessee Society made protest, threatened several kinds of lawsuits—all on the allegation that the newsreel had exhausted, dissipated and given away the Sergeant's potential dramatic career. There were several reasons why nothing happened in sequel. Now, it seems, the dramatic values have indeed survived. And it is timely Americana, along with being entertainment, the presumed purpose.

BRITAIN CARRIES ON

THE pluck of the British gleams through the pages of the new issue of the Kinematograph Year Book, from the press of Kinematograph Publications, Ltd., London. This is the twenty-eighth of their yearbooks, which have arrived with that persistent regularity, through all the ordeals of wars and peace, which suggests that indeed "there will always be England."

"At the time of writing," quietly observes Mr. S. G. Rayment, editor, "conditions already abnormal are varying from day to day, but there is one staple virtue on which we can rely—we can maintain our faith in the genius for adaptation and the elasticity of policy which has always marked the industry. These qualities alone justify confidence in our power to weather the storm."

The book itself is a sturdy job, with all departments represented in 624 pages which speak of business and theatre operation, with little external consciousness of bombers overhead.

This Week in the News

U. S. Verifies Upturn

THE worst of the theatre depression has been weathered and attendance is again on the upgrade. This was the report issued last Saturday from the United States Department of Commerce, at Washington, by Nathan D. Golden, Industrial Consultant of the Department, who had just returned from the MPTOA exhibitors' convention in Hollywood, held last month, and who, in the interim, observed conditions en route east.

A box office upturn in recent months was shown in a MOTION PICTURE HERALD graph published on June 14th. Wall Street Journal, on July 9th, reported a boom Fourth of July, estimating a theatre upturn of as much as 60 per cent.

While seasonal factors undoubtedly have adversely affected patronage, Mr. Golden reported, increased industrial activity requiring the services of many persons on night shifts also has been an important contributing factor.

Exhibitors are beginning to adjust their operations to the new conditions created by the defense program, Mr. Golden found, and in some cities exhibitors have solved their problem by remaining open until the early hours of the morning to serve workers on the 4 p.m. to 2 a.m. shifts in local industries.

Since the July 4th week-end business of motion picture theatres was at record levels, it appears evident that the patronage decline has reached its lowest level for the season and is now pointing upward," he said.

100 for Odeon

THAT "race for life" in Canadian circuit theatre acquisition this week ran a long way, with the disclosure by the comparatively new Odeon circuit, of the names of approximately 50 of its owned or affiliated theatres, and the intimation that enough deals were under way to assure the circuit "more than 100 theatres in all parts of Canada," to operate in competition to the Famous Players Canadian Circuit.

The figure is still below that for FPC, which had 302, two weeks ago acquired six more, and then opened three new units, making a total this week of 311. Odeon is headed by N. L. Nathanson, formerly chief of Famous Players. J. J. Fitzgibbons leads the latter.

From Toronto it was reported the Uptown Theatre, there, owned by Loew's and now leased by FPC until September 1st, may change hands. Mr. Nathanson and his brother, Henry, operate the Regal Film Corporation, Ltd., distributors for MGM, whose first outlet in Toronto is the Uptown. Listed as Odeon owned or affiliated in that city are the Midtown, Mayfair, Astor, Esquire, Grant, Classic, and Radio City theatres.

MPTOA to Have AID

NOW it's the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America among national exhibitor organizations which is establishing a service bureau, "one that will keep all of us informed about conditions generally — sales policies and so forth." The disclosure comes in the current bulletin of the MPTOA, over the signature of Edward Kuykendall, president, and it notes that this information bureau is the follow-up of suggestions made by Arthur Lockwood at the national convention last month in Los Angeles. It adds that the service bureau will keep members "informed, and in a better position to buy pictures and operate theatres."

National Allied States Association has had just such a service in operation for months: the Allied Information Department, under the chairmanship of Sidney Samuelson of Allied of Eastern Pennsylvania—and has already made many reports on product prices, policy, and procedure.

Like Allied's AID, the MPTOA's bureau will depend a lot upon reports from members.

80% Holdovers

HOLDOVERS on Broadway this week established an all-time high: 11 of 14 of the street's movie houses had holdovers, fully 80 per cent.

The only non-holdovers, and all three of them just starting, were RKO's "Tom, Dick and Harry," at the Music Hall; MGM's "Getaway," at the Rialto, and the independent double feature bill of "Wrangler's Roost," Republic, and "Arkansas Judge," at the New York Theatre.

The 11 holdovers: Warners' "Sergeant York," in its third week, Astor Theatre; RKO-Disney "Fantasia," 36th week, at the Broadway; "They Met in Bombay," MGM, third week, Capitol; "Soviet Frontiers on the Danube," Artkino-Soviet importation, fourth week, Central; "In the Navy," Universal, sixth week, Criterion; "Underground," Warners, fourth week, Globe; "Frank Buck's Jungle Cavalcade," RKO, second week, Palace; "Caught in the Draft," Paramount, fourth week, Paramount Theatre; "Moon Over Miami," 20th Century-Fox, second week, Roxy; "Manpower," Warners, third week, Strand; and, "Ku-Kan," Adventure Epics, Chinese importation, fourth week, World Theatre.

'Funday School'

TO ATTRACT "kid" patronage at Loew's Theatre, in Houston, Manager Francis Deering inaugurated Saturday morning shows under the beguiling name of "Funday School." In addition to the regular screen shows, Mr. Deering offers amateur talent and radio shows. The "Funday School" is sponsored by a local soft drink company, and also has the support of Radio Station KPRC which features a class for juvenile radio announcers. How this showman puts on this novelty, together with other current exploitation developments, is told in this week's Managers' Round Table, starting on page 95.

That Anti-Decree Case

NEW YORK offices of majors' counsel still would not specify, Wednesday, when they would file their "test suit" in Minneapolis state court to determine constitutionality of the state's anti-blocks-of-5 law, and obtain temporary injunctive relief. But a spokesman of the Paramount legal staff intimated the suit might be filed before the week's end.

Minnesota's two-month-old law, sponsored by Northwest Allied, forces distributors to sell their entire season's product, anti decree. Thus, it is athwart the consent decree ruling that majors must offer 1941-42 product in blocks of five, and it also appears to render impossible the single feature selling of such majors as United Artists, which was reported joining with the five-decree-bound distributors in the test suit.

Mixed feelings were the lot of Minneapolis sales representatives of the majors, as 1941-42 product neared release. Ralph Cramblet, UA branch manager there, was reported selling new product, under asserted instructions from New York to proceed "as usual."

Protest Warners' Buy

CABLES from London, Wednesday, reported that the British Cinematograph Exhibitors Association had decided to object formally to the British Board of Trade, against Warners' proposed acquisition of the Associated British circuit of 400 theatres of the late John Maxwell. Ownership of British theatres by American film interests was thought undesirable. And it was further asserted the pending deal contravenes a reported U. S. film companies' guarantee not to invest their "frozen" money in British theatres.

The CEA is advising Warners of its stand, and plans Parliamentary lobbying. British offers for the Maxwell circuit, largest in Britain, were invited.

No progress occurred, at the Wednesday meeting, in London, on formation of an all-film-industry emergency war trade council. Delegates favored action, but there were contentious voices.

Selznick, Capra, Lasky

PLACEMENTS and replacements of top product personnel, of prime interest to the exhibitor buyers of the topsters' product, this week saw David O. Selznick and Frank Capra ready to hitch their careers to United Artists, as papers arranging their acquisition of partnership-stock lay on U. A. Hollywood desks, fully drafted and awaiting the arrival of the two men there, from New York.

Meanwhile, Jesse Lasky, whose "Sergeant York" opened, under Warners' auspices, at the Astor Theatre, New York, and then at other spots, two weeks ago, has become the subject of much attention centering around his future picture and releasing plans.

The Selznick-Capra future was pointed up sharply by Arthur W. Kelly, United Artists acting chief, in a New York interview Tuesday. He said the two men would produce two pictures each, per year, for UA release. Their UA partnerships result from acquisition of the shares of the late Douglas Fairbanks and the withdrawal of Samuel Goldwyn.

Mr. Lasky was understood to have said, during the week of the "Sergeant York" New York world premiere, that he would continue making pictures for Warner release. However, rumor since then has linked him with MGM, United Artists, Twentieth Century-Fox, and RKO. Last reports this week said he had obtained financing for three more films, but did not specify release arrangements.

No Iceland Newsreels

NEWSPAPER correspondents, newsreel cameramen and radio commentators will not be permitted to visit Iceland until American occupation of the country has been completed. President Roosevelt this week explained that newspapermen would not be permitted to go to the new base for the present, and that prohibition was explained by other officials to extend to cameramen and radio reporters as well.

Later, the President said, opportunity will be provided for American correspondents to visit the new base in order to acquaint the public with the activities which are going on, and at that time it is expected cameramen will be given similar opportunities. How much they will be permitted to say or record about the base will be a matter for the military command to determine.

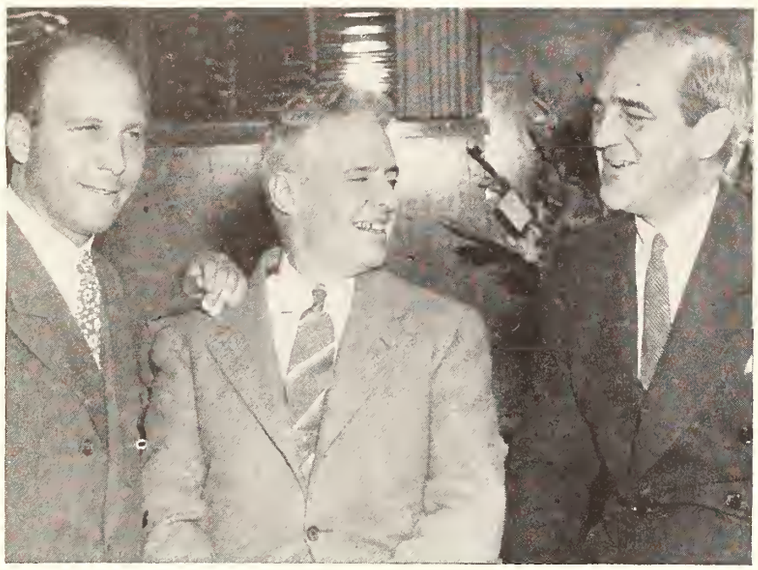
Television's Audience

FORTY THOUSAND persons nightly watch the television broadcasts of the National Broadcasting Company, according to Alfred H. Morton, the company's vice-president in charge of television, who on Wednesday in New York reported results of a postcard survey. These postcards, giving the week's program, allow voting on value of numbers presented. Mr. Morton added that between 4,500 and 5,000 television receivers are in use in the area served by the company's transmitter, WBNT. From 450 to 600 of these are in public places.

The 40,000 figure is a minimum estimate. It is being shown to sponsors. The survey, Mr. Morton said, showed that five to six persons watch home reception, and about 25, public place reception.

The company is dickering for television rights with promoters and fights at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, are to be telecast next Tuesday night. (See page 90.)

Liaison



" 'THE Story of America' is being told and will be told on our American screen," declared Major General Robert C. Richardson, Jr., U. S. Army director of public relations, Tuesday night in Hollywood at the close of three days of conferences with studio heads. "The motion picture industry and the people in Hollywood are among the most sincere in this nation in their eagerness to aid in national defense," he told film leaders at a dinner in his honor at Perino's. Other speakers were Will H. Hays, Y. Frank Freeman, H. M. Warner, Louis B. Mayer and Lieutenant Colonel W. Mason Wright, Jr., chief of the pictorial branch of the army's public relations office in Washington. Closer Army-Hollywood laison is reported on page 91.

DECREE TRADE SHOWING

FIRST trade showing in New York under the consent decree which obliges five major distributors to screen each feature for exhibitors before it can be sold was held Monday by RKO Radio at the Broadway theatre. The picture was "Parachute Battalion". Attending exhibitors are pictured herewith. Simultaneously, MGM held its first screening of "Lady Be Good" in Los Angeles. U.A. NEEDS 'SHOW-WINDOWS', WILL BUILD NEW $6,000,000 CIRCUIT

Twelve First-Run Theatres in Key Cities Planned at First to Get "Proper Representation"; Buckley To Head Operations

United Artists, apparently convinced that the U. S. Government's repeated strictures against theatre acquisition have no relation to it, will proceed immediately to build, and acquire, a circuit which at the outset will have 12 first-run houses throughout the country, according to Arthur Kelly, executive vice-president in charge of sales, who called reporters into his New York office Tuesday, to impart the news.

It will be the first time the company has directly operated theatres, Mr. Kelly pointed out. The present United Artists Theatre circuit has no official connection with the distribution company, although some UA executives own interests in it.

UA being a distributing firm, it is not subject to the Department of Justice displeasure at theatre acquisition by producers, Mr. Kelly explained; and he added that from the beginning UA partners had always envisioned their own theatre outlets for UA releases.

Harry Buckley was named by Mr. Kelly as the man who would probably assume direction of the circuit aborning. Mr. Buckley is a UA vice-president, and a former circuit executive.

Uniform Style Planned

The new UA houses will be built, or acquired, as the situation dictates, Mr. Kelly asserted. They will all be in a certain style: modern, de-luxe; yet of only about 1,000 seats, and of a small operating cost.

UA's purpose, he explained, is to secure proper representation, "show-windows," in certain locations. It will even compete with larger circuits, if that is necessary for proper "breaks," he declared.

From $5,000,000 to $6,000,000 will be expended on the project, which should be in operation by the autumn, according to the UA official. This money will come from the company, and other private sources; not from the public.

The emphasis on "small-type" houses was from a conviction that larger theatres were unnecessary, Mr. Kelly explained, asserting UA did not want to build "memorials." Noting that the purpose of the circuit was to obtain proper situations for UA product, Mr. Kelly intimated, the company had been unfairly treated, adding:

"We feel that we can show our pictures to better advantage than other exhibitors. We know the product, and can give it the proper treatment, for best results."

While the first intention is to secure first runs, the company may also secure subsequents, in certain of the deals, Mr. Kelly admitted. Although the company intends to secure operating control in most instances, in some it may buy in to the extent of only 25 per cent, he said, explaining such situations would be "where we believe in the exhibitor."

Single features, a concomitant of UA's type of product, will be the rule wherever possible, Mr. Kelly promised. Although UA product will be chiefly used, it may not supply enough fare for all playing time; and consequently, other companies' product will also be used in certain locations.

The present United Artists Theatre Circuit will not be acquired by the company, Mr. Kelly said. That circuit had been offered, but the deals into which it had entered with other circuits, and the interests in it of other persons, made UA control of it impossible, he said.

The United Artists Theatre Circuit, in which the distributing company of that name disclaims any official interest, numbered about 25 directly operated theatres at its peak of operations; and, at the present, is said to own United Artists Theatres, Ltd., of California, with interests in 57 houses; have a substantial share of the "A" and "B" stocks of Metropolitan Playhouses, with interests in 138 houses, and own United Artists of Texas, with a 50 per cent interest in the Robb and Rowley circuit of 82 houses. In addition, it operates the following theatres, most in partnerships:

The Chinese, Hollywood; Four Stars, Loew's State, and United Artists, Los Angeles; United Artists, Chicago; Loew's State, Louisville; Loew's Century, Loew's Valencia, Parkway, Baltimore; United Artists, Detroit; Rivoli, New York; Loew's Ohio, Loew's State, Columbus, Ohio; United Artists, Portland, Ore.; and Loew's Penn, Pittsburgh.

The disclaimer of the releasing company, however, has not prevented its executive personnel from participation in the circuit, in partnership everywhere except at the Rivoli, New York—said to be the only theatre the circuit owns outright. Among the UA personnel understood to have been original investors in the circuit are Mary Pickford, and the late Douglas Fairbanks, Sr.

Joseph M. Schenck, former chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox, is president of the United Artists Theatre Circuit, Inc., headquarters of which are in the Paramount Building, New York; and William P. Philips is its secretary.

Mr. Kelly declined to reveal what theatres and theatre sites were now being considered for the new chain. It was revealed, however, that purchase of the Rivoli, New York, property of the present United Artists Theatre Circuit, had been discussed some months ago, with no action. The theatre is closed for the summer months.

United Artists was formed, around 1919, with a quality picture program, to emanate from producers who were also partners in a corporation formed solely for the purpose of marketing pictures.

Its present partner-owners are Mary Pickford, Alexander Korda, Charles Chaplin. Expected as new partners, to replace the late Douglas Fairbanks, and the withdrawn Samuel Goldwyn, are producers David O. Selznick and Frank Capra. Papers for the deals to include these two men were complete early this week.

New Selling Order in U. S. Brings Separate Conventions for Canada

Canada will preserve block-booking in film dealings but, because of the divergence which has developed in procedure between the United States and the Dominion since the U. S. consent decree, there is now seen the necessity, or advisability, of holding separate sales conventions of the major companies in Ontario or Quebec key cities for a discussion of plans and policies for the new 1941-42 exhibition season.

This was indicated in the precedent set by the Warner exclusively Canadian sales conference, last Tuesday and Wednesday, at the Mount Royal Hotel, Montreal. A coachload of New York executives, headed by Gradwell Sears, took part, but managers and salesmen of branches across the Dominion will not be attending further conventions in the U. S.

The new situation was also exemplified in the holding of the recent meeting at Toronto of Paramount Pictures, at which the Canadian sales policy was outlined. Officials of Paramount Film Service, Ltd., will not attend national conventions in the U. S.

Several of the Canadian officials of United Artists attended sessions of that company in Chicago a few weeks ago but the conditions discussed there did not apply to the Canadian territory. During recent days, home office executives of Universal Pictures and Republic attended separate conferences at Toronto to discuss developments, even though their distributor, Empire-Universal Films, Ltd., had held a full-dress meeting at the Ontario capital only a month previously. Regal Films, handling MGM product in the Dominion, has held a meeting, but this was largely for reorganization purposes.

What can or will be done about the Canadian sales policy appears to be a remote question. There are distinctly rival chain interests with the creation of Odeon Theatres circuit. Both Famous Players and Odeon have absorbed a considerable number of unaffiliated theatres, by lease, purchase or partnership, and siderable number of unaffiliated theatres, by lease, purchase or partnership, and have now joined the circuits, thus washing away their individual booking problems. There now appears to be little in the way of organized independent groups to argue for changes in booking systems or modification of clearance schedules. The rival chains are linked with groups of exchange companies, generally speaking, and outlets are provided for.

DISTRIBUTORS START THEIR FIRST SHOW-BEFORE-BUYING SCREENINGS

Mixed Exhibitor Reaction Is Reported at First Key City Showings; Attendance Varies; Distance, Time Are Obstacles

The film industry's great, untried, much mulled, and so radically new experiment—trade showings by order of the Government, as a prelude and continuing practice in its consent decree method of selling films in blocks of five—began on Monday morning, in key cities throughout the nation; and, as reports were collated Tuesday, the situation, generally, appeared as follows:

Attendance was fair. It varied; good in some cities, bad in others. In general, the impression was one of indifference, if not of inability to get to the screening room. Some exchange spokesmen complained. Some thought the screenings a waste of money. Others predicted greater attendance later, when exhibitors got used to the screening idea, and when screenings coincided with their exchange "visiting day," or when the company screened an exceptionally good picture. Indianapolis, with some 400 attending, appeared to make the best showing. New Haven had only 16.

Strict enforcement of the "not transferable" clause in tradeshow invitations by MGM and RKO at their Monday screenings in Los Angeles, where exhibitors' wives and families or business connections were politely but positively turned away, limited audiences so drastically that pictures shown were believed penalized by exhibition to such a preponderance of vacant seats. Accordingly, RKO invited the trade press to a snug production room at the studio for its Tuesday screening, presenting the attraction simultaneously for exhibitors at the Victoria Theatre, adjacent to Film Row, leased and advertised as the place at which the product was to be made available for inspection. Revision of plans for tradeshows beyond those which have been advertised is expected to follow at an early date.

Reactions Varied

Reaction to the pictures shown Monday, RKO's "Parachute Battalion" and MGM's "Lady Be Good," were not definite. What reactions were reported were favorable. In one instance, typical audience reaction appeared from normally undemonstrative exhibitors.

In New York, where the consent decree was arrived at as a settlement of the Government's anti-trust case against the five majors, some 45 exhibitors attended the RKO screening Monday morning, 10:45, at the Broadway Theatre. These were said to represent 270 theatres, of which 50 were independent.

MGM, on Monday announced it would show its films in 65 cities, not the 31 in which exchange centers are. William F. Rodgers, general sales manager, added: "In addition to complete opportunity for advance viewing of films, our customers will not be required to pay more than a fair percentage allowed to us by public attendance. Even where a theatre's tradition has been confined to flat rentals, we will arrive at a new valuation of what is proper rental based on audience attendance in the territory in which the theatre is located."

Seventy-one circuit and independent showmen, representing 400 theatres, MGM said, attended its first trade show, "Lady Be Good," in New York Wednesday.

Blocks-of-Five Timetables

RKO, first to reach exhibitors with consent decree trade showings, listed the titles and trade showing dates, theatres and places of its first full block of five, in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, on July 5th, page 35, setting showings in 32 cities for "Parachute Battalion," "Father Takes a Wife," "Here Is a Man" (formerly "Devil and Daniel Webster"), "Citizen Kane" and "Lady Scarface," the showings running from last Monday to Saturday, July 19th.

Reviews of RKO's "Parachute Battalion," "Here Is a Man" and "Father Takes a Wife" appear in this issue, starting on page 74. "Citizen Kane" was reviewed on April 12th, page 36.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer listed the titles, trading showing dates and places of a block of three, in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on June 28th, pages 28 and 29, setting showings in 62 cities, for "Lady Be Good," starting June 14th; "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," starting July 21st, and "Down in San Diego," starting July 28th. A review of "Lady Be Good" appears in this issue, on page 74.

Paramount announced advance trade showing dates for "Nothing But the Truth," "Hold Back the Dawn," "Buy Me That Town," "Henry Aldrich for President" and "New York Town," to run between July 28 and 30, as listed in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, on pages 30 and 31, on July 12th.

Twentieth Century-Fox announced advance trade showing for its first five: "Charley's Aunt," "Wild Geese Calling," "Sun Valley Serenade," "Dressed to Kill" and "Private Nurse," to run between July 22nd and 25th, as listed in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, on pages 18 and 19, also on July 12th.

Warners, at mid-week, had made no public disclosure either of the identities of its first block or the dates when they will be shown in advance to exhibitors.

Appended are attendance figures, and opinion reactions from most of the key cities in which the first screenings occurred Monday morning and afternoon:

Over 100 at Los Angeles

Combined attendance at the two screenings in Los Angeles' Victoria Theatre was approximately 125. The MGM picture was shown at 10:30 A.M.; the RKO, at 2:15 P.M. Seventy-five attended the first; 50 the second.

Observers speculated that the strict adherence to "exhibitors only" policy caused the drop in attendance at the second screening.

Typical audience reactions from normally placid exhibitors, at both showings, surprised supervising showmen.

Chicago "Good"

Attendance at the Chicago RKO screening — approximately 50 exhibitors — was called good, inasmuch as that area's showmen rarely see films in projection rooms at exchanges, it was said.

Among those attending were, president Jack Kirsch, Allied of Illinois; Jim Booth, Essaness; Lou Reinheimer, Jack Hunt, Oriental Theatre; Alex Manta, Jack Rose, Indiana-Illinois theatres; Joe Gould, Joseph Stern Circuit; Sam Meyers, Wilmette, Ill., and Maurice Rubins, Michigan City, Ind.

Philadelphia "Poor"

Approximately 60 persons attended the RKO screening at 11 A.M.; and approximately 75 the MGM, at 2:30 P.M. The showings were at the Aldine Theatre. The attendance figures were said by film industry circles to be poor. It was not known how many of the total were exhibitors, inasmuch as all admission cards were honored.

Veteran exchangemen asserted exhibitors of the area never attended trade showings; and the decree would not affect their habits. Furthermore, they pointed out that, inasmuch as neighborhood theatres in the Philadelphia territory normally play pictures from 42 to 90 days after their first run, the exhibitor has always had, and still has, the opportunity to see them before playing them.

45 in New York

Approximately 45 exhibitors, mostly independent circuit operators, and estimated as representing 270 theatres, attended the RKO screening at 10:45 A.M., Monday, at the Broadway Theatre, New York, of "Parachute Battalion."

It was said, after careful check, that only about 12 exhibitors present operated less than five theatres.

Differences of opinion—on the practicability, and even the desirability, of trade

MUSICIANS ORDERED TO PLAY ANTHEM

James C. Petrillo, president of the American Federation of Musicians, issued an order last Friday that all union musicians were to play "The Star Spangled Banner" at the start and finish of each performance, in theatres, restaurants and other places where union musicians are employed. The order must be carried out until further notice, it was reported. Programs will begin five minutes earlier and end five minutes later so that musicians can play the anthem on their own time.

AFM does not require that the anthem be played on short radio shows, but requests that the national song be played for studio audiences during longer radio programs, in the event that a sponsor does not wish it broadcast.

REACTIONS VARY ON TRADE SHOWS

screening among independent exhibitor circles, was exemplified at the New York showing by William Stein, operator of the Imperial Theatres circuit, of Hackettstown, New Jersey, and Robert Goldblatt, operator of the Music Hall, Tarrytown.

Mr. Stein opined he would attend all the trade screenings. He said they were what the exhibitor, generally, needed. Now that the exhibitor has a chance to see the product he buys, he should use that chance, in Mr. Stein's opinion. He added: "If a picture is worth buying, it is worth seeing"; and he said he would not mind the fact of travel between his headquarters and New York.

Mr. Goldblatt said he would like to see the pictures being trade shown; but that "it is not humanly possible" to see all of the trade shows, or even a sizable group. He admitted that, like Mr. Stein, he had men to run his theatre in his absence, but pointed out his enterprise was smaller, and he liked to supervise much of the theatre activity. He noted his situation was similar to a majority of smaller theatre owners, who will not be able to afford visitations to trade centers merely for screenings. He predicted screening services and, as a member of New York Allied, remarked that the national organization and its units were considering such services.

The figure of 270 theatres represented at the showing compares with the approximately 1,069 theatres in the area.

Bob Wolff, New York district manager for RKO, supervised the RKO showing, together with Harry Michalson, shorts subject sales chief, Mike Poller, head of the playdate department and S. Barret McCormick, advertising and publicity director of the company.

Albany Has 60

Sixty persons were present when MGM screened "Lady Be Good" in Albany. Out-of-towners included Andy Roy, Lou Stolz, Jack Breslin, Warners Theatres managers in Utica; Frieder and Grossman, Community, Hudson; Pete Varnaskis, Watertown; George Thornton, Saugerties; Viv Sweet, Star, Salem and Swan, Greenwich; Frank Williams and Ed Burke, Benton Circuit, Saratoga. Fabian circuit managers attended en masse.

Independents in Pittsburgh

Independent theatre operation predominated at the Pittsburgh screenings, with opinion on the screenings divided. Thirty-six attended the RKO showing; 52, the MGM. Approximately 600 invitations went out. Manager Herbert Greenblatt handled the RKO showing and MGM Manager Byron Stoner handled his company's screening.

Slight in New Orleans

Comparatively slight attendance was reported from New Orleans, where both MGM and RKO screened films. While the attendance was not up to expectation, it was noted exhibitors were present from the country as well as the city; and it was hoped there would be more at future screenings.

Indianapolis "Largest"

Largest attendance appeared to have been at Indianapolis' St. Clair Theatre, for the RKO film. Many were from out of town, among the 400 present. MGM held its screening in the afternoon, at the Talbott. Consensus among exhibitors interviewed, favored the trade show practice.

Minneapolis In Favor

Of the 170 who attended the RKO showing at the St. Louis Park Theatre, most seemed to favor trade shows, it was reported. MGM's screening was Tuesday.

"Pleased" in Dallas

Both independent and circuit operators, who attended the RKO and MGM showings in Dallas Monday—about 150 at each screening—appeared pleased, according to observers. Circuit spokesmen said they would cooperate to make the trade shows a success.

Cincinnati Has 30

Exhibitors will come in greater numbers when they become accustomed to the practice of trade showings, it was predicted in Cincinnati, after 30 exhibitors attended the first screenings. Local leaders present at both included Arthur Frudenfeld, RKO division manager; Frank W. Huss, president of Associated Theatres; and Louis Wiethe, circuit operator. The films seemed to please the theatre owners.

Good Atlanta Reception

Approximately 22 representatives of the circuits and larger theatres were at the Atlanta RKO showing. They were reported to have praised the picture. Among those present were five men from the Lucas and Jenkins circuit; and Michael Smith and H. T. Beaudry from the Army camp theatres.

Mixed Reception in Omaha

A "lukewarm" reception was recorded in Omaha, after both screenings. It was said 65 attended the MGM showing; 30 the RKO. Observers predicted Monday attendance would be good; attendance the rest of the week, poor.

Only 16 in New Haven

Sixteen exhibitors, nine of them independent, attended the RKO screening in New Haven. Among them were J. B. Fishman, president of Connecticut Allied; I. J. Hoffman, Warner circuit zone manager.

The majority of those attending were convinced that the trade showings were important and beneficial to them, and Dr. Fishman stated that a member of his company would attend each showing and attempt to grade each picture as to box office appeal, type, booking value in double feature program, and rental. Also members will compare such gradings of pictures shown at Allied meetings for the benefit of those exhibitors who are unable to attend showings.

Detroit Draws 25

The RKO screening in the morning, at Detroit, drew 25 exhibitors, the MGM afternoon screening, 40. Showings were at the Majestic.

Boston Screening at Theatre

RKO's Boston screening was at the Uptown Theatre, with the showings to be shifted to the exchange Friday. Approximately 30 attended. They were said to represent 150 theatres.

Most came from towns within 25 miles. One came from Portsmouth, N. H. Some opinions were that theatremen, generally, were inclined to obtain their news about pictures from existing services.

Few at Milwaukee

Approximately 41 exhibitors saw the RKO showing in Milwaukee. Twelve were from outside the city.

Denver Has 35

Approximately 35 exhibitors were present at the Santa Fe Theatre, Denver, when RKO screened. Half of these were from nearby towns.

St. Louis Draw "Fair"

In St. Louis, the RKO showing drew 30 exhibitors, the MGM, 75. Approximately half of these were from outside the city.

Conflict of opinion among the city's leading exhibitors was reported. Fred Wehrenberg, president of the local MPTOA, and circuit head, was represented as calling the shows a "waste of time, money, and energy" and asserting the existing services (trade publications) are enough to form opinion from. On the other hand, Louis Ansell, also a circuit operator, was reported heavily endorsing trade shows.

Portland Draws from Afar

The Portland, Oregon, showing, in a temperature of 100 degrees, attracted exhibitors from points 125 miles away, reports said. About 20 attended.

Seattle: "Just Previews"

"Just more previews" was the reaction at the RKO showing in Seattle, attended by 25 exhibitors and circuit bookers, among them six showmen from the suburbs. The screening was at the Jewel Box Theatre. Complaints were heard about distances necessary to travel.

100 At Cleveland's

The RKO trade showing at the Warners' Lake Theatre attracted 100 exhibitors. It was said 300 invitations were sent. Some complaints were heard later that notifications did not arrive in time for attendance.

Buffalo's Small

Less than 20 attended the RKO screening at the Bailey Theatre, Buffalo. All were reported from Buffalo proper. About 35 exhibitors attended the MGM display at the Elmwood. Consensus showed little enthusiasm.

Mild at Charlotte

Fifteen exhibitors attended the MGM screening. They were said to represent 146 theatres. It was noted some exhibitors from the immediate area did not attend.

Des Moines Favorable

Reaction among the approximately 60 who attended the Des Moines trade showing was reported favoring the practice, and the picture.

Kansas City Has 50

Almost 50 exhibitors gathered at the RKO show. Some 450 exhibitors are "eligible."

San Francisco's "Wives"

About 75 attended the San Francisco display. Observers said nearly "half of them were wives." Little change in exhibitor routine was foreseen.

New Jersey Allied Studies "Reviewing Service"

Independent New Jersey exhibitors who cannot get to the new consent decree trade showings, or to whom such visitations will be uneconomic, may shortly benefit from a special reviewing service, if the plans of the New Jersey Allied mature.

The organization, in a business meeting concurrent with its annual summer outing, Thursday, July 10th, at West Long Branch, that state, discussed trade showings, with the reported consensus that some exhibitors may not find time or money to visit exchange centers for the screenings; and that, hence, a reviewing service should be instituted. The unit will wait, however, it was said, for several weeks, before taking action.

TWO COMEDIANS BETTER THAN ONE; BUT THREE'S A CROWD STUDIOS FIND

And Hollywood, with an Eye on Abbott-Costello Grosses and Budgets, Starts a Trend to More of the Same

by WILLIAM R. WEAVER
Hollywood Editor

Are two comedians better than one?

Hollywood says yes, pointing to Abbott and Costello as proof positive and plus.

Does it follow, then, that three comedians are better than two?

Hollywood says no, pointing, under pressure, to the Ritz Brothers, inactive, and, with reservations, to the Marx Brothers, whose decision to withdraw from the field while still champions suggests concurrence.

So Hollywood is going in for two-comedian pictures in a big and quite widespread way, starting forthwith and continuing, as per Hollywood custom, until the vein runs out and doubtless a bit beyond.

Far from unmindful of the trend, the sensationally successful Bud Abbott and Lou Costello, whose "Buck Privates" started the cycle, have limited their next year's output of profitable persiflage to three pictures instead of last year's five. Shrewd showmen beneath their buffoonery, Messrs. A & C make no secret of having learned on the long, hard way up to top billing that too much of a good thing is still too much.

Hollywood does not subscribe, however, to the Abbott and Costello strategy of conserving success. It never has.

Laugh Grosses No Joke

Hollywood is interested exclusively in the relationship of Abbott and Costello grosses to the budgetary index of Abbott and Costello pictures and the relationship of both factors to the alleged lack of interest in contemporary product on the part of today's ultimate consumer.

Study of these factors in their fascinating relationship, one to another and all to perpetual problem of how to make pictures that pay, has led Hollywood, as similar processes always do, straight to the conclusion that the answer to "What does the public want?" is "More of the same."

First, foremost and utmost in pursuit of the profits indicated as collectible in exchange for two-comic comedies is the House of RKO-Radio, now headed, production-wise, by Joseph I. Breen, who has added impetus to a move in the direction of double-starred laugh-films already well in progress prior to his advent.

At work on the RKO lot are and have been Victor McLaglen and Edmund Lowe on a one-picture deal, subject to extension, under which they will carry forward the Captain Flagg-Sergeant Quirt variety of humour in which they prospered themselves and exhibitors way back when.

Finishing work on the lot just now are Fibber McGee and Molly, and Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, a pair of pairs of comics, so to speak, whose "Look Who's Laughing" assuredly rates place in the present category.

The Breen addition to the RKO list of entries in the paired-comedian sweepstakes is another one-picture deal, subject to the usual provisions for extension, which will present Bert Lahr and Buddy Ebsen as comics-in-chief.

Warner Brothers' contribution to the double-decker type of comedy is "Navy Blues," now in editing stage and already featured in Warner publicity as important enough to warrant a press junket to Hawaii, come September, if the sea lanes are still open. Co-starred in this are Jack Oakie and Jack Haley, recently of the 20th Century-Fox brand, under which they were last seen in "Great American Broadcast" and "Moon Over Miami," respectively.

Team Benny and Hope

Twentieth Century-Fox's bid for the variety of revenue under discussion is "Great Guns," in which the Messrs. Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy will engage in the type of proceedings the title suggests.

Multiple-starring of comics is, of course, no new step for Paramount to be taking, but it's taking a somewhat longer stride than usual in that direction in response to the currently expressed demand by co-starring Jack Benny and Bob Hope in a picture thus far listed on the studio schedule simply as "Untitled." What with Paramount's own "Road to Singapore" and "Road to Zanzibar" as box office reasons enough for continuing to group its comedians, no Abbott-Costello precedent need by credited with prompting the pairing of Messrs. Hope and Benny, but the attraction is no less accurately an item for your list of twin-motored comedies. You can chalk up, too, another Bing Crosby-Bob Hope number, for later on.

In the talking stage as yet, but well along, is a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer project to co-star Wallace Beery and Marjorie Main, on the nation's screens just now in "Barnacle Bill," in at least one—maybe a number—more pictures possessing the dual attraction value toward which the community is as the moment disposed. Reports on "Barnacle Bill" are being scrutinized accordingly. And there's no questioning the dual-attraction value of William Powell and Myrna Loy in the return to their most successful roles, singly or jointly, in "The Shadow of the Thin Man."

And is Universal napping at its own feast, depending upon Messrs. Abbott and Costello to do the whole job in the multi-comedian field?

It is not.

Olsen and Johnson are at work at Universal in their own version of their own stage hit, "Hellzapoppin," doubtless with nothing but comedians in the cast or allowed on the premises.

New Marquee Names

And Universal, having proved with Messrs. Abbott and Costello to Hollywood's satisfaction that, as stated above, "two comedians are better than one," is by way of setting out to find out whether it may not be true, under certain conditions and contrary to Hollywood's present belief, that "three comedians are better than two."

It's a subtle experiment that Universal is making and the story of it is just slightly "inside," if the term may be employed the vernacular.

Enjoying second billing to Messrs. Abbott and Costello in "Ride 'Em Cowboy," their present undertaking, are the three McMichael brothers.

The three McMichael brothers are the male 75 per cent of the Merry Macs.

The Merry Macs were featured in a Universal picture called "Moonlight in Hawaii," completed prior to "San Antonio Rose," in which they are also featured, as singers, and the boys displayed so much ability in the field of comedy that the studio withheld "Moonlight in Hawaii" and sent "San Antonio Rose" into distribution first with a view toward establishing the young men as marquee personalities.

Universal expects the McMichael brothers, riding the coat-tails of Messrs. Abbott and Costello in "Ride 'Em Cowboy" and contributing comedy as well as a mite of melody to the proceedings, to emerge a trio of comedians able to carry on in their own stellar right. They are under long term contract to the studio—as comedians.

Let's see, he said, looking back and counting, that adds up to a total of some 13 comidies coming up with two or more comedians to the copy, with Columbia, the United Artists group, Republic, Monogram, Producers Releasing Corporation and the independent studios not as yet fallen into line but likely to, momentarily, if this trend turns out to be as contagious as most. Better allow for at least 20 in the near future, and for as many more as the market will absorb—maybe more than that—somewhat later.

LATER, same day: Word from Burbank is that Warners are on the point of pairing Jack Gleason and Jack Carson as a comedy duo in something to be called "You're In the Army Now."

HOW'S BUSINESS?

A Department of Commerce report from Washington, D. C., says income of individuals in the United States during May reached a rate of $86,000,000,000 annually, the highest on record. The upturn reflected not alone the continued upswing in business activity generated by the defense program, the department said, but also a recovery from the temporary slackening of production during the soft coal shutdown in April.

The May total of $6,868,000,000 raised the aggregate payments for the first five months of 1941, to $33,889,000,000, compared to the corresponding period last year of $29,911,000,000. The previous annual record was reached in the boom-year of 1929 when income totaled $82,374,000,000.

More Cut Prices For Service Men

Hundreds of additional theatres, east and west, independent and circuit, large and small, this week established lower admission rates for soldiers, sailors and marines, adding to the thousands of theatres which have already established special rates for the armed forces of the United States.

Pittsburgh prices have been approximately halved at all chain theatres following policy changes for service men at the Warner, Harris Amusement Company, and Loew's Penn and Fulton theatres. Some independents have followed suit and the Drive-In theatre recently announced free admission, except for the tax, for uniformed soldiers. At downtown houses admission will be 20 cents for tickets regularly less than 40 cents and 25 cents for tickets over 40 cents, plus tax.

St. Louis, Houston Cut

All St. Louis first runs have cut prices for service men. Loew's has set a scale of 20 cents to 6 P.M. and 25 cents thereafter. Fanchon and Marco will admit soldiers, and their "dates" for half price. State and federal tax on the full price is charged.

Special tickets for soldiers, good in all houses of the circuits, have been devised at Houston by the Interstate and Loew's chains, at a reduction of 25 per cent. They are sold only in the Army camps and Navy and Coast Guard posts in the area.

Broadway theatres in New York, including the Capitol, Paramount, Palace, Strand, Roxy, State and Criterion have lowered prices for men in service uniforms to 20 cents for scales under 40 cents and 25 cents for tickets over 40 cents. The Globe theatre has cut to 20 cents at all times.

The Astor, on a reserved seat policy, will not change its scale. "Fantasia," at the Broadway, cut prices for service men over a month ago.

In Ohio the Loew Ohio and Broad theatres in Columbus have adopted the 20-25-cent scale, subject to full price state and federal taxes.

Providence, R. I., first run theatres have joined in slashing prices to the 20-25-cent scale for uniformed servicemen. The State, Strand, Majestic, Carlton, and Fays theatres joined the movement and neighborhood theatres are expected to follow suit. The theatres receive heavy patronage from the nearby naval base at Newport.

Loew's Poli at Springfield, Mass., was the first to adopt cutrates for the military services in the New England area this week when it lowered prices to half rate, plus full scale tax.

All six major theatres in Rochester, New York, have cut prices for uniformed soldiers this week. Included in the move are Loew's Rochester, the RKO Palace, Capitol, Temple, Regent and Century theatres. A 20-25-cent scale was generally adopted.

Brower Resigns from Soundies

H. H. Brower, one-time Warner Branch manager in Los Angeles, has resigned his position as general manager of Soundies, Inc., the distributing company for the Roosevelt-Mills 16 mm juke box films. The company's decision to move its headquarters to Chicago prompted Mr. Brower's action.

"Bride of Buddha" Acquired

J. H. Hoffberg has acquired the national distribution rights to "Bride of Buddha," and the picture will be released as a road show attraction, it has been announced.

Buffalo MPTO Meeting Held

Charles Hayman, president of the Western New York MPTOA presided at a meeting of the group held in Buffalo last Tuesday. Mr. Hayman reported on the MPTOA convention in Los Angeles, which he attended, and topics for discussion at the meeting were next season's buying under the consent decree, and chance games and giveaways.

The Buffalo MPTOA reports that the Courier-Express began an advertising campaign, on July 3rd, advising its readers to go to motion pictures for "a Movie Vacation." The theme of the ads, it was said, will be that movies offer relaxation, entertainment and short vacations that will prove extremely beneficial. The ads are being run once a week by the Buffalo newspaper at no cost to exhibitors and the publisher has offered to cooperate "with theatre owners in any way, in order to achieve maximum results" from the campaign.

Services Held For Jerome Jackson

Funeral services were held in New York last Tuesday for Jerome J. Jackson, 41, former managing director of the Warner studio in Teddington, England, who died at the Mount Sinai Hospital, July 14th. Burial was at the Beth David Cemetery, Elmont, Long Island.

Mr. Jackson was chief of Warners' Teddington studio for a year and a half until his resignation in 1938. Prior to that he was an associate producer and assistant to Irving Asher, and before that was with United Artists and Gaumont British.

Paramount Board Reelects Officers

At a special meeting of the board of directors of Paramount Pictures, Inc., held in New York last Thursday, July 10th, all Paramount officers were unanimously reelected for one year, as expected.

The officers are: President, Barney Balaban; chairman of the board, Adolph Zukor; chairman of executive committee, Stanton Griffis; vice-presidents, Y. Frank Freeman, Austin C. Keough, Neil F. Agnew, John W. Hicks, Jr., and Henry Ginsberg; treasurer, Walter B. Cokell; secretary, Austin C. Keough; comptroller, Fred Mohrhardt, and assistant secretaries, Norman Collyer, Jacob H. Karp, Frank Meyer.

Film Censorship Waning

Pennsylvania was the only one of the seven states with political state censoring of motion pictures where "substantial difficulties" arose in such censoring during the past year, according to the annual report of the American Civil Liberties Union, in New York. Such difficulties were described as "traditional in recent years" in Pennsylvania.

The Penn state censor board banned "The Ramparts We Watch," March of Time, on the grounds that it was "pro-Hitler." "World in Flames," produced by Paramount, was another "barred in Pennsylvania on the ground that it had a "tendency to corrupt and debase morals." "Although," the report said, "the film was said to have been approved by both President Roosevelt and Wendell L. Willkie. Threat of court proceedings removed the ban."

Michigan Theatres In Defense Pledge

The Michigan film industry at a recent meeting pledged unanimous support to the Motion Picture Committee Cooperating for National Defense, and promised that national defense reels would be shown and handled throughout the state.

The meeting was in charge of Frank J. Downey, MGM, and state chairman of the committee. Edward C. Beatty, president of the Butterfield theatres and Carl W. Buermele, general manager for Cooperative theatres, represented the theatre division. Of the 521 theatres contacted 493 have thus far returned their pledges, signifying their intentions of showing the reels.

The following committees were set up at the meeting:

CONTACT; Lester Sturm, 20th Century-Fox chairman; John F. Howard, Paramount; Fred North, Warners; William Flemion, PRC;

SCREENING; James F. Sharkey, RKO, chairman; Eddie Heiber, Universal, Moe Dudelson, United Artists;

PUBLICITY; Warren A. Slee, MGM, chairman; Jack Saxe, Monogram, Clare Townsend, Columbia, Sam Sepolwin, Republic;

BOOKING; Harry Lenison, RKO, chairman; Gil Becker, MGM;

Attorney Charges Bioff Intimidated Witnesses

Willie Bioff's arrest was demanded this week by a Coast attorney, on the reported grounds he had allegedly intimidated "witnesses"—the inference being that these witnesses were those contemplated by the Government, in its pending extortion case against the West Coast IATSE leader, and that such intimidation ran athwart the instructions of Federal Judge Knox, in New York several weeks ago, that threatening of witnesses by Bioff would be punished.

The Coast attorney mentioned is George Bodle, acting for the Screen Cartoonists Guild, now striking against the Disney studio. At the office of United States District Attorney Mathias Correa, in New York, it was intimated no action would be taken unless proof were submitted that the persons affected in the alleged molestation were involved in the Bioff-Browne extortion case.

The Guild charges Bioff with entering Disney-Guild negotiations as a "strike-breaker" and having engineered defalcation from strikers' ranks, of several American Federation of Labor craft unions.

Paris Convicts Pathé Chief

Press wire services from Vichy, France, reported last weekend that the "occupied" French Government had announced that Bernard Nathan had been convicted by a Paris court for responsibility in the bankruptcy of the Pathé-Nathan film interests. He was sentenced to five years in prison, ten years of forced residence, the loss of citizenship rights and fined 3,000 gold francs. An unusual feature of the sentence was that he was deprived of his authority as head of his family.

Simon Cerf, company manager, received a similar sentence as an accomplice.

A statement by Sidney R. Kent

We in 20th Century-Fox face the new season with complete confidence.

We have no patience with the defeatism and confusion which seem to be blanketing this industry. True, there is no precedent in history for the difficulties that beset everybody; but there has been, nevertheless, no change in the essential things which make up our business.

We in 20th Century-Fox have never forgotten these fundamental principles, and we are confident that if we go forward into the new year observing these basic requirements many of our present problems will disappear.

Contained in this announcement is a statement by Mr. Darryl F. Zanuck on our production plans. You should read it carefully as an outline of things to come. You will note that we have set our plans so that we shall have a maximum of flexibility in our producing operations. In this changing world we must be in a position to take advantage of new conditions as they arise.

Distribution next season will be governed by the terms of the Consent Decree. While this imposes new conditions on our sales operations, it should be obvious to all that, if exhibitors are to continue to receive good pictures, they must cooperate with distribution to the end that pictures shall be sold as extensively as possible and at a price that is fair. From exhibitors we shall expect and demand a fair price for our product.

Just as exhibitors expect us to produce the best pictures of which we are capable, so have we every right to expect our customers to give to our pictures a promotional support which will insure them proper public recognition.

This is the platform on which we are entering the new season. Far from being timorous or doubtful, we know precisely what we are doing, and we are going to do it with confidence that our efforts will be rewarded both by our customers and by the public, which supports us both.

President
20th Century-Fox Film Corporation

Six months ago, in conference with Sidney Kent and Joseph M. Schenck, we realized that in the coming year any film company that wished to progress and keep abreast of the times would have to make a more strenuous effort than ever before in the history of the industry.

To this end we have signed additional manpower, both producers and directors, and have fortified our lineup of stars and players. We realize that each new film must stand on its own feet as an attraction to theatre-goers. For six months we have worked toward this goal with the signing of distinguished personalities, some of whom are listed on the following pages. More will be added because 20th Century-Fox will leave no stone unturned to assure for itself and its customers the greatest product possible.

Thus, despite theatre conditions, despite outside competition, despite the war—20th Century-Fox marches on—greater and stronger than ever!

46 OF THE 95 ARBITRATION CASES FILED TO DATE HAVE BEEN SETTLED

22 Awards Entered, 24 Other Cases Settled or Withdrawn; Four Boards Have Had No Cases; New York Had Most

Arbitration of motion picture disputes under the terms of the New York consent decree neared the end of the first half year of operation this week with a record of 95 cases filed in 28 of the 32 tribunals of American Arbitration Association during the first five and a half months. Complaints were restricted to "some run" and "clearance" actions under Sections VI and VIII of the decree. Not until September 1st, when "new order" selling becomes operative will specific run, and other grievances be subject to arbitration. Cases to July 15th are detailed starting on page 49. Wednesday four more awards and one new case were reported.

Although the number of cases entered to then at the rate of about 19 a month, did not equal the flood of actions which many circles forecast in January both exhibition and distribution have expressed themselves as generally satisfied with the operation of the new system of adjusting grievances. Although a few cases have dragged on for several months, most have been brought to hearing and disposed of within 90 days.

22 Awards Entered

During the period 22 awards have been entered by arbitrators in all sections of the country. Twelve of the complaints so decided were dismissed while eight awards found for the complaining exhibitor, granting either some run, or a reduced clearance. In two cases at Washington and Denver the award was split, granting part of the petition and denying other sections. Three of the dismissals were appealed by exhibitors.

The Appeals Board upheld the arbitrator in its first ruling on the Ken theatre (Chicago No. 1) complaint while appeals from Dallas and Washington are still pending.

The settlements, totaling 23 on July 15th, topped the number of decisions by one and were hailed generally as a sign of increasingly conciliatory relations between exhibition and distribution. Almost half of the withdrawals occurred before the cases reached a formal hearing. Only in one case was an agreement reached in the form of a formal consent dismissal, registered as an arbitrator's award.

Four tribunals, Des Moines, Indianapolis, Omaha and Seattle have as yet received no complaints. St. Louis, Salt Lake, Portland, Oklahoma City, New Orleans, Minneapolis, Memphis and Cleveland are currently inactive, with all cases submitted to their tribunals either withdrawn or decided. New York leads all offices with a total of seventeen cases on file.

Following the postponement of Pittsburgh's second case, the clearance complaint of David Green, operator of the Beacon theatre, from June 23d until December 8, 1941, it was revealed that cases involving both clearance and specific run may be continued over until after Section XI of the decree, dealing with particular run, becomes effective in September. According to the New York office of the AAA, Samuel Pringle, arbitrator of the Pittsburgh complaint, ruled that specific run, as well as clearance was involved and set the hearing back.

It is held also that complaints filed in two parts may be postponed until after September. Although there has been no instance of it to date, it is held that a clearance section could be heard now, and the run demand heard later. In cases where clearance has been denied, or termed a request for run, this continuation would save exhibitors the cost of filing a new action in September, it is said.

Four New Awards

The Forest Theatre Corporation at New Haven won its complaint in the first Connecticut arbitration case at New Haven on Monday when Frederick H. Wiggin, arbitrator, ordered the "Big 5" distributors to reduce from 14 to seven days the clearance held by the Rivoli, West Haven, over the Forest.

Mr. Wiggin ruled that the 14 day margin held by the Rivoli, built in 1939, over the older Forest is "unreasonable" within the scope of Section VIII of the consent decree and ordered an immediate cut to seven days. Although admitting the Rivoli was newer and in a better location he upheld the prior establishment of the Forest. He said that the award adequately reflects the Rivoli's claim to preference and continued clearance over the Forest.

"The force of the argument that the Rivoli is entitled to recognition because it pays higher rentals," Mr. Wiggin stated, "would have operated with more weight if it had been demonstrated whether the difference in rentals was

Boston Arbitrator Cites Decision of Defunct NRA as Basis for Clearance

The bones of the "Blue Eagle" were dug up in Boston Monday as John A. Daly, arbitrator, cited a ruling of the long dead Motion Picture Code Authority as the basis of a "fair and reasonable" clearance.

His decision, the third filed with the Boston tribunal, found in favor of the Big Five defendants, dismissing the clearance case of the Garboose Brothers of Athol, Mass. Their complaint, asking no clearance at all, was the second Boston Case.

The complainants, Abraham, Samuel and Jacob Garbose, operators of the York and Capitol theatres in Athol, in a complaint filed February 25, 1941, alleged that the present clearance was unfair and asked that they be allowed to exhibit pictures on national release date. The York is operated continuously, while the Capitol is operated on weekends only.

In summing up the complaint, Mr. Daly pointed out that at present pictures are shown in Athol and Gardner, Mass., after the first run showing in Boston and after showing in Fitchburg, Mass.

"I find," the arbitrator reported, "that, as a result of the contracts governing the exhibition of pictures in Fitchburg, Gardner and Athol, there is in substance a clearance granted in favor of Fitchburg over Athol and Gardner and that there is no clearance as between Athol and Gardner.

"The situation of clearance in favor of Fitchburg over Gardner has existed since 1934. At that time, there was in existence the code authority of the Motion Picture Industry under the so-called NRA. A controversy arose before the Code Authority concerning clearance as between Fitchburg and Gardner, and on November 22, 1934, the Code Authority rendered a decision between the then operators of the Orpheum and Uptown theatres in Gardner and the Maine and New Hampshire theatres to the effect that Fitchburg was entitled to clearance over Gardner and that seven days maximum clearance between the two towns was reasonable. Since that time, the practice has been to give Fitchburg clearance over Gardner and to give no preference or clearance as between Gardner and Athol".

It was noted that the competitor, George A. Giles, plays pictures late to get advantage of advertising in the larger centres. The Garbose brothers prefer to play the pictures at the earliest time.

"I find," the arbitrator summed up, "that there is no considerable amount of patronage drawn from one city, or from the surrounding competitive area, to the other because of the time in which the pictures are shown in one or the other place. Neither Gardner nor Athol has national release date. Were either to have national release date, to the exclusion of the other, I find that it is highly probable, if not absolutely certain, that the one playing national release date would attract a considerable patronage which would otherwise remain in the other city. I find that it is reasonable that clearance shall exist in Fitchburg as against Gardner and Athol, and I therefore find that the present clearance in the Fitchburg, Gardner and Athol area is reasonable."

Costs were assessed against the complainants.

DECISIONS IN ALBANY, LOS ANGELES

the cause or the effect of the clearance. Possibly it is partly cause and partly effect, but the evidence does not satisfactorily demonstrate it. If the clearance is the cause of the difference and if the difference ought, in and of itself, to prevent a change of clearance, then on the circumstances of this case clearance could never be modified while the difference lasted, and this in my opinion is a result not contemplated by the decree."

With regard to advertising, upon which respondents and interested parties laid great stress, the arbitrator found that the Forest "will have to change its method of advertising in order to avoid breach of the contract regulations regarding advertising during a prior run."

New York

Day and date booking was granted Alex Papayanakos on Tuesday for his American theatre, Canton, N. Y. by Morton J. Hall, arbitrator in the first two Albany cases. He ruled that the 14 day margin granted by RKO, in Case One and Warners, in Case Two to Schines Strand at Ogdensburg, 20 miles distant, is unreasonable. Costs were assessed against the distributors. Double bills, chance games and giveaways were cited against the Strand in the arbitrator's analysis.

At New York, following agreement of all parties, the clearance complaint of John Carbone, operator of the Temple theatre at Union City, N. J., was withdrawn Thursday. The case was the tribunal's tenth. Mr. Carbone's complaint sought reduction of the 10 day clearance of the Summit and Roosevelt theatres in Union City to day and date.

New York's tribunal, by far the most active in the country, received its 17th case on Monday when the Keyport Theatre Company, operator of the Strand at Keyport, N. J., filed a clearance action against Warners, 20th Century-Fox, RKO and Paramount.

David Snaper, head of the Snaper Circuit which controls the Keyport, asked that the 12 day clearance held by Asbury Park first run houses be reduced. Last week a similar complaint, New York Case No. 16, was filed by the Liberty-Freehold Theatre Corp., also operated by Mr. Snaper.

Los Angeles

Herbert Cameron dismissed the final count of the Los Angeles clearance complaint of O. W. Lewis, operating the Mission Playhouse at San Gabriel after ruling that the arbitrator cannot rezone booking areas. Paramount, MGM, and Loew's were told that clearance of the Alhambra and Garfield theatres, Alhambra over the Rosemeal and Garvey theatres shall be seven days after the Mission run. Costs were shared by complainant, distributors and the intervening Edwards, United West Coast and Alhambra Amusement Co. circuits.

The fourth Chicago complaint filed last week against Balaban and Katz circuit by Mort D. and Frank Goldberg, operators of the Portage theatre, this week appeared likely to raise the question of double features in an arbitration issue for the first time.

Several other unusual clauses were incorporated in the briefs filed by the attorneys, Sabath, Perlman, Goodman and Rein, representing the Portage, some of which are said to be the first of their kind ever put in a claim to any arbitration board.

Petitioner claims that the Portage was built in 1919-1920 and that the respondent houses, the B&K Gateway, Belpark and Will Rogers, were constructed in the years 1925, 1930 and 1936, and that the facilities and seating capacity being equal, and the Portage being the first theatre in the community, it was entitled to first choice of releases in the vicinity. It also charges distributors showed favoritism in selling product and refused to sell the Portage until they had satisfied the demands of the Balaban & Katz Corporation with respect to the respondent theatres.

The petition further said that during the years of 1934-35-36 the Portage theatre ran a single feature program but that since B & K started a double feature policy commencing with the 1937-38 season distributors had taken away such pictures as were formerly sold to the Portage, thereby devaluating the product that the Portage is now able to obtain in proper running time, and forced the latter to pursue a double feature policy against their wishes.

Balaban & Katz will fight the suit and have retained the firm of Spitz and Adcock as legal counselors.

Richard F. Kuhns, Chicago attorney will arbitrate the clearance demand of James Steininger's Lawn theatre. Hearings start July 29th.

Washington

Hearings at Washington on the two complaints of L. W. Lea, Danville, Va., operator, Case No. 4 and 5, ended July 10th after three sessions. Judge Bolitha J. Laws, arbitrator, took briefs under advisement.

Testimony at the hearings contered on efforts by Abram F. Myers, national counsel of Allied Theatre Owners, and Mr. Lea's attorney to refute distributor statements that the Lea and Schoolfield theatres, seeking some run and clearance awards, were inferior to the Wilby and Kincey, Danville Enterprises, and S. W. Craver houses, interested parties in the case. Mr. Myers also charged that all five consenting companies had forced the Lea houses to run double bills and cut prices by giving them inferior product.

Efforts were made to support and deny claims as to the relative superiority of equipment and location of the several theatres involved. Photographic evidence was accepted by the arbitrator. A number of pictures of the Lea houses and other Danville theatres were entered into the record.

Both H. F. Kincey and Robert Wilby were called to the stand by their attorney, Thomas Varnum, to testify that their houses are among the newest and best equipped in the area and are thereby entitled to distributor preference. Mr. Wilby denied, however, that distributor affiliation resulted in preferential treatment or unfair restriction of competition. Rudolph Berger, Washington manager for MGM, denied that he had warned Mr. Lea that Wilby and Kincey planned to "take over Danville" and that he had restricted bookings for the Lea or Schoolfield. John Casky, attorney for Fox, presented witnesses to state that projection and other facilities in the Lea houses were not equal to competitive installations.

San Francisco

Roger Sherman, San Francisco attorney, has been named by the AAA to arbitrate the clearance complaint of A. C. Karsky of Oakland against RKO, Warners and 20th Century-Fox, the tribunal's second complaint. Mr. Sherman was appointed by the AAA after the parties had been unable to reach an agreement on arbitrators listed on the local panel. The case involves Oakland first run theatres and the Fox West Coast and Golden State circuits, who intervened.

New Haven

The dean of the Yale University Law School, A. G. Gulliver, will arbitrate New Haven's second complaint, clearance action of the Saybrook (Conn.) Theatre against MGM, RKO, and Warners. Hearings will start July 22nd.

In the third New Haven case Warners have asked to intervene for the Strand, Embassy and Palace theatres, New Britain, in the complaint of Fred Quatrano. He seeks a 7-day clearance only by New Britain theatres over his New Newington theatre, now under construction for August opening.

Cincinnati

Hearing of F. W. Rowlands, Columbus, O., circuit operator's clearance complaint against the five consenting companies asking adjustment of the seven-day clearance which Neth's Markham holds over his Parsons, scheduled for July 10, before arbitrator Anthony B. Dunlap, has been postponed until August 5th. Postponement was necessitated by absence from the city of some of the defendants.

Milwaukee

Milwaukee's second arbitration case in which Lee Macklin, operator of the Grand theatre in New London, Wis., charges the Big Five with giving unreasonable clearance to the Rio and Appleton theatres, Appleton, Wis., has had its fourth postponement, this time from July 17th to July 23d. The latest postponement was granted at the request of J. H. Lorentz, branch manager for 20th Century-Fox, who on the hearing date was attending the company's convention.

Boston

The fourth case filed in Boston by the Waltham Amusement Company, operating the Grand at Waltham, Mass., against the Big Five on a clearance had a one-day hearing Thursday before arbitrator William Harold Hitchcock. Both parties waived the one-hour argument and briefs will be filed within 10 days. No date has been set on the fifth case brought by the Taunton Amusement Company, operated by the same parties. The complaint is similar but the complainant preferred the cases be tried separately. Mr. Hitchcock has also been appointed arbitrator in this case.

A-Mike Vogel Addresses Advertising Club

Showmanship as applied to theatre promotion is geared to sell merchandise as well as theatre tickets. This was the theme of a talk made by A-Mike Vogel, chairman of Motion Picture Herald's Managers Round Table, before the Staten Island Advertising Club, on Tuesday. Mr. Vogel stressed that, though the term was usually applied to theatre operation, showmanship could be translated into increased sales by the progressive businessman who saw the possibilities of adapting the wide publicity given Hollywood stars and stories to the promotion of his own wares. This could be done, he noted, by working closely with the theatremen in mutually profitable campaigns.

The meeting, attended by over 100, also included representatives of various Staten Island theatre circuits. Mr. Vogel's appearance was arranged by Harry Black, general manager, and Edgar Goth, publicity director, of the Fabian Staten Island theatres.

"Comerford Day" Held

"Comerford Day" was held Thursday at the Boys' Club-Big Brothers Camp, near Dunn Lake, in the vicinity of Scranton, Pa. It is an annual event, inaugurated by the late M. E. Comerford, founder of the circuit of that name.

FILM ARBITRATION NEVER INTENDED AS A LEGAL PLAYGROUND: RICHEY

MGM Executive Sees Need for System Like That Now in Operation; Says Selling Policies Are Completely Revised

With the assertion that "arbitration was never intended as a legal playground," Henderson M. Richey, exhibitor contact for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, urged exhibitors to use the machinery of the consent decree as the "most speedy and inexpensive method of adjusting differences," short of direct conciliation, in an address to the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Virginia, meeting on Tuesday and Wednesday at Old Point Comfort, Va. Mr. Richey delivered what appeared to be one of the frankest and most extensive analyses of the motion picture arbitration system yet uttered publicly by a spokesman of a consenting distributor.

"We urge you to use arbitration rather than carry around a complaint on your chest, unadjusted. That's what arbitration is there for, "Mr. Richey said. He discussed also changed methods in selling under the consent decree, cooperative institutional advertising and attendance.

While expressing the belief that most contract difficulties could be readily adjusted by conference between exhibitor and branch manager, Mr. Richey admitted that from approximately 5,000,000 annual industry transactions situations are bound to arise where an outside settlement is necessary. Clearance situations, in particular, are likely to require mediation by a third, disinterested party, he noted.

"Too Seldom Talked Over"

"Try conciliation first: if that fails use the American Arbitration Association" Mr. Richey told the Old Dominion theatre men.

"Don't be afraid of the arbitration in the business, because the set up is clean and right and offers a possibility of adjusting some of the complaints that have been too often voiced in front of the film building and too seldom talked over between the interested parties," he said.

Mr. Richey paid tribute to the administration of the arbitration system set up in the consent decree approved by Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard at New York. All branches of the industry are agreed, he said, that the "American Arbitration Association has once and for all eliminated the accusation that it is just a 'kangaroo court' because it is really amazing the type of men that they have been able to secure to act as arbitrators and to act as secretaries of the arbitration tribunals."

An exhibitor in resorting to arbitration, he said, should not be subject to unreasonable expense in order to gain a hearing on his case. Mr. Richey warned against letting the system become a "legal playground," with long-drawn proceedings and complicated arguments. He expressed hope that future hearings would be even shorter than in the complaints that have already been heard.

"Frankly, I believe that some of the proceedings to date have been a little extra legal and we are hopeful that this early flaw, if it may be called such, in the practical working out of arbitration for the industry, will soon be eliminated, he told convention delegates. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, the spokesman said, "hopes it will not be necessary to send lawyers into these proceedings very often."

MGM field representatives, he indicated, will present the company's side of arbitration cases as frequently as possible, in line with the principle that arbitration should be confined to men within the industry, "who understand the proceedings and who can, we believe, adequately present them to the neutral man for his decision."

One of the most frequently voiced exhibitor complaints over arbitration to date has been the excessive legality of some hearings. Presence of delegations of home-office legal "brains" at several cases has been attacked by several exhibitor organizations.

While predicting that modifications in the structure of the consent decree will be necessary after it has been in operation for a time, Mr. Richey said that there could be no quarrel with, or need to revise, the theory that adjusting differences within the industry is the "only plan that will accomplish the greatest good for the greatest number."

All of his company's selling plans and policies have been revamped to meet the decree, in letter and spirit, acording to Mr. Richey. He noted that all MGM employes had been ordered to follow strictly rules and regulations of the new order. Whether the decree "lasts for a year or forever," it will not affect MGM's "Friendly Company" policy, he said.

Exhibitors' Responsibility

Responsibility for the success of the decree is divided, Mr. Richey warned the Virginia exhibitors. He expressed a conviction that theatre owners were also bound to utilize its "rules of the game" and would benefit in more profitable operations and amicable relations with distribution thereby. Particularly he urged exhibitors to avail themselves of the opportunity to preview product at the tradeshows before buying. If past criticism against so-called blind selling has been justified, distributors are bound to tradeshow pictures for the exhibitor as conveniently as possible, and he is bound to see them, according to Mr. Richey.

"Attend not only the trade showings we are holding but the trade showings that are being held by other companies" he said.

Although denying that there has been the boxoffice slump claimed in some quarters Mr. Richey did express the belief that the industry had not received the share of business from defense expenditure as predicted. Ailments in the film business are more deep-seated than double bills, giveaways, or other frequently cited causes he said.

The present box-office situation started eight or ten years ago, according to Mr. Richey, and progressed with the gradual reduction of the work week. Today the 35 to 40 hour five day work week has made the American public more recreation conscious he said. Wage earners have found more time for sports, hobbies, social activity, and other leisure pursuits in place of attendance at motion pictures. The day has passed when the public, which worked longer hours, could find the only amusement that was convenient and not too tiring at the motion pictures.

The industry, generally, has failed to keep pace with this change, Mr. Richey said. Many theatres have continued to act as utilities, which the public will continue, as always, to visit day after day. The situation however has changed and today theatres must actively sell themselves, and motion picture entertainment to the public, in competition with other recreations, he advised.

In addition to pre-selling specific pictures through advertising and promotion the industry must develop institutional campaigns to "make the public motion picture conscious," he said.

One of the most effective methods of doing this, Mr. Richey said, is the recent newspaper campaign of institutional copy, such as launched by the Philadelphia Bulletin (see MOTION PICTURE HERALD, July 5, pages 28 and 37) boasting "movie vacations."

"I think that the newspapers of the United States who many times in the past have been criticised because some of their reviewers were, in the opinion of the industry, too severe in their critical analysis of product, deserve a great big pat on the back for this constructive piece of journalistic promotion, and there isn't any question about it, it's going to help a great deal, coming as it does from a more or less outside and neutral source," Mr. Richey declared.

Urges Local Exploitation

To institutional advertising, each theatre man, on every picture, Mr. Richey urged, should contribute at least one exploitation plan which will both boost the specific picture and remind the public of the entertainment value of films as a whole.

Further, a solid front must be presented to the public.

He urged the Virginia exhibitors to follow the system, successfully practiced by the MGM field staff, of joining local civic, fraternal and luncheon clubs to represent the motion picture in community life and to speak in its behalf. Thus, he said, when public groups discuss motion pictures, the industry may be represented by men able to give a constructive picture of the business.

Closer contact between the elements of the motion picture industry, exhibition, distribution and production means better business, Mr. Richey observed. In this all can play a part he said.

Francis S. Harmon, coordinator of the motion picture national defense committee told the Virginia theatremen of the committee's production of shorts and trailers on national defense. He urged all exhibitors to join the defense committee and asked for suggestions to expedite the distribution of the free defense pictures.

Julian Brylawski, president of the District of Columbia Theatre Owners also was a guest of the Virginia exhibitors. He told of his visits to Army camps in the East and Middle West and advised theatre men that he could not see where the camp theatres directly competed with motion picture operators. Chief complaint from camps was the age of films, he said.

Colonel Robert Barton, association counsel, addressed the meeting about arbitration proceedings and cautioned the members who had cases before the Arbitration Board to stick to their local legal minds instead of hiring the high price lawyers. He said that to date the average case has only cost the exhibitor about $40.

T PICTURE . . . but don't take our word for it!

ead this "sneak" preview from a Theatre manager!

"Perfection! Rating A-plus."

"Tonight we previewed Paramount's "HOLD BACK THE DAWN." Produced by Arthur Hornblow, Jr., and directed by Mitchell Leisen. The running time was 126 minutes and the cast featured Charles Boyer, Olivia DeHavilland, Paulette Goddard, Victor Francen and Walter Abel.

"The only word for this picture is PERFECTION. Story, direction, acting, photography, continuity, it's all perfect and beyond criticism. A down to earth story with a Los Angeles—Tiajuana locale, this picture tells a tale that's gripping in excitement and beautiful romance.

"The principals ideally cast were never seen to better advantage. Boyer and DeHavilland's love scenes were so realistic and their dialogue so touching, that the audiences were simply wrapped up in each situation.

"Comment cards were superfluous and unnecessary. There wasn't a single one that wasn't a rave. Everyone connected with the picture coming in for complimentary mention. Paulette Goddard was immense in a part made to order for her, and Walter Abel's droll humor was injected at the right time.

"It's a triumph for Mitchell Leisen and will undoubtedly prove a box office bet."

Yours very truly,

Program Will Be Varied to Meet Conditions under Decree Selling, Wobber Tells Delegates at Los Angeles Meeting

Twentieth Century-Fox plans to release approximately 52 feature pictures in 1941-42, it was announced in Los Angeles Wednesday by Herman Wobber, general manager of distribution, at the company's annual sales convention which opened at the Ambassador Hotel. The company also will release 52 one-reel films and 104 issues of Movietone News.

"Distribution of the new season's pictures will be governed by the terms of the consent decree, and the selling system will be kept flexible to meet varying situations," Mr. Wobber emphasized, adding "that the company had deliberately set its plans to insure maximum flexibility in production operations in order to be in a position to take advantage of changing world conditions."

GOLDWYN SEES END OF DOUBLES SOON

Samuel Goldwyn, in Hollywood this week, predicted that "under the new order" double features would disappear from the country within one year. This is the first time, it is believed, the producer, arch-foe of doubles, has set a time limit for their extinction.

As adjournment of the Missouri Legislature July 12 doomed the bill aimed at eliminating multiple and triple features, Fanchon & Marco, in St. Louis, inaugurated a policy that was one of the chief features of the measure last week. The bill, sponsored by the Better Films Council of Greater St. Louis, provided that a 15-minute intermission be held between each performance F & M has introduced five-minute intermissions at its four major run houses in St. Louis—Ambassador, Missouri, Fox and St. Louis. During these five minutes, the house lights are brought up and the patrons are advised to visit the theatre's candy counter.

20th-Fox to Sell 52 Under Decree For '41-'42 Season

1941-42 was announced by Charles E. McCarthy, director of publicity and advertising. The budget is expected to reach $2,000,000 figure.

Mr. McCarthy said that never before has promotion of pictures been as important as it will be next season under the consent decree operation.

"More advertising effort will be put behind the first showings of pictures in the company's 30 exchange centers than ever before," Mr. McCarthy said. "Only aggressive selling, both on the part of the film companies and exhibitors alike, will bring results at the box-office in these changing times. Twentieth Century-Fox has reorganized its publicity, advertising and promotion set-up to meet these new conditions. Every possible medium of advertising and publicity will be utilized.

"In order to facilitate the handling of the increased advertising and to assist exhibitors the company has organized a new field promotion department to augment its present advertising and publicity department. Special field men will work in collaboration with exhibitors."

At the opening session, Herman Wobber delivered the opening address and introduced Hermann Place, recently elected chairman of the executive committee. Addresses also were made by Irving Maas, Ben Miggins and C. V. Hake of the foreign department, following which the delegates assembled in the Ambassador Theatre to see "Sun Valley Serenade," the Sonja Henie film.

The Wednesday afternoon session opened with an address by Joseph M. Schenck, who was followed by Darryl F. Zanuck. Mr. Zanuck talked about the forthcoming season's product, and introduced studio talent.

Boosts Young Players

"Continuing the drive to build up a roster of younger players with potential star possibilities," Mr. Zanuck told delegates that "the company has assembled the strongest lineup of young players in its history."

"We realize," he said, "that any film company that wishes to progress and keep abreast of the times must make a more strenuous effort than ever before. To this end we have signed additional manpower, both producers and directors, and have fortified our lineup of stars and players."

On Wednesday evening, there was a screening of the Jack Benny-Kay Francis film, "Charley's Aunt," at the Huntington Park Theatre.

The program for Thursday started with a news and short subjects session, during which there were addresses by Truman H. Talley, vice president and producer of Movietone News, and his Movietonews staff, W. J. Clark, short subject sales manager, and Paul Terry, producer of Terrytoons.

William Sussman, eastern division manager, and William Kupper, western division manager, delivered addresses, and M. A. Levy, chairman of the 1940-41 S. R. Kent Drive, made the distribution of prizes to winners in the Drive. The morning session ended with a screening of "Wild Geese Calling," the Henry Fonda-Joan Bennett co-starring film, at the Ambassador Theatre.

The short subject program for 1941-42 season, including 52 one-reel films and 104 issues of Movietone News, was outlined by Truman Talley, vice president and producer of Movietone News and his staff. While the schedule will be approximately the same as it was last season, Mr. Talley pointed out that the short subject set-up will be organized to meet any new demands that may result from changes in exhibition brought on by consent decree selling.

The new short subject program will be divided into two groups. One will consist of 26 one-reelers included in the following series: "Magic Carpet of Movietone," "Adventures of A Cameraman," Ed Thorgersen's "Sportsreel" and "The World Today."

Paul Terry, producer of Terry-Toons, told the delegates that the use of color will be increased, with more than fifty percent of the program being photographed in color. The staff of animators at the Terry-Toon studio in New Rochelle, N. Y. has been increased, Mr. Terry announced.

Other members of Truman Talley's staff who addressed the convention today were: Edmund Reek, Jack Darrock, Russell Muth, Tony Muto and Ed Thorgersen.

Outline Selling Policy

Thursday afternoon's session was devoted to addresses on the company's sales policy. Mr. Wobber opened the session with a general explanation of the company's plans and policies. He was followed by Mr. McCarthy. Harry Brand, studio director of publicity, also spoke on plans to publicize pictures while in production. William C. Gehring, central division manager, also delivered an address. Thursday evening saw a screening of the color film, "Belle Starr," at the Ambassador Theatre.

Friday morning the delegates were to see a screening of rushes of "A Yank in the R.A.F.," "Week-End in Havana" and "How Green Was My Valley," all in production. Following the screening, they were to hear addresses by Felix A. Jenkins, Fred Pride and John Caskey, explaining the legal angles of the consent decree and its anticipated effect on the company's sale policy. Theatre operations were to be the theme of addresses by Spyros Skouras and Charles Skouras. The afternoon session was to be devoted to a visit to the studio, during which time delegates were to watch the shooting of pictures and meet stars working on the lot.

With the convention officially closing after the Friday afternoon visit to the studio, delegates were to leave Los Angeles Saturday, July 19th, to return to their home cities.

Presentation of checks to prize-winners in the "S. R. Kent Sales Drive" for 1940-41 were made by District Manager M. A. Levy, leader of the Drive. First prize went to Sam N. Wheeler's Washington exchange. Charles L. Walker of the Salt Lake City exchange won first prize in the international group.

A check was presented to Edgar Moss, Atlantic district manager, whose district finished the Drive in first place.

Following the presentation, Mr. Levy announced that the usual Kent Drive would not be held this year because of anticipated changes in selling under the consent decree.

NEWSPAPERS ASK SUNDAY SHOWS

Since Governor Paul B. Johnson of Mississippi recently went on record as opposed to continuance of the state's ancient blue laws that keep hundreds of theatres closed on Sunday, except on the Gulf Coast where the law has never been upheld, daily and weekly newspapers of the Magnolia commonwealth have begun a drive to have the laws repealed. Governor Johnson promises to modify the laws so as to permit Sunday movies during the emergency.

Showmanship Aids for New Releases; More 'York' Dates

There were few signs of a slackening of promotional efforts in behalf of new releases as the 1940-41 season entered its final six weeks. Premieres in Salt Lake City, Ottawa, and a California wine cellar (see page 80) heralded new releases, and road show promotion was continued extensively in behalf of other pictures.

To open the "Parson of Panamint" at Salt Lake City last weekend Paramount staged a four-day jubilee attended by stars, production executives and a long roster of Utah notables, led by Mayor Ab Jenkins of Salt Lake City. Harry Sherman, producer, and Charles Ruggles, Philip Terry, Patricia Morison, Susan Peters and Peter B. Kyne, author of the story led the Hollywood delegation. Opening festivities included network broadcasts, a klieg-light premiere at the Utah theatre, and a series of civic receptions.

From Salt Lake City Mr. Sherman went to Cheyenne, Wyo., to don boots and chaps in the "Frontier Days" festival on July 17th and sponsor a special showing of the picture after the annual Frontier Day rodeo.

Set "York" Road Dates

Following the appointment of Frank Seltzer by Warner Brothers to the post of special exploitation man for "Sergeant York," Gradwell L. Sears, sales manager, and S. Charles Einfeld, advertising and publicity chief, announced new two-a-day engagements of the Gary Cooper picture produced by Jesse L. Lasky.

Tentative plans call for screening of "York" in Chicago, Washington, Nashville, Cleveland, Atlantic City, Philadelphia, Detroit and Boston at an early date on a road show basis. The Chicago engagement will open during the Warner convention in that city on July 28th. The Nashville opening will be deferred until August 31st when Milo S. Warner, national commander of the American Legion, will be in the Tennessee city.

At New York business at the Astor theatre was reported to have reached the house's capacity of $25,000 at a two-a-day, $2.20 top. Advance sales have reached eight weeks with cash futures reaching $16,000 during the first week.

New York promotion has featured sponsorship of special showings by American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and other veteran organizations. Following the pattern of the "Meet John Doe" campaign Warners are again advertising extensively on car cards in the New York subways, where "Sergeant York" has been named picture of the month by the New York Subways Advertising Company on its new "feature" cards.

"Prime Minister" in Ottawa

The Canadian Government has approved Warner Brothers' plans to open "The Prime Minister" at Ottawa on August 13th for the benefit of the Queen's Canadian Fund. The picture, with John Gielgud and Diana Wynyard, is the first feature completed under bombfire at the Warner Teddington studio.

Guests of honor at the premiere will be Princess Alice, a granddaughter of Queen Victoria and the wife of the Earl of Athlone, Governor-General of Canada, Prime Minister Mackenzie King. Members of the Canadian Cabinet and Parliament and of the American diplomatic corps in Canada will attend the premiere, in Ottawa's Capitol Theatre.

WARNER BROTHERS, 20TH-FOX AND PARAMOUNT IN SALES CONVENTIONS

Paramount Starts Series of 10 Regionals with New York Meeting; Limits Product Announcement to First Five

While RKO Radio and Loew-Metro were going to market this week with the first advance trade showings of motion pictures ever held in the U. S. by Governmental stipulation, Twentieth Century-Fox and Paramount this week were in annual sales conventions, and Warners was meeting in Canada. Warners is the only remaining member of the "Big Five" still to announce a block of new product and the dates for their public screening for exhibitors.

Meanwhile, first reports from the field on the first advance screenings indicated a mixed reception by exhibitors (see page 15).

The convention of Twentieth Century-Fox was held in Los Angeles, a single national meeting, where 52 pictures were announced for 1941-42. The product and convention details appear on pages 69 and 70.

Paramount, in New York, opened a series of regionals on Tuesday, but for the present is limiting its new season's product announcement to five: "Nothing But the Truth," "Hold Back the Dawn," "Buy Me That Town," "Henry Aldrich for President" and "New York Town."

Ten Paramount Meetings

Paramount will hold regional meetings for its ten sales districts, Neil Agnew, sales manager, announced last week in New York. The first Eastern regional was in New York Tuesday, Wednesday, Mr. Agnew and Robert Gillham were among guest speakers. J. J. Unger, Eastern divisional manager, presided. The second occurred Thursday and Friday, in Philadelphia. On next Monday and Tuesday, there is to be a meeting in Boston; and, on next Thursday and Friday, one in Cleveland. Mr. Unger is to supervise all these.

Charles Reagan, assistant sales manager, was to preside at a Chicago meeting Friday and Saturday, with others scheduled for Kansas City next Monday and Tuesday, and for Dallas on next Wednesday and Thursday. The Atlanta regional is to be next Monday and Tuesday, with Mr. Agnew presiding.

George Smith, western divisional manager, will preside at the meetings to be held at Denver next Monday and Tuesday, and at San Francisco next Thursday and Friday.

The schedule of Mr. Gillham, advertising and publicity director, includes talks not only to the New York meeting, but also to the Chicago, Denver, and San Francisco. Alec Moss, co-director of exploitation, was to attend the Chicago, Kansas City, Dallas, and Cleveland meets.

Oscar Morgan, the company's short subjects sales manager, announced that of the 85 one-reel subjects scheduled for the next season, 16 are finished, eight are in work.

The completed films are: the first "Superman" cartoon, in Technicolor; two "Quiz Kids" film; a "Speaking of Animals" novelty; "Post Pilot," initial release in the "Popeye" series; one each of the "Popular Science" and "Unusual Occupations" releases, both in Magnacolor; "Speaking of Mermaids," first Grantland Rice Sportlight; "The Separate Vacation" and "Controlling the Nerves," both starring Robert Benchley; "Hedda Hopper's Hollywood," first in a new series; and two subjects in the "Fascinating Journeys" series, "Road in India" and "Indian Temples."

Problems of the current season, the decree and its many new features; double features; competition; film buying, were under discussion at the meeting of Paramount's theatre partner-associates, at Shawnee-on-the-Delaware, Pennsylvania, Monday through Wednesday, with Leonard Goldenson presiding.

The following were to attend: John Q. Adams, John Balaban and Mrs. Balaban, Tracy Barham and Mrs. Barham, Abe Blank, Ray Blank, Myron Blank, Ralph Branton and Mrs. Branton, Harry Davis, John J. Fitzgibbons, John J. Ford, Harry French, John Friedl, B. B. Garner, Nate Goldstein and Mrs. Goldstein, Julius Gordon, Karl Hoblitzelle, Earl J. Hudson, William K. Jenkins, Fred Kent and Mrs. Kent, H. F. Kincey, M. A. Lightman, Arthur Lucas, M. J. Mullin, Harry Nace and Harry Nace, Jr., R. J. O'Donnell, J. J. O'Leary, Hunter Perry, Sam Pinanski, George Planck and Mrs. Planck, E. V. Richards, Harry Royster, Frank Rogers, Harold Robb and Ed. Rowley, J. J. Rubens, M. C. Talley, R. B. Wilby, William K. Hollander.

F. & M. THEATRES PLAY ANTHEM

Audience singing of the national anthem has been inaugurated at four major Fanchon & Marco theatres in St. Louis, the Ambassador, Fox, Missouri, and St. Louis. It is sung at the beginning of each performance, according to Harry C. Arthur, Jr., president and general manager of the company.

Universal Schedule Is Ahead of Time

Nate J. Blumberg, president of Universal, stated last week the company would, by September 1st, have completed enough pictures to meet all release requirements between that date and January 1st.

August releases are "Hold That Ghost," with Abbott and Costello, and "This Woman Is Mine;" Frank Lloyd production.

Scheduled for early 1941-42 are: "Badlands of Dakota," "Unfinished Business," "Almost An Angel," Deanna Durbin; "Hellzapoppin," Jules Levey film; "Appointment for Love;" "The Great Man," with W. C. Fields; "Ride 'Em Cowboy," Abbott and Costello, and "They Lived Alone," Deanna Durbin. Other releases up to January 1st, include: "Sing Another Chorus," "Moonlight in Hawaii," "Burma Convoy," "Captive Wild Woman," "Melody Lane," "Nobody's Fool," "Tme Wolf Man," and "Mermaid in Distress."

Briskin Says Columbia Past Production "Hump"

Columbia is already "over the production hump," caused by increased activity to build up a reserve of finished films in preparation for any kind of competition from companies operating under the consent decree, Samuel J. Briskin, production executive, said this week in Hollywood.

The company has three pictures for the 1941-42 season "in the can" and a dozen scripts about ready for filming as well as the bulk of the films required for the last three months of the current season completed, Mr. Briskin said. A short time ago an all-time production record was set at Columbia, Mr. Briskin declared, with 11 feature pictures shooting.

Rush of production by companies bound by the decree and others, like Columbia, which want to be prepared for any eventuality, resulted in a serious shortage of "manpower," he added, including stars and production executives as well as technical workers. The situation, he continued, is now returning to normal and predicted that the over-all effect of all the companies having a "backlog" of pictures and not being required to rush in order to meet release dates will be an improvement in quality. After a reserve of films has been built up it is possible, Mr. Briskin concluded, to spend extra weeks on a picture, which was often not possible in the past when it was necessary to meet a release date.

Warners Holds Separate Canadian Convention

Warners' separate Canadian sales convention, preceding the annual United States sales convention, July 28th through August 1st, at the Blackstone Hotel, Chicago, was held Monday through Thursday at the Mount Royal Hotel, Montreal, with Wolfe Cohen, district manager, presiding.

New product was outlined, especially those of interest to the Dominion, such as "The Prime Minister," "Captains of the Clouds," "Flight Patrol," "Battle of the Atlantic." The delegates attended the location where the second named picture is being filmed.

From the home office, attending were S. Charles Einfeld, Carl Leserman, Gradwell Sears, Roy Haines, Norman Moray.

Monday was devoted to screenings; the remaining three days to business sessions and the visit to the film location.

Meanwhile, it became known that delegates to the company's annual sales convention at the Blackstone Hotel, Chicago, July 28th through August 1st, will see at least five new films. They will be "Sergeant York," "Navy Blues," "The Flight Patrol," "The Prime Minister," and "Dive Bomber."

A pre-convention advertising and publicity conference, to discuss "Sergeant York" road showings and other forthcoming product, will be held by Warners at New York's Hotel Astor next Monday, through Friday. Supervising will be S. Charles Einfeld, and Morton Blumenstock. Assisting will be Mitchell Rawson and Lee Blumberg. Attending will be Bill Brumberg, Washington, D. C.; Monroe Rubinger and Jack Yergin, Chicago; Jack Goldsmith, Atlanta; Bill Lewis, Dallas; Sam Clark and Martin Weiser, Los Angeles; Phil Engel, New York.

MGM Again Elevates Field Personnel

Bringing to 47 the number of promotions in its field staff personnel, MGM over the weekend promoted 14 more men, in a further "streamlining" of the sales staff for consent decree selling.

New salesmen are Michael Cramer, Detroit; Howard Dunn, Des Moines; Ralph Carmichael, Los Angeles, all former office managers, and Sam Cooper, Salt Lake City, former booker.

James Micheletti, first booker, succeeds Cramer; Woodrow Sherrill, first booker, succeeds Dunn; Harold Weinberger, student office manager, succeeds Carmichael, and Howard Cahoon, second booker, succeeds Cooper.

Bernard Gold, Denver, and Gerald Banta, Des Moines, have been advanced from first to second bookers. Frank Hale, Denver; Kenneth Weldon, Des Moines, and John Moore, Salt Lake City, move up from student to second bookers. Leslie Zubiri, Salt Lake City, former assistant shipper, is now chief shipper.

Ginger Rogers Entertains

Want comedy?

This is it.

Want to invite the customers to come and convince themselves that the 1940 Academy Award winner is really top actress?

Go ahead.

And if it's diversion they want, for its own sake and with no relationship whatever to the world of affairs as they happen to stack up at the moment, here it is.

Here is no more and no less than a portrayal by Ginger Rogers of a telephone operator—just an average telephone operator, no smarter or dumber than a hundred thousand others like her—engaged in the business of choosing a Tom, Dick or a Harry to marry. She chooses Harry, at picture's end, for the reason that her heart is surer than her head, which is as the audience would have it.

In the telling of this simple story a large amount of deviation from norm is indulged, all profitably. Dialogue yields many a laugh, both while following a straight line and while piling up on itself with two or more people talking at once, also with lines left floating in air now and again and filled out by gestures or facial expressions.

Departure from norm is taken, too, in the interpolation of dream-sequences. Hollywood normally counts one dream-sequence a risk, two fatal, but this production utilizes four of them, each more effective than its predecessor, all accounting for audience satisfaction.

George Murphy, Burgess Meredith and Alan Marshall fit the "Tom," "Harry" and "Dick" assignments snugly, playing a salesman, a mechanic and a millionaire respectively.

Miss Rogers' performance, in a type of material which a trace of "acting" could have blown sky-high, is a triumph for both the artiste and the art.

Production is by Robert Sisk, coming through at this point to demonstrate, after an experience including a number of minor-budget pictures, that he's got what it takes to turn out top-flight entertainment.

Garson Kanin's direction justifies all they've been saying about the young man since his first hit and leaves no doubt that there'll be a job awaiting him in Hollywood when he finishes his stint in Uncle Sam's army.

Previewed at the Alexander theatre, Glendale, a theatre which all the studios have been using for all of their previews these past several months. The people who pay their way into this theatre have been getting pretty well saturated with entertainment and pretty unresponsive to any of it. So have the professionals who attend in line of duty. "Tom, Dick and Harry" made them all happy again, and demonstrative in all the approved ways. Professionals were remarking, afterward, that if RKO-Radio has anything better than this on tap for its first block-of-five the company's in for a success story eclipsing any in its history.—WILLIAM R. (RKO-Radio)

Sophisticated Comedy

Starring Ronald Colman in a role returning him to the field of light comedy, this treatment of the flirtatious wife theme for purposes of humour exclusively stacks up as a standout in the array of attractions for midsummer release. It deals with and thrives upon sophistication but sticks to terms, situations and dialogue which anybody can comprehend without a struggle and laugh both at and with.

The story, detailed on page 146 of your Product Digest, concerns a young wife's habit of imagining herself in love with men who profess to understand her, and with her husband's custom of adroitly averting divorce or dire consequence by arranging for her to gently discover each time that she is still in love with him. The plot boils down to no more than that, but the processes by which producer-director Lewis Milestone achieves the boiling down afford constant and lively entertainment.

Scene of the picture is a Florida resort of the wealthy, staged as if there had never been a depression, and all of the principals are rich. The time is the present but no reference to anything unpleasant going on in the world is permitted to becloud a film designed solely for diversion.

The Colman skill in maintaining a polished portrayal keynotes a cast performance without a weak spot in it. Registering in her first role, Anne Lee establishes herself in the feminine lead. A number of deviations from production norm, such as those in which the star talks directly to the audience without interrupting the narrative, are introduced with profit to the enterprise.

Previewed at the Alexander Theatre, Glendale, to a mixed audience which indicated by auditorium response, and in foyer comment afterward, enthusiastic approval of the picture. —W.R.W.

Lady Be Good

(In MGM first Block)

Musical Comedy

When "Lady Be Good" is good it's very, very good—which is when it's musical. When it isn't musical it's engaged in telling, with more deliberation and less humor than the rules of entertainment require, a story about a song-writing team whose romances and rhythms don't jibe. Although no thinner than many a plot utilized before now as background for successful musical-comedy numbers, this one penalizes the project more than most by monopolizing the footage in a ratio of about 6 to 1.

The picture gets going, after 40 minutes devoted to starting the background story and identifying the characters, when the Berry Brothers take over for a spot of Harlem-type hoofing and jerk the witnesses to attention. This number made the exhibitor audience attending the tradeshow forget its "buyer attitude" to the extent of applauding like movie fans.

Later on Eleanor Powell sets a new high in her dancing career in a timed routine performed with a dog which cooperates as if trained from puppyhood for no other destiny. Much later on Miss Powell leads, with one of the longest single-take tap routines on record, a production number as big as MGM's biggest stage and packed with audience value.

Another highlight in the proceedings is a song by Virginia O'Brien, the "Dead Pan" singer of "Meet the People," whose handling of a chorus in closeup is counted among the sure fire items in Hollywood's bag of tricks.

Ann Sothern, whose role presents her as writer of the lyrics, sings the title song by George and Ira Gershwin, which is retained intact and used as a peak of interest in the score, and "The Last Time I Saw Paris," by Jerome Kern and Oscar Hammerstein II, both numbers receiving lavish presentation. John Carroll also sings, though the story is permitted to intrude upon his numbers, and Robert Young, too, participates in the vocal events.

On the acting side, Lionel Barrymore as a judge and Reginald Owen as a music publisher account ably for their time before the camera, while Red Skelton displays a promise of comedy ability awaiting development.

Production is by Arthur Freed, who also shares with Roger Edens the credit for most of the songs, and direction is by Norman Z. McLeod, both jobs displaying no sign of stint and even some symptoms of excess.

Tradeshown at the Victoria Theatre, Los Angeles, to some 75 exhibitors and the trade press, a group perhaps too small to indicate typical auditorium reaction to musical comedy but large enough to manifest plainly its liking for the musical numbers in this offering. Apathy and listlessness induced by the lengthy story passages was no less apparent. Comment following the showing was in favor of eliminating 20 or 30 minutes of the narrative portion of the picture if practicable.—W. R. W.

Parachute Battalion

(In RKO first Block)

Service Comedy-Drama

To the extent that use of parachute troops in modern war may be said to have kindled special interest in this branch of the military, this service film dealing with the training of American parachutists stands out from its contemporaries. It is not in other particulars different from its predecessors in the groove of patriotic interest.

Principal scene of the picture is Fort Benning, Ga., and the highlights of the picture, naturally, are the 'chute takeoffs from planes in flight, presented in solo, in groups and, finally, in masses large enough to comfort citizens who may have been wondering whether the forces of the United States are doing anything about keeping abreast of developments in this type of warfare. A foreword to the film, stating that the 'chutes are manned by the soldiers of Fort Benning, clears up the point.

The story departs from the pattern of service picture plots in minor details but includes the soldier gripped by fear, in fact two of them, the braggart who turns out to be solid soldier at bottom, the officer's daughter wooed by squad rivals, some fisticuffs, a yokel for comedy relief, some near-accidents and some rescues, everybody coming through with chin up at the finish.

Production by Howard Benedict gets maximum value for outlay and direction by Leslie Goodwins keeps the proceedings on a straight track headed in the proper direction.

Harry Carey, Edmond O'Brien and Robert Preston stand out in a cast called upon for no extraordinary display of talents and sharing about equally the responsibilities of entertainment.

Father Takes a Wife

(In RKO first Block)

Swanson Returns in Comedy

After an absence of seven years, Gloria Swanson returns to the screen in Lee Marcus' production of the RKO Radio picture, "Father Takes a Wife", co-starring with Adolphe Menjou. Miss Swanson's last film was the Fox "Music in the Air", in 1934. In a well-paced comedy written by Dorothy and Herbert Fields, the one-time Keystone and Mack Sennett star has ample opportunity to show that she still is a good trouper, and waltzes through a number of comedy scenes with ease, grace and charm.

Story plot centers around the senior member of a large shipping concern, Frederick Osborne, who, after spending twenty-five years building up a career, goes off the deep end and falls in love with a glamorous actress. Menjou handles the part with his usual skill. The actress, played by Miss Swanson, gives up her career for marriage, but still hankers for the glories of the stage. While on their honeymoon, on a trip to Mexico in the Osborne yacht, they find a stowaway on board, who turns out to be a penniless Mexican singer eager to crash the concert field in America. Trouble begins when the Osbornes take the singer, Carlos, home with them, give him music lessons, clothe, feed him and groom him for a big concert in New York. Osborne senior becomes jealous of the singer, confronts his wife and after a battle, leaves home. In order to help out his father, Osborne junior, who has stood by throughout the difficulties ready to lend a helping hand to his erring parent, invites Carlos to his home only to discover that his own life has become complicated by his wife's constant concern over the Mexican's career. He, too, leaves home.

In desperation, father and son hit upon the brilliant scheme of arranging a concert tour for the singer to get him out of their lives. Following their coup, they discover that they are about to become fathers which happy prospect restores them to the waiting arms of the Osborne wives.

John Howard plays Osborne junior, opposite Florence Rice, as his wife. Helen Broderick, as the actress' Aunt Julie, has opportunity for dialogue in her inimitable style. Desi Arnaz, as Carlos, who is entranced with his own voice and who causes the marital volcanic disturbances, is amiable in the part. The picture provides good, light entertainment, principally because of the comedy situations and some keen-edged darts in the dialogue. It is aimed at a general audience, and has specific exploitation value in that many movie-goers who remember Miss Swanson's previous film history will be interested in her come-back.

Here is a Man

(In RKO first Block)

"The Devil and Daniel Webster"

Retitled on the eve of tradeshowing and after receiving a wealth of publicity during production as "The Devil and Daniel Webster," this melodrama of old New England presents Walter Huston as the Devil and Edward Arnold as Daniel Webster in competition for the soul of a farmer.

The contest is treated with realism and ends with a trial by jury in which the spirits of Benedict Arnold and others, recalled from hell for the occasion, serve as jurors while the Devil and Daniel Webster plead the case.

In common with other pictures which have dealt with the supernatural, this one faces the hazard of being proclaimed an artistic triumph while faring in the field of commerce according to the state of the public's appetite for fantasy, allegory and symbolism at the moment and point of exhibition.

Apart from whatever risk to success may or may not turn out to have been incurred in the presentation of the supernatural as the natural, the handling of the miraculous as routine, the production abounds in entertainment value. Produced and directed by William Dieterle at the peak of his proficiency, it ranks with the finest product Hollywood has made in point of artistic quality.

Edward Arnold's performance as Webster and Walter Huston's portrayal of the Devil rate among their respective bests.

James Craig as the farmer who sells his soul to the Devil for seven years of "everything money can buy", but is saved by Webster's eloquence from making payment, is one to be exploited.

Jane Darwell as a Christian mother and Anne Shirley as a devout wife add much of realism to the story, while Simone Simon as the Devil's feminine emissary and the farmer's mistress makes the character appropriately unreal.

Gene Lockhart, John Qualen and George Cleveland are foremost in a supporting cast which admits of no criticism.

On account of the nature and treatment of the subject matter, requiring a measure of allowance for allegory and the intent of the producer, the film is hardly suitable entertainment for children.

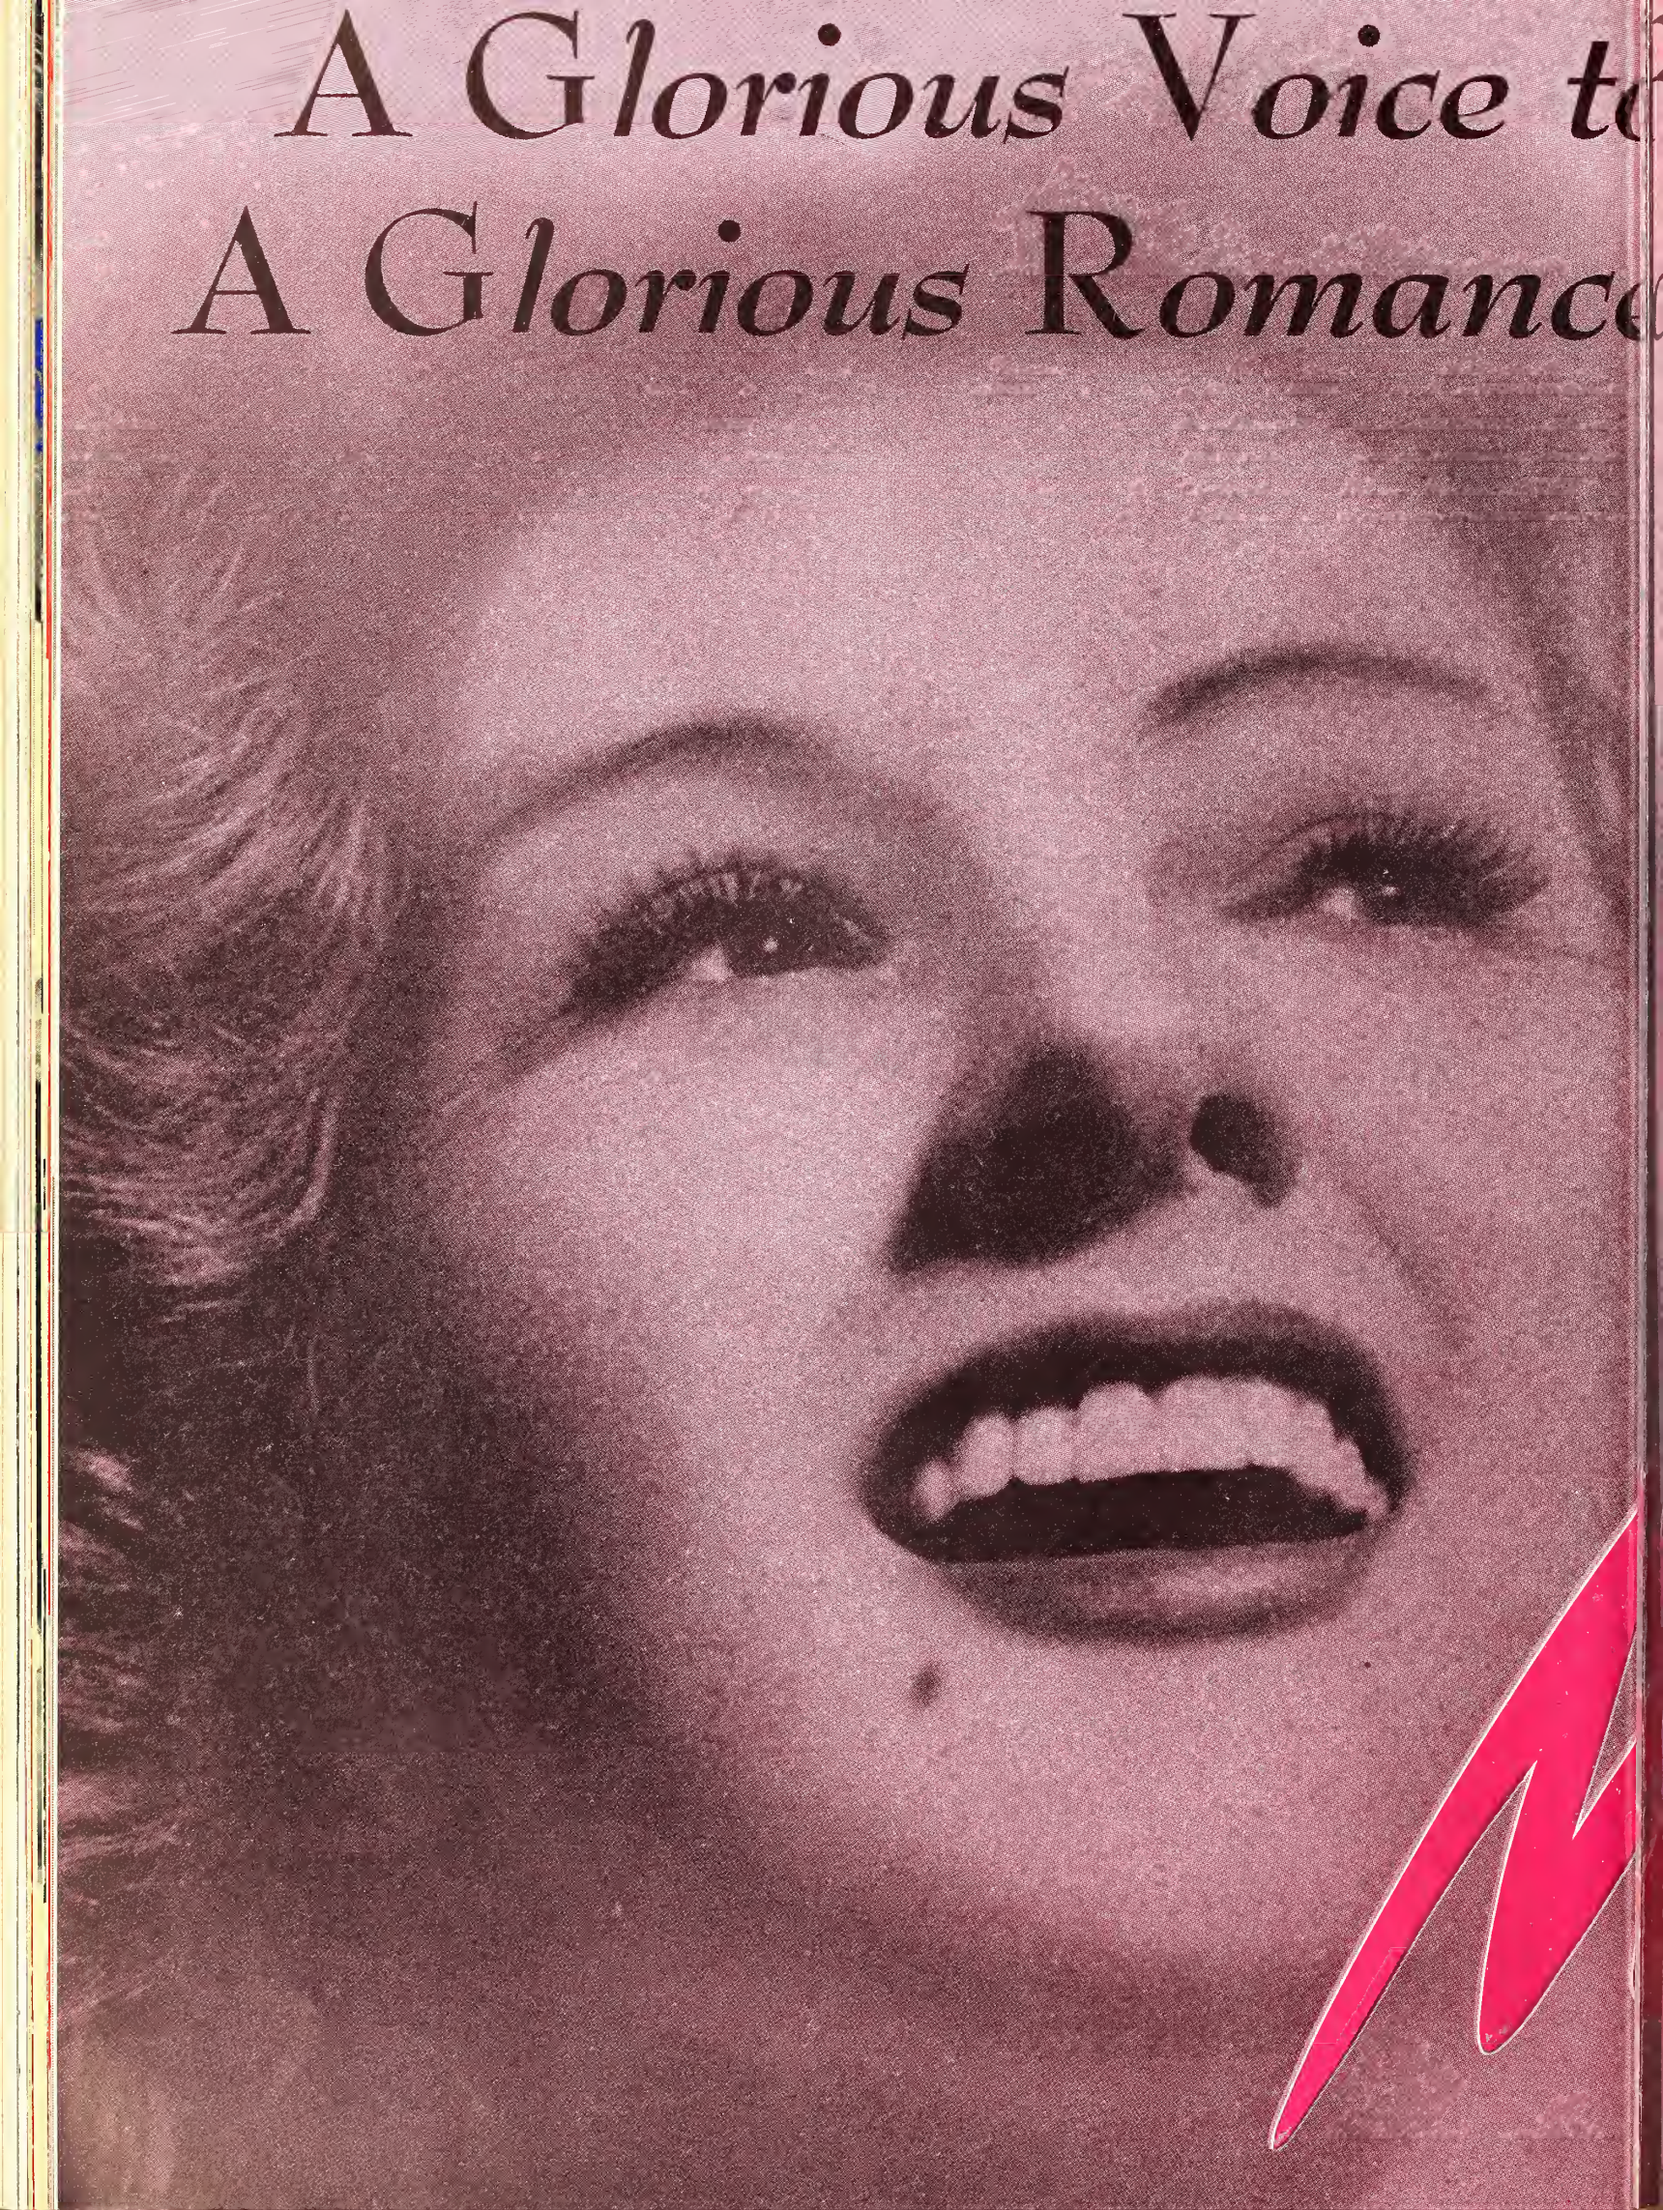
Emergency Landing

(Producers Releasing Corp.)



Action, Comedy, Romance

This production, under the aegis of George R. Batcheller, while not reaching epoch-making proportions, has its moments in the form of some action, a few aeroplanes, a dash of romance and a degree of comedy, the sum of which equals fair summer regalement.

Test pilot "Jerry" and weather bureau observer "Doc" finally succeed in interesting "Lambert" of the Lambert Airplane factory in their robot-controlled plane, and a test is arranged. The test fails because of the destructive intervention of foreign agents. "Jerry" and "Doc" return to their desert weather outpost for further research. Characters fairly new to the screen—the Weavers—somewhat counter balance an old situation, that of the farm folks suddenly in wealth and living appropriately until reminded that gold will not supplant proletarian friendship.

June "Elviry" Weaver, as the homey but spirited mother of the brood, and as a culture-conscious matron trembling for an operatic career; Frank "Cicero" Weaver, as a former fireman-farmer, then as a punk polo player, but always a veritable samaritan; Frank Sully, as an earnest, simple, suitor for one of the Weaver girls—these are comical, and sympathetic high-lights.

But a true feature of the picture is the portrayal, by Leon "Abner" Weaver, as the head of the family—the wise, understanding, forgiving father who retains his balance in a world mad with wealth, and after that world collapses.

Production, by Armand Schaefer, is good in this apparently middle budget picture. Direction by Nick Grinde, the photography and sets all give evidence of careful studio work with the money available.

The story has the Weavers, on an Ozark farm, uncover a document apparently giving them a claim for several hundred thousand dollars, on the U. S. Treasury. With the financial backing and blessing of their poverty-ridden community, they descend on their Washington representative who, after some delay, certifies the document's validity—and that, with compounded interest, it makes them eligible for billions of dollars. The news produces a Governmental panic. It also enables the Weavers to live high, expecting payment.

Only father "Abner" remains the honest farmer; and, one day, sick of the change, he plants a newspaper story that the family has lost its wealth. Whereupon, the "friends" depart; the family learns its lesson; and all agree to let the claim upon the Government drop, upon payment of $200,000, the original amount due.

There are several musical numbers, with "Abner" playing the fiddle, "Elviry" singing; others with Betty Jane Rhodes soloing. All are adequate.

Law of the Range

(Universal)

Shootin' Western

The mere fact that this production is a western is in itself sufficient to attract this particular type of patronage. However, "Law of the Range" can boast plenty of shooting, in fact, it starts off with a shooting practically immediately, fast horse-riding, music of the type indigenous to the West, and comedy in the person of Fuzzy Knight.

Johnny Mack Brown as "Steve Howard" is the stalwart hero and Roy Harris as the "Wolverine Kid" is the menacing villain. The plot concerns itself mostly with an ancient feud existing between the families of "Steve" and the "Kid," and the attempt on the "Kid's" part to pin a murder or two on "Steve," to further his own interests. Naturally, justice triumphs, but not before plenty of action has taken place.

The two young ladies in the picture are Elaine Morey and Nell O'Day, but the romantic interest is reduced to a minimum and in no way interferes with the action demanded of this type of film.

It should certainly please boys, men and anyone else who longs to find himself under a ten-gallon hat.

Western

Here is an entertaining and exciting western starring the Three Mesquiteers. More fiction than fact, the story concerns the Territory of Wyoming about the time the territory became a state, and how the Mesquiteers were mostly responsible for that transition by ridding the territory of a crooked Commissioner.

The Mesquiteers, in order of importance, are "Stony Brooke," played by Robert Livingston; "Tucson Smith," played by Bob Steele and "Lullaby Joslin," otherwise Rufe Davis, who is the comedian of the trio. Support includes June Johnson, "Bud" McTaggart, Helen Mackeller and Robert Frazer, the villain of the piece. Louis Gray was the associate producer and the picture was directed by John English.

The Mesquiteers perform on a par with previous efforts but the picture gains added stature through the convincing and lovable performance of Helen Mackellar, who as "Kansas Kate Conners," widow of a martyred Kansas editor and a newspaperwoman in her own right, picks up where editor "Ward Beecham" (William Farnum) left off, in the fight against "Treadwell," the commissioner, despite the fact her son is on the other side of the fence.

The forces for law and order win out in the end, of course, but it's touch and go up to the final climax—a good one too.

RKO Today

RKO Today could be, but isn't, the name of a daily newspaper chronicling every newsworthy incident transpiring at the RKO-Radio studio or pertinent thereto, from the acquisition of a new star or producer to the quotable wisecrack uttered by an irked carpenter on Stage 7.

RKO Radio publishes no daily newspaper, but it could, for it has assembled and implemented a newspaper staff that performs all of the essential functions of publication except going to press.

In charge of this news-gathering, news-dispensing unit set up by Studio Publicity Director Perry Lieber is Tom Pettey, long time star reporter for big time newspapers, presiding over a staff of 14, which will be augmented in pace with developments.

City editor is Nick Carter.

Eight reporters—called unit men because each is assigned to cover the activities of a single production unit—fine-comb the day's doings for news and bring it in to the desk.

Fashion writers attend to the collection and conveyance of the materials out of which newspaper fashion pages are made.

A feature writer is at all times available to whip up a special article, any style, topic, variety or length, for a magazine or newspaper in the market for a special type of piece on a designated subject.

Three able and personable gentlemen gifted in the art of telephony (if that's a word) distribute the news forthwith and as fascinatingly as may be to local newspapers, resident correspondents, columnists and so on. In another industry these purveyors of fact from factory indirectly to public via the printing presses and microphones of the land would be called liaison officers. Hollywood calls them planters.

It is this unit, primarily, which assembles the news and information, the facts and on occasion the fictions, which go out to the world as news and out to the company's home office in New York for use in preparing press books and other material supplied the trade from there.

Other units of the studio publicity department, which are several, derive their material from this central reservoir.

Management of such a newspaper-type setup is no novelty to Tom Pettey, equipped by experience as by-line writer for such publications as the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, the Chicago Tribune, the New York Herald-Tribune (a brief adventure as Hollywood correspondent for P.M. in its early flare-up of magnificence is passed over lightly at this point) and as public relations expert for the MPPDA and AMPP in Hollywood to personally perform at a moment's notice any one or all of the jobs being done under his direction.

Formation of this unit inside the framework of the RKO-Radio publicity department relates to the recently announced policy under which the company intends to commence acquainting the universe with each of its pictures at the earliest possible point prior to production and keep on doing so until the last potential customer in the nation has seen the subject on his local screen.

HAL B. WALLIS, Warner executive producer, left last weekend for Ottawa with MICHAEL CURTIZ, director, and key men of the production unit which will film "Captains of the Clouds" there.

DARRYL F. ZANUCK has named eight players as in line for what Hollywood calls a buildup. The Zanuck candidates for fame are CAROLE LANDIS, GENE TIERNEY, ANNE BAXTER, JOHN SUTTON, DANA ANDREWS, GEORGE MONTGOMERY, JOHN SHEPHERD and LAIRD CREGAR.

CORKING PREMIERE FOR "NEW WINE"

Hollywood press people depressed by consent decree repeal of their preview prerogatives are in for a revival of spirits on the 28th when "New Wine," the Gloria Pictures production starring Ilona Massey, Alan Curtis and Binnie Barnes, "will be launched in a sea of sparkling champagne," to quote the United Artists announcement precisely.

Busses will convey the press and other guests 45 miles upstate into the grape country to Cucamonga and the cellar of the ancient winery of the Padre Vineyard company, where the wares of the venerable institution will be administered to the gathering during "the champagne hour," this ceremony to be followed by "a barbecue and entertainment," and ultimately the screening of the picture.

"With press previews under fire," saith the announcement, "this may prove to be the last such event ever staged by Hollywood."

(Hollywood Scene ventures to doubt the last remark.)

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

We have in hand a letter from a group known, oddly, as The Cowboys of the Sea. It is composed of persons who have rescued someone from drowning. Having heard that Hollywood actress Irene Hervey had recued Kent Taylor when his head struck against the side of a boat and he plunged, unconscious, into California's Lake Arrowhead during the filming of a picture, they want to make Miss Hervey a Cowboy of the Sea.

W. G. Johnstone, secretary of the organization, reveals how, recently admitted to membership were Secretary of the Navy Knox and Assistant Secretary Forrestal who, with Colonel Donovan, of Federal Intelligence and an RKO lawyer, rescued five persons from drowning in the Potomac River.

Anyone who thinks that London today is nothing but a mess of deep, gaping bomb holes just don't know. By press wire and radio comes word from London about how movie director Will Hay, looking for a big bomb crater background for a scene in "The Black Sheep of Whitehall," couldn't find one with the right contour, depth, or breadth. So he ordered one, a custom-dug job, right in the heart of London.

Rainy or other inclement weather sends motion picture, radio, television and other workers over here in this Rockefeller Center community scurrying for noon lunch by way of a telephone call to the Parker House. No one can get table service at the Parker House, which delivers only. Ex-soda jerker Sam Tapley finds his pile piling up from the delivery of up to 1,600 orders a day, from a small Coca Cola to a seven-course meal. In three years, Sam has grown from a borrowed $300 and three delivery boys, to 20 assistants, 38 delivery boys and three telephone operators to take down orders.

He says he's got such bigwigs for customers as George Jean Nathan, Fred Allen, Rudy Vallee and the like. Rudy likes frosted chocolates, "likes it frosted and after that floated, like an island after an eruption."

Continental Hotel Service Corporation, in Chicago, seems determined to make it tough for traveling salesmen, including film salesmen.

Continental has been making a survey of salesmen's habits, studying 30,000 salesmen working for 832 companies in the Chicago area, and it found that while they spent $739,826 for food and $924,782 for hotel rooms in a month, their expenditures for entertainment totaled $1,546,850.

When Universal shows "Unfinished Business," look for Virginia Engels, young blonde actress. She's the gal who, during filming, tripped over an electrical connection which set her gold lame evening dress afire and melted it.

Movie press agents aren't the only ones who send out silly stuff, as witness this choice morsel from the pen of one of their counter parts at Columbia Broadcasting, in that other branch of entertainment—radio. The morsel follows:

"Jim, a gloomy, ebony-black fish-crow at the Bronx Zoo, has languished behind bars for six years, eating out her heart for a faithful suitor. (Jim IS a she; she was named before her sex became known).

"Love triumphs, however, when Jim is released, Sunday, during 'What's New At the Zoo' on Columbia network.

"John Reed King, CBS announcer, interviews Jim and describes her departure, the traditional happy ending to love stories.

"She came to the Zoo in October 1933. For two years, while flirtations and courtships filled the lives of the songbirds, love passed by the stolid, gloomy crow. In April, 1935, a male fish-crow landed on the roof of Jim's cage outside the Bird House. His visits continued until he was lured away by a wild female. Jim's heart cracked.

"The Male crow returned, sheepishly in the spring of 1937 and has been a faithful visitor each spring since. For weeks the suitor has made the neighborhood ring with cries and Jim is off her feed.

"Lee S. Crandall, soft-hearted Curator of Birds, will have Jim let out so she can join her lover in the high trees lining the Bronx River.

"Curator Crandall and William Bridges, Curator of Publications, will be heard on the program with King, to describe the other rare birds."

A "road magnet" on wheels, designed to rid highways of nails, bolts and other objects that cause tire blow-outs and automobile accidents, is Missouri's latest gift to the motorist. The device carries three electric magnets, each of which will cause a three-pound object to leap as far as four inches. They are suspended from the chassis of a two-ton truck, and a generator, mounted on the chassis and driven by a separate engine, supplies the current. On an average. they pick up four and one-half pounds of iron objects per mile of travel.

98 PROPERTIES ACQUIRED BY FILM PRODUCERS FOR 1941-42 SEASON

Neufeld Buys Nine Johnston McCulley Stories for P.R.C. Release; Disney, Salten Complete Cartoon Negotiations

Replenishing the story vaults for the forthcoming selling program, Hollywood film producers acquired, during May, the screen rights to 48 properties. Of these 20 were original stories, four were stage productions of the past and present season and 24 were books including four magazine stories and two radio scripts. The reports of the acquisitions made during these preseason months are of more than ordinary import because of the new season coming up.

In June Hollywood acquired 39 original stories, two plays and nine books which also includes three magazine stories, one musical composition and one radio script series which Universal purchased from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Highlight of the month's purchases was the acquisition of nine Johnston McCulley western adventure stories by Sigmund Neufeld, who will release the pictures through Producers Releasing Corporation. The stories will be produced as vehicles for three PRC western stars, Buster Crabbe, George Huston and Tom Tyler, on the 1941-42 program of the "Billy the Kid," "Lone Rider" and "Frontier Marshal" series.

Disney Buys Five

Walt Disney during the month acquired the screen rights to five stories by Felix Salten and an option on the author's services as a scenarist and on other stories he has written. Mr. Disney also purchased during the month, a Sinclair Lewis magazine story published in 1930 under the title of "Bongo." This story with some of the other acquisitions recently made by the cartoon producer are for future feature production.

Republic entered the competition for the screen rights to Broadway stage productions during the month of May by purchasing Lew Brown's "Yokel Boy." The studio is reported to have paid $50,000 for the property. Judy Canova, who played the lead in the stage production in 1939, is now under contract to Republic and will repeat her stage role when the play is produced by the film company. The studio also disclosed that it is seeking the services of Buddy Ebsen to play "Elmer Whipple" on the screen as he did on the stage, and that an effort will be made to obtain other members of the original cast.

Frank Capra purchased the rights to two properties during the month, the first "The Flying Yorkshireman," an Eric Knight novel, was purchased from Frank Lloyd for $40,000. The second, "Tomorrow Never Comes," is an original modern comedy and will be the next picture on the Capra schedule to go into production. The price and the nature of the plot were not disclosed.

The Capra-Robert Riskin producing company, which made "Meet John Doe" for Warner release, has no distribution on either of the new films, and since both properties are held in Mr. Capra's name alone, it is rumored that they will be produced under an entirely new setup.

Highlight of the June purchases was the acquisition by Paramount of the original screen story, "Snowball in Hell." The property was acquired as a vehicle for Madeleine Carroll and Bob Hope. Miss Carroll will be seen as a British secret agent and Hope as an American vaudevillian. The film replaces "The Lady Has Plans" on Miss Carroll's production schedule.

RKO acquired the screen rights to "Thieves Like Us," a novel by Edward Brown, which Rowland Brown, who also owned the screen rights, adapted to the screen. The purchase price was reported to be $25,000 and the scenarist and Joel McCrea had intended to produce the film for United Artists' release with the actor in the leading role. However, since Mr. McCrea was unable to obtain time between his Paramount commitments for the projects, the property was sold to RKO.

The following properties were acquired during May:

ADVICE TO A YOUNG WOMAN, an original story the screen rights of which have been purchased by Al Kaufman.

ANOINTED, THE, an original story purchased for production by Metro Goldwyn Mayer.

BAMBI'S CHILDREN, a novel by Felix Salten acquired by Walt Disney to prevent the story from being produced by another studio.

EXHIBITORS BACK U.S. IN CRESCENT CIRCUIT TRIAL

Government Witnesses Charge 'Intimidation' through Product Agreements with Distributors

The Department of Justice's first field anti-trust suit against the majors entered its second week Monday, in Nashville, Tenn., Federal Court, with predictions it would not last as long as first anticipated. The predictions were tempered, however, by Federal Judge Elmer Davies' ruling, last week, that inter-office communications of distributor defendants were not to be introduced by the Government in the absence of the persons affected. The ruling, Allen Dobey, of Government counsel, complained, might possibly prolong the trial, and necessitate the subpeonaing of about 75 additional witnesses.

Meanwhile, in the suit, which alleges conspiracy between the Crescent circuit and the majors, a parade of independent exhibitors and former exhibitors ascended the stand, their stories chiming in unison with the Government assertion that Crescent intimidated independent theatre owners by threats to build opposition theatres, that it built these theatres, that by product agreements with the majors, it forced independent theatres out of business or into its fold.

Exhibitor Letter Read

On Monday a letter written in 1935 by J. F. Willingham, MGM Memphis manager, to Tony Sudekum, Crescent head was introduced. It said in part, "When we take the product away from our old, regular customer in Brownsville, Tennessee, such as we are doing in this instance, and give it to you, you should give us 100 per cent representation." The letter was introduced in testimony by C. G. Lawing, Charlotte, North Carolina, who said he operated a theatre in Brownsville from 1931 to 1935, when Crescent erected the Capitol; whereupon his project became unprofitable, and was sold later, to Crescent.

Not only the "little three" majors, Columbia, United Artists, and Universal, and the Crescent circuit—defendants in the Nashville suit—but also the five majors in the Federal consent decree, will be tied up in the Government's proof of general distributor-circuit conspiracy, Allan A. Dobey of Government counsel, asserted Wednesday, July 9th.

Four exhibitors testified for the Government that day: Mr. and Mrs. Charles Caldwell, Scottsville, Kentucky; J. A. Taylor, Cranberry, North Carolina; and Ruble D. Page, Mount Pleasant, Tennessee.

Mr. and Mrs. Caldwell testified about unsuccessful negotiations with the Crescent circuit and affiliates, on sale of their theatre. Mrs. J. H. Hollinger, with whom the Caldwells lived, asserted Lee Castelberry, circuit official, told her if the Caldwells would not sell, the circuit would build its own house in the town of 1,700.

Mr. Taylor testified that after he refused to sell his theatre in Spruce-Pine, North Carolina, to Cherokee Amusements, Crescent affiliate, that circuit in 1937 built an opposition theatre; and that after this occurrence, he sold his theatre to the chain for $4,000, and agreed to stay out of business in the town for ten years.

Mr. Page, operator of the Maury Theatre, Mount Pleasant, asserted that Kermit C. Stengel, son-in-law of Tony Sudekum, Crescent head, had said the circuit could "afford to build a theatre and operate at a loss for three years."

Kenneth Irwin, undertaker in the town mentioned, testified Mr. Sudekum, while negotiating for sale of Mr. Page's theatre, told him that if he couldn't buy it, he would build one in the town.

As an adverse witness, Earle Hendren, secretary treasurer of the Cherokee company, was called to the stand Thursday, July 10th, by the Government. Robert L. Wright examined Mr. Hendren, for the Government.

Mr. Hendren testified he bought into eight houses operated by W. H. Parrott, and that in 1936, Sudekum bought a further interest, for $25,000. When Judge Elmer Davies questioned the relevancy of this testimony, the Government replied it was trying to show that Messrs Parrott and Hendren sold an interest in their theatres to Crescent at an unusually low price, and allegedly to obtain better buying power and privileges.

Another Government witness that day was Fred Gorman, a former Cherokee circuit employee. Cross-examination by George H. Armistead, Jr., Crescent counsel, brought admission from Mr. Gorman that he had in 1938 written to the FBI and the Department of Justice, offering "information" about Crescent's expansion.

A. O. Taylor, operator in Dresden, Tennessee, testified that in 1938 a Paramount salesman, and then the Memphis exchange of the company informed him theatres in nearby Martin and Greenfield owned by Crescent would be given clearance despite his own five year contract with Paramount giving him clearance.

On Friday, fifth day of the trial, W. F. Roth, operator of The Palace, Gallatin, Tennessee, testified that from 1916 and 1914, respectively, he had bought MGM and Paramount pictures—until the 1937-38 season, when, he declared, the distributors began selling to a new Crescent theatre in his town. After some negotiations, he added, the companies offered him split deals.

Bars Home Office Memos

During questioning of Mr. Roth, Judge Davies ruled that interoffice distributor communications were not to be introduced in the absence of the parties concerned. Mr. Dobey asserted the ruling would extend the trial at least two weeks, and necessitate the subpoenaing of 75 additional witnesses.

Witnesses on Monday were C. G. Lawing, of Charlotte, North Carolina; and E. Q. Dozier, former operator of the Roxy Theatre, Earlington, Kentucky.

Mr. Lawing testified he operated a theatre in Brownsville, Tennessee, from 1931 to 1935, profitably. In that year, Crescent erected the Capitol there. Mr. Lawing then tried a tent theatre and then a theatre in a remodelled store building in Paris, same state. That venture, and the Brownsville, became unprofitable. he said, asserting that in the summer of 1936, he sold both theatres to Crescent for $75,000.

Pertinent to these occurrences, a letter was introduced, written to Mr. Sudekum by J. F. Willingham, MGM Memphis branch manager. In a discussion of contracts with the Capitol, Brownsville, Mr. Willingham wrote on December 5, 1935: "We trust that you will see to it that Mr. Shepherd plays our product as certainly when we take the product away from our old regular customer in Brownsville Tennessee, such as we are doing in this instance and give it to you, you should give us 100 per cent representation in your situations."

Mr. Dozier now a realtor, testified that his Roxy theatre, Earlington, Kentucky, often showed films ahead of the Cresent house in nearby Madisonville, in which he had formerly been interested; that then Mr. Stengel took options on a lot in Earlington; that after negotiations for sale or lease of the Roxy failed, Crescent erected the Earl Theatre in 1937. He said they competed until July, 1939 when he sold the Roxy for $7,000, and his interest in the Alhambra, Hopkinsville, for $18,000.

Mr. Dozier said sale of the latter was a condition of the first deal. He added that 60 days after selling the Roxy, it was closed, and the Earl continued business unopposed.

Testimony on Tuesday concerned operations in Rogersville, Tennessee, where allegedly, distributors discriminated against an independent in favor of a theatre opened in 1936 by Cumberland Amusement Company, Crescent affiliate. During this testimony the first Government exhibits against Universal and United Artists were introduced.

On the stand was William Miller, manager of the Roversville Theatre—the house which Cumberland opened in competition to him. The theatre is now operated by Rockwood Amusements, Crescent affiliate. Mr. Miller described his attempts to obtain product, after the opposing theatre opened, and before 1938 when he sold to Crescent.

Edward Zumstein, Ringold, Georgia, testified that in 1937 Crescent officers leased the building in Oneida, Tennessee, housing his theatre; and that thereupon he was "sumarily" ordered to vacate. He added that the Cherokee company paid him $500 for equipment in which he had invested $6,500.

Other Trust Matters

General denial answers have been filed by all the eight major film companies in the $5,452,575 Pickwick Theatre, Greenwich anti-trust suit filed in the U. S. District Court, New Haven. By way of separate defense, all except United Artists allege that Fairfield Holding Corporation, one of the defendants, owner of the real estate with Grenfield, Inc., is a foreign corporation and ask dismissal of the complaint, together with costs and disbursements of the action. The United Artists' separate defense claims that each and all of the plaintiff corporations "lack the legal capacity to maintain this action."

Asserting the plaintiff had improperly obtained the order, and that the trial would not occur for at least one year, New York Federal Judge Murrav Hulbert on Monday set aside order for examination before trial, of major company and Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America officials, in the $900,000 anti-trust suit of the Hillside Amusement Company, Newark.

The Ford Stadium Theatre, Chicago, case against the majors, has been referred by Will Burns, Master in Chancery, to the attention of Federal Judge William Campbell, upon his return from vacation.

EXHIBITOR GRAY PANS 'LOOK'

Joseph Gray, operating the Gray Theatre, Spangler, Pa., in a letter to Motion Picture Herald criticizes Look Magazine for a poll it is conducting among motion picture exhibitors. Mr. Gray says, "There are enough outsiders messing around the picture business."

The picture magazine asks exhibitors to tell whether they think forthcoming Hollywood product will be better than that of the past six months, whether newsreels are more important today than before the war, who the exhibitor believes is the "most beautiful woman" on the screen, the "most handsome man," "what actress has the greatest appeal to men," "what actor has the greatest apeal to women," and such.

Diaz's Son Claims Libel in "Juarez"

by LUIS BECERRA CELIS
in Mexico City

Porfirio Diaz, Jr., wealthy local civil engineer, has announced that he is determined to push his court fight against Warners for what he claims was disparagement of his late father, President Diaz, about the strongest dictator Mexico ever had, in "Juarez and Maximilian." Sr. Diaz has filed two suits in local courts against Warners, one criminal, the other civil. Under the civil action, he seeks to collect $115,000 damages to console him and other members of the late President's family for abuse he alleges the picture heaps upon the late ruler of Mexico, who was driven into exile in Paris by the social revolution that broke out in 1910. Gen. Diaz was boss of Mexico for 30 years. He died in Paris in 1915. The criminal action demands punishment for Warners for making President Diaz appear a traitor to Mexico and for alleged distortion of Mexican history.

Sr. Diaz announced the organization here of the Committee for the Defense of the Memory of General Diaz.

Experts View Picture

At the invitation of Warners, the courts designated a committee of six experts in cinematographic, historical and journalistic matters to view "Juarez" at its offices here and report on the parts of the film that are the basis of the Diaz suits. These experts, who each were paid $22.50 for this service, are Dr. Jesus Guisa y Azevedo, Pedro A. Gonzalez, Jose Valadez, Rafael Heliodoro Valle, Salvador Novo and Srita. Catalina D'Erzell. Warners' lawyer in the case is Lic. Enrique M. Correa. The report of these experts, it is expected, will figure prominently in the courts' decision on both the Diaz actions.

Sr. Diaz explains that he intends to use most of the money he expects to recover from Warners in his civil suit to finance an intensive publicity campaign by newspapers, picture shorts and radio to tell the world "of the true and patriotic character of my late father." The rest of the money he hopes to obtain, he said, will go to himself and others of the Diaz family as consolation for the "indignity this picture has done us."

DISNEY CHARGES NLRB WITH STRIKE 'MEDDLING'

Cartoon Studio Rejects Offer to Arbitrate Strike; Publicists Guild Awaits Poll Result

Hollywood's No 1 current labor trouble, the strike at the Walt Disney studio, continued this week, its seventh, after failure of many negotiations and as the studio, Monday, rejected arbitration by the United States Department of Labor, and charged the National Labor Relations Board with "meddling."

Meanwhile, the Screen Publicists Guild eastern unit, in New York, predicted overwhelming victory and immediate negotiations on a closed shop contract as the ballots were counted, Thursday, at the National Labor Relations Board offices in New York, after a bargaining agency election last week in the publicity and advertising departments of the majors' home offices.

Attacks NLRB

The Disney rejection, Monday, of the Labor Department's offer to arbitrate the dispute between the studio and the Screen Cartoonists Guild, was accompanied by the charge by Gunther Lessing, Disney vice-president, that the National Labor Relations Board "seems to have unjustly thwarted our employees in attempts at self-determination, by unjustifiable stalling, meddling, and contacting our bankers, apparently for purposes of pressing us; and by other similar procedures which, in my opinion, almost warrant a Congressional investigation."

Over the weekend, J. R. Steelman, director of the Labor Department's conciliation service, had wired to the studio and the Guild, proposing that three persons in the Government service arbitrate issues not agreed upon, with provisos that the decision would be made within one month and be binding, and that the strikers be enabled to return to work without discrimination

The Guild accepted the offer.

The studio reported work proceeding normally, despite picket lines.

Continuing its endeavor to enlist all support, the Guild's strikers' committee announced late last week that American Federation of Labor painters' locals throughout the country would protest and picket showings of Disney films at theatres.

The signing by the studio and several AFL IATSE craft unions heretofore supporting the Guild, of a closed shop contract last week, was attacked by the Guild as evidence of the intrusion of Willie Bioff, West Coast ATSE leader, under indictments for extortion and income tax invasion. William Littlejohn, Guild president, called Bioff's activity "strikebreaking."

Mr. Lessing replied: "Mr. Bioff merely wanted to see if something couldn't be done to settle the strike. He set on foot machinery for the settlement. This personal attack on him is cruel under the circumstances."

Guild Predicts Victory

The Screen Publicists Guild Eastern unit, New York, this week predicted victory in the bargaining agency elections held last week in the publicity and advertising departments of the majors' home offices. Ballots were counted Thursday, at the New York office of the National Labor Relations Board. The Guild also predicted that, anticipating certification, it would press for negotiations on a closed shop contract, long sought.

The Guild, at a membership meeting last week, unanimously passed a resolution urging that President Roosevelt reappoint Edwin S. Smith as member of the NLRB. Mr. Smith's term expires next month. The Guild said it was indebted to Mr. Smith "for his sympathetic understanding."

The American Federation of Radio Artists strike against radio station WKRC, Cincinnati, was settled Monday night. The agreement is designed to prevent future strikes. It also ends possibilty of a resultant strike by the union against the Mutual Broadcasting System, which "feeds" WKRC.

The settlement provides an "AFRA" shop, and submits remaining disputed issues to William H. Davis, chairman of the National Defense Mediation Board. It followed withdrawal of an AFRA complaint to the NLRB.

Meanwhile, AFRA also signed a new pact with the Mutual chain.

Labor Rights Defined

Two bills in the House of Representatives, introduced last week, reflect the recent and repeated strictures against labor union "monopoly" by Thurman W. Arnold, Assistant United States Attorney General, in charge of the Department of Justice's anti-trust division.

They are sponsored by Representative Monroney, Democrat, of Oklahoma, and Representative Walter, Democrat, of Pennsylvania, and define "legitimate" objectives of labor unions. They also provide that unions, officers, and members, may be prosecuted under anti-trust laws, if they restrain trade in illegal objectives.

The Clayton act, of 1914, provides that labor unions shall not be amenable to anti-trust prosecution for "lawfully carrying out" their "legitimate objects."

The Empire State Operators' Union and the Century circuit, New York, last week signed a new ten year agreement, effective last Saturday. It provides an average increase of projectionists' wages, of approximately 22 per cent, and a closed shop. There are also clauses providing for annual revision, for adjustments if living costs rise, and for use of Empire men when and if television equipment is installed by the circuit.

The union, meeting last week, again rejected proposals for amalgamation with Local 306, the IATSE projectionists' union.

Silent Film House Opens

The second of the motion picture theatres to feature silent films is the Movie Parade in Hollywood, Cal. The other is the Laugh Parade in the same city opened several months ago by M. Citron. The Movie Parade, in conjunction with the Academy of Motion Pictures is currently showing Lon Chaney in "The Unholy Three." This film was preceded by Douglas Fairbanks in "The Three Musketeers." The theatre opened a few weeks ago with the showing of D. W. Griffith's "Intolerance."

Warners Acquire Theatre

The Warner circuit has leased the Alhambra theatre in Torrington, Conn., a 1,250-seat theatre which recently was completely renovated. Ephrem Smith of Torrington is the owner.

New Mississippi Theatre

Paramount-Richards, Inc., has obtained a permit to construct a new motion picture theatre in Greenwood, Miss., with a seating capacity of 1,000 at a cost of $48,000.

Taxation Urged For Coin Movies

Exhibitors, realizing the potential effect of slot movies on receipts, are pressing local legislators to enforce taxation on the machines.

Late in June James Roosevelt's Globe Productions and Mill's Panoram Soundies Machines were introduced in Philadelphia for a four-weeks test before being distributed to other points nearby.

At Gloucester, N. J., a $10 license fee has been imposed on all pinball, music box and coin-operated devices.

Reports from Montgomery, Ala., are that the coin-movies have been greeted with only a luke-warm reception since the public in that vicinity feel there is too little margin between a slot machine's three minutes of picture for a dime and a full-length feature, newsreel and short subject at the popular priced theatres for 15 cents.

Fees in Pittsburgh

The Treasurer's office in Pittsburgh estimates that the department will collect approximately $152,000 in coin-machine license fees by the end of the year. To June 15th, the office had collected $91,700.

Meanwhile, the city council in that city will soon consider placing the various vending machines, including theatre candy and gum machines, under a fee of $1 each. The consideration was brought up as a result of a ruling handed down by Judge Sara Soffel of the county court that the vending machines tax is illegal, because it places a discriminatory levy on one type of merchandising against another.

Within the past few weeks coin-operated movie projection machines made their appearance in about 20 hotels, restaurants and taverns in St. Louis. The machines are being distributed in that territory by the Olive Novelty Company of St. Louis.

In Hollywood, Techniprocess, Featurettes and Songograph, three coin-in-the-slot producers, have merged and will operate under the name of Associated Producing Distributors, Inc.

Saul M. Greenberg, attorney for the Greater Cincinnati Independent Exhibitors Association, has filed a petition with the city council in Cincinnati, urging enactment of a special ordinance for the annual license of $10 to $15 for coin-operated movie machines. These are not covered by the existing theatre-licensing ordinance.

Early this month it was announced from Hollywood the Mills Novelty Co. would spend $1,200,000 next year to make 208 soundies, each to run three minutes. Sam Coslow will be in charge of production and Herman Webber, production manager, working under Mr. Coslow. Josef Berne has been signed to a term contract to handle directions of these subjects.

Production on the first group of subjects started last week with the following scheduled to appear: Gale Page, Mary Healy, Martha Tilton, Duncan Sisters, Dave Rose and his orchestra, Buddy Rogers and his band, Skinnay Ennis and his band, Johnny Downs, Borrah Minevitch and Sterling Holloway. John Barry will be in charge of the subjects to be produced in the east.

The Ways and Means Committee of the Massachusetts House of Representatives was scheduled to hold a public hearing this week on bills providing for the licensing, taxation and regulation of the juke-box movies which are reported to have over-run the New England area within the past six months.

Introduced there in December, the slot-machine movies had, by the end of June, a total of more than 250 locations, each yielding approximately $150 to $200 weekly.

The measures scheduled for public hearing marked the first attempt of the motion picture industry to check, through some sort of regulation, the spread of the machines. At present, there is little expense in operating the juke-boxes because there is no licensing fee or tax. The only cost to the operators is the initial investment and product rental.

The tremendous inroad which the nickel-movies have made on theatres throughout the area has resulted in a great amount of industry interest in the measure now before the legislative committee and it was expected a large portion of the industry would be present.

Most exhibitors were of the opinion that the slot machine movies, if allowed at all, should be placed under restrictions comparable to those facing exhibitors. A censorship of films, together with a regular film inspection charge, were the chief points desired by exhibitors.

The Salt Lake City commissioners believe they have established something new in blackouts. They have inaugurated a nightly three-hour shutdown of juke-boxes, established in the interest of the community's peace, dignity and beauty sleep.

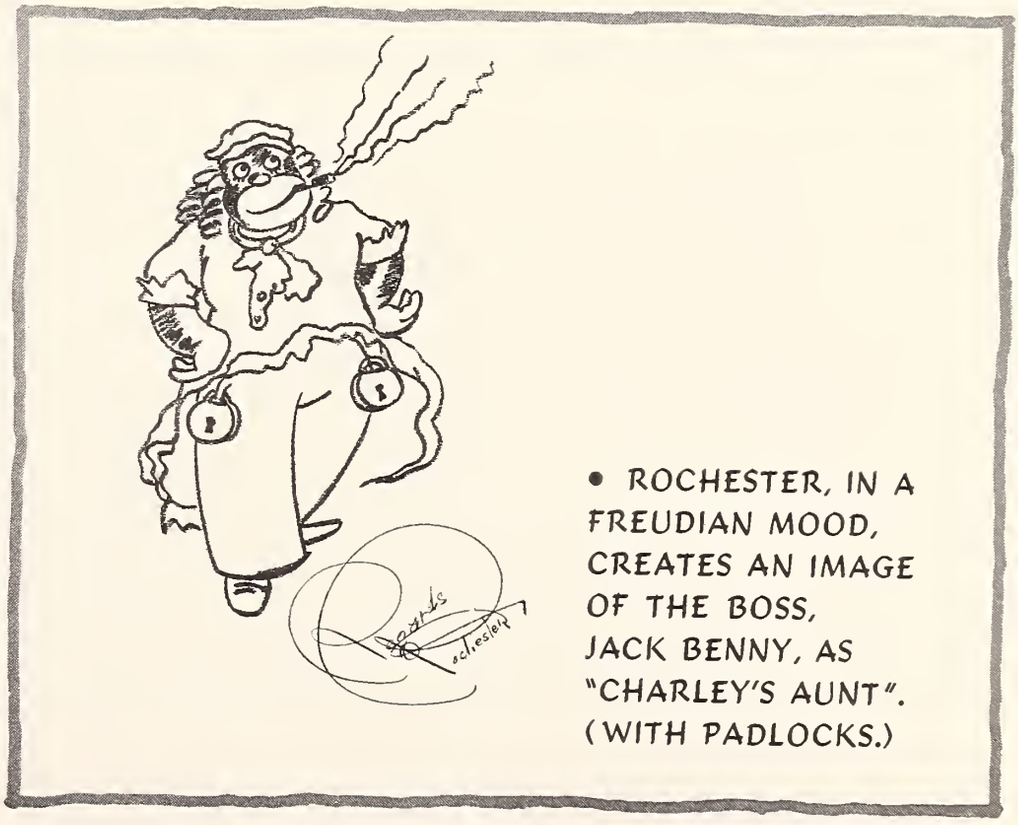
Push Film Aid in USO Campaign



An "all out" drive to meet the industry's pledges to the United Service Organizations was launched on Monday at New York by Joseph Hazen, film chairman, as the fund reached 70 per cent of pledges. It was planned to raise the balance of 30 per cent in three days. Mr. Hazen said that while pledges had been extensive there was some procrastination in meeting promises. He urged a final effort on part of the industry.

Loew's, Inc., at New York donated $5,000 plus several thousand dollars from employe offerings. Warner Brothers pledged a similar amount to the New York fund. Mr. Hazen indicated that if the quota was not met by Thursday the drive would be extended.

Hollywood, more than doubling its quota of $60,000 led the film industry's contributions to the USO with a fund of $112,398. William Wellman and Edward Arnold, chairman of the drive, said that studio contributions were well over 80 per cent. At Columbia 1,450 of 1,458 workers were reported to have contributed. Total quota for the Los Angeles area, including theatres, is $387,000. This includes a $100,000 gift from Edward G. Robinson and $20,000 from a Hollywood Bowl variety show. Theatres in Southern California were to start their drive for $100,000 on Thursday with appeals via trailers and on stages and in lobbies.

Jack Kirsch, head of Illinois Allied, at Chicago last week called on the industry to raise $10,000 for USO by July 25th. John Balaban, Edward Silverman, and Clyde Eckhardt joined in the appeal to exhibitors. John Smith and Frank Olson of projectionists and stagehands unions, pledged overtime work to show the USO trailers.

The Treasury Department at Washington this week ruled that contributions to the USO are deductible from personal and corporate income taxes as charitable donations. The USO itself was also exempted from taxation.

NEW BORN COMMERCIAL TELEVISION FACES PRODUCTION, LABOR PROBLEMS

War Priorities Curtail Manufacturing of Sets; Unions and Guilds Threaten Jurisdictional Fights; Programs Are Tested

Commercial television, active at present only in New York, and actually commercial over only one station, the National Broadcasting Company's WNBT, began to smooth off this week into a production routine, despite large clouds of uncertainties on the close horizon.

War, and its curtailment on set production, and adjustment to new standards of receivers now in use appeared to be the most immediate problem. Labor, with threats of showdowns within union groups over jurisdiction and demands on the broadcasters for special contracts also appeared nearing the problem stage. Production methods, sponsorship, and the building-up of audiences, however, occupied most of the current attention, and their prospects to executives appeared least gloomy of all current prospects.

CBS Tests Color

Experimental programs, pending full commercial licensing continued to emit from the CBS studios in Grand Central Terminal; and from the few listeners able to tune in the new Columbia waveband there were indications of enthusiasm over what they saw. CBS production men meanwhile grew increasingly confident that they had found a successful program rule in informality. Experiments on color were also much in the CBS limelight.

On Thursday CBS was to make its first test transmission in color from its Chrysler building station. Previous tests have been via cable and in the laboratory. Dr. Peter Goldmark, television research chief, was to supervise the color program. A program of folk dances in native costumes was prepared for the test by Worthington Miner, studio director. About a dozen sets in New York are equipped to receive the three-color signals.

Du Mont with its transmitter and studios at 515 Madison Ave. was still in the throes of testing, and had not received needed equipment from priority bound manufacturers. Nevertheless program department and engineers reported themselves ready to take the air within a few days. On Wednesday Du Mont asked the FCC for a commercial license.

Actors Equity, which has claimed jurisdiction over television performers from 1931, continued to lead demands for a decision by the parent Associated Actors and Artistes of America on television jurisdiction. Equity, the Screen Actors Guild, and the American Federation of Radio Artists all seek control of the new medium.

An Equity spokesman reported that Walter Greza, chairman of the television committee, was seeking an early meeting, next week if possible, between representatives of the three unions. It was hoped that jurisdiction might be amicably settled in conference. If not it will be carried to the governing Four A's and the American Federation of Labor high command.

Complicating the call for an early meeting were plans on the part of the radio actors for a national convention at Denver in August. It was believed that the AFRA representatives in New York would seek to postpone any television decisions until the subject had been thoroughly debated at the convention. Meanwhile the screen and stage actors were apprehensive lest "unfavorable practices become established" during the first commercial television.

Local 802, New York chapter of the American Federation of Musicians also entered the television scene this week with plans to seek a separate television contract. A committee will approach the broadcasters on the subject next week. Jack Rosenberg, president, heads the delegation which includes Leonard Fineberg, secretary, John Manuti, Aldo Ricci, and Shirley Thompson.

Wage scales and hours, for performance and rehearsal, such as prevail in radio and stage work, reportedly will form the basis of the musicians demands. It is understood that they will ask higher wages, as with stage and screen appearances for programs on which they are pictured in addition to providing music.

Executives of the New York stations indicated that they will meet with the unions, and were hopeful of early settlements "in accord with the industry's still infant commercial status." They pointed out that in most instances actors on experimental programs, currently, and last year, relative to time worked were paid equally or better than prevailing stage scales for program and rehearsals.

NBC on Monday signed its first extensive sponsorship contract, excluding the Bulova watch time announcement purchases announced two weeks ago, with the Adam Hat Stores, Inc., for television coverage of boxing at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn. The agreement covers six bouts beginning July 22nd with the Burman-Bettina ten-round match.

NBC, it was reported, will broadcast both the main bout and preliminary rounds to fill its required evening time. Jack Fraser will announce the contests specially for the television audience. Adam Hats also sponsors regular broadcast of the bouts.

Arthur Mayer, managing director of the Rialto theatre, New York, where a large screen Scopohony receiver has been installed and is being adjusted to new standards indicated that his counsel had assured him that he had the right to present the pictures. It was not reported whether the apparatus would be ready by the 22nd or whether it would be used. If it is, attorneys predict a test lawsuit to define television rights.

WNBT's third week of commercial programs was in the pattern of previous commercial bills, alternating between studio films and outdoor sports pickup. On Wednesday a new women's matinee directed by Bill Colling, who has "doubled-in-brass" successfully as television press agent, producer and announcer, took the air. It featured fashions, cooking lessons, beauty instruction and housekeeping advice. Vyvyan Donner, fashion editor of Fox Movietone News, acted as mistress of ceremonies.

Films on the air included more travelogues and educational shorts on health, hobbies and science. Features included "Tumbleweeds," William S. Hart western, released by Astor pictures, and the second in the Yale University Chronicles of America series. A U. S. Government film, "Carlsbad Caverns," made by the Department of Interior's Park Service was also aired.

Exhibitors, Distributors in Canada Pigeon-hole Television Until Peace

by W. M. GLADISH
in Toronto

"What is it?" is the question asked in Canada when anybody mentions television.

Without doubt, there is nothing in the way of scientific development which is receiving such scant attention in the Dominion as the visual form of air transmission. No attention is being paid to it either from a popular or experimental viewpoint. It has been put aside because of the war. And the expected result will be that Canada will be far astern in television progress for perhaps many years to come—it will have to depend upon the creative construction in the United States.

Exhibitors are not giving the slightest thought to television either as a companion to screen entertainment or as opposition to film performances. Reports from the U. S. that the big broadcasting chains are ready to produce television come like an undecipherable message to the average Canadian theatre operator. It's foreign, in the strict sense.

Television was one of the first items to be put aside by the Canadian Government at the start of the war. There are indications that a television organization which had been in the making by Canadian Broadcasting Corporation has been broken up because of announcements that this or that employee who had been at work on television research had been transferred to other activities in the Government service. C. B. C. had guarded itself for the future by securing monopoly rights on television in the Dominion through the legislative channel some years before the war came. So that appears to be the end of television in Canada for the time being and, if the war lasts for a long time, the country will be virgin ground for televised features long after the novelty has worn off elsewhere.

Similarly, in Great Britain, where the B. B. C. and manufacturers had pioneered in television experiment and its commercial application, particularly in theatres, all visual broadcasting was halted "for the duration".

Theatre Personnel Called to Service

Various branches of the industry continue to be depleted by the calls issued by the Selective Service boards, voluntary enlistments, etc. The following of the motion picture industry have joined the various branches of the service:

Action on Ohio's Film Rental Tax Issue

P. J. Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, has notified state exhibitors that the ITO will, upon notice, handle for them without charge any subpoenaes they may receive in the pending film rental tax suit. A number of Columbus exhibitors have been subpoenaed to appear with their records in order that the plaintiff's attorneys could question them.

The ITO, as interested parties, has intervened in the suit, which was filed a few years ago by J. V. Bostick, a Columbus taxpayer, contesting the validity of the Ohio State Tax Commission's action in exempting film rentals from the three per cent tax on gross sales, and seeking a mandamus order to compel collection of the tax, claimed to be default since the inception of the law five years ago. This, plus penalties, would amount to a large sum.

The State Tax Department maintains that film rentals are tax exempt, according to a ruling of the Attorney General, rendered despite an opinion of the Tax Board that film rentals come within the classification of taxable commodities.

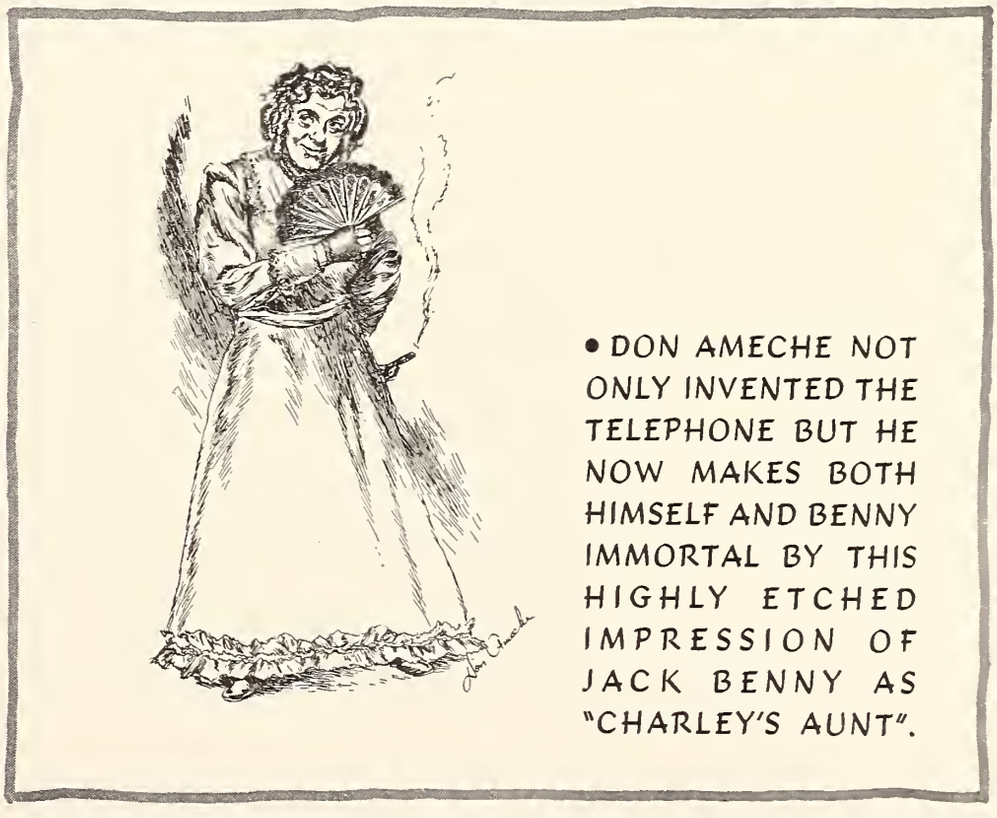
Under the law, distributors would collect the tax from exhibitors for remittance to the State, which would mean that distributors would be compelled to pay taxes for these exhibitors who have discontinued business during the five-year period that the tax law has been effective.

Samuels Is Foreign Head

Leo Samuels will be in charge of all Walt Disney foreign deals under the new set-up since the resignation of Hal Horne and Richard Condon, it was announced this week by Roy Disney, vice-president and general manager, before leaving the coast for New York. Mr. Samuels has been with the Disney organization for the past three years in the same capacity.

Films to Educate 'Awkward Squad'

Closer liaison between the U. S. Army and Hollywood, with increasing production of training and service films on the West Coast was seen at Hollywood this week as Major General Charles S. Richardson, Jr., new public relations officer for the War Department, arrived with Lieutenant Colonel W. Mason Wright, Jr., to confer with industry leaders.



Subjects due for discussion included further filming of training subjects under the auspices of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, filming of the large scale army maneuvers this fall, new technical studies for the tank corps, air force and other specialized branches and further production of entertainment films dealing with the service. Appointment of a permanent public relations officer to work with the motion picture industry's national defense committee was seen as a possibility.

Sees Aid to Morale

General Richardson, classing himself as "the Army's first movie fan," said that motion pictures were invaluable morale aids in the day of a "war of nerves." Arrangements will be made to make more Army equipment available for Hollywood filming, it was reported.

In Canada the War ministry at Ottawa reported a much increased use of films by the Dominion army in its training camps. Sound equipment has been installed in almost all cantonments and central technical film libraries have been set up.

Films are classified in general and technical groups. The first are used in mass instruction of infantry, artillery and other large scale services. Technical pictures are used as a cheap and reportedly very effective, method of instructing specialists. The Director of Military Training at Ottawa is reported to be preparing an extensive production illustrating new German "blitz" methods of warfare.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

MEET BOSTON BLACKIE: Chester Morris, Rochelle Hudson—Nice little adventure story that is fast moving and holds interest. No drawing power, but those that saw it liked it. Ran it with "Men of Boys Town" to as much business as I can expect when the town is practically empty. Running time, 61 minutes. Played June 20-21.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

PENNY SERENADE: Irene Dunne, Cary Grant—This is our weak season, but we actually made some money on this one. Everyone in town must have been there. In a good season this would have gone over the top for us. What it did do was amazing. Incidentally, it is a perfect picture made for everybody. Maybe that is why it is doing well everywhere. Word-of-mouth was dandy. Running time, 124 minutes. Played June 13-14.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

SO YOU WON'T TALK: Joe E. Brown—Joe E. Brown still has entertainment value but is not the Joe E. Brown he used to be. Business just fair. —Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

THIS THING CALLED LOVE: Rosalind Russell, Melvyn Douglas—Played three days with "Night Train." Business poor. People tired of propaganda pictures.—Reek A. Zelziani, Midtown Theatre, San Francisco, Calif. Neighborhood patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ANDY HARDY'S PRIVATE SECRETARY: Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney, Ann Rutherford, Kathryn Grayson—Good picture to excellent business. Running time, 101 minutes. Played June 18-19.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

COME LIVE WITH ME: James Stewart, Hedy Lamarr—Everyone seemed to like this one. Running time, 86 minutes. Played June 8-9.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

LAND OF LIBERTY: Historical—Just clips from old pictures. Advertising and trailer misleading. More complaints and "walk-outs" on this picture than any we have ever shown. Running time, 98 minutes. Played June 4-5.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

LAND OF LIBERTY: Historical—Had a good crowd but probably not because of this film. Ran this with "Sunny," helped by a theatre party of 160. It is certainly a good and unusual piece of work and should be kept available for educational purposes. However, is it material for a theatre? Some thought it excellent; some thought it O.K.; some thought it boring; and some walked out shortly after it started. The numbers of each were about evenly divided. It is hard to decide about a thing like this. I still think DeMille deserves a lot of credit for a hard job well done. Running time, 98 minutes. Played July 2-3.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred N. Y. Small college town patronage.

MEN OF BOYS TOWN: Spencer Tracy, Mickey Rooney, Bobs Watson, Larry Nunn—Excellent sequel that was enjoyed by all who came. This is no time of the year for me to run it, but I have to get these films run off sometime. I'll be glad when this summer season is on the way out. Played with "Meet Boston Blackie." Running time, 106 minutes. Played June 20-21.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

PHILADELPHIA STORY, THE: Katharine Hepburn, Cary Grant, James Stewart—Disappointed on this one. Business off and picture pleased only a few. Running time, 112 minutes. Played June 15-16. —Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

ZIEGFELD GIRL: James Stewart, Judy Garland, Hedy Lamarr, Lana Turner—I wish they would get away from these super-long pictures. They would be better a little shorter. This one is spectacular, has a good cast, good music, and good acting, but it misses fire somewhere. Probably the plot is just too cumbersome to handle easily. A small crowd liked it fairly well. Running time, 131 minutes. Played June 27-28.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

BORDER VIGILANTES: William Boyd, Russell Hayden—In this spot Hopalong does not draw as good as he used to. Running time, 60 minutes. Played June 20-21.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

VIRGINIA: Madeleine Carroll, Fred MacMurray, Carolyn Lee—Plenty good and so was business. Running time, 108 minutes. Played June 1-2.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

YOU'RE THE ONE: Bonnie Baker, Orrin Tucker and his Band—This picture seemed to please everyone. Doing nice business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Republic

IN OLD CHEYENNE: Roy Rogers, George "Gabby" Hayes—We enjoyed nice week-end business on this picture. Played it on single bill with no regrets.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

RKO Radio

MAD MISS MANTON, THE: Barbara Stanwyck, Henry Fonda—This picture was billed for the opening of the new Centre Theatre in Chatham and did outstanding business for three days. Opinions were divided.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

MARINES FLY HIGH, THE: Richard Dix, Chester Morris, Lucille Ball—A very good program picture that did above average business on a double bill.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

MR. AND MRS. SMITH: Carole Lombard, Robert Montgomery, Gene Raymond—Due to the extreme heat, I would say it unfair to pass judgment on this picture as to our box office returns, as they were below average. I believe that under normal conditions it should do well in any situation.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

MY FAVORITE WIFE: Irene Dunne, Cary Grant, Randolph Scott, Gail Patrick—An excellent picture with plenty of action and many good comedy scenes. One of the most appreciated pictures we have shown here in some time. Running time, 88 minutes. Played June 7-8.—W. J. Overstreet, Florida State Prison, Raiford, Fla. Prison patronage.

SUNNY: Anna Neagle, Ray Bolger, John Carroll, Edward Everett Horton—Ran this with "Land of Liberty" to very good summer business because of a theatre party of 160 that came from a local religious convention. I think it is by far the best of Miss Neagle's musicals. Good music, dancing, and comedy, with slow moments far apart. Comedy by Edward Everett Horton and the Hartmans had the house in an uproar. Probably the good crowd makes me feel good but I think what I am saying is true. Running time, 98 minutes. Played July 2-3.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BRIGHAM YOUNG, FRONTIERSMAN: Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell, Dean Jagger—The valiant and heroic struggle of a religious sect striving to secure freedom and a welcome place to live peaceably. All parts well played and greatly appreciated by our audience. Running time, 110 minutes. Played June 28-29.—W. J. Overstreet, Florida State Prison, Raiford, Fla. Prison patronage.

GIRL IN THE NEWS: Margaret Lockwood, Barry K. Barnes—It ought to be against the law for people to stay home like they did on this one. Total receipts for the two days was a little less than five dollars. Although the English accent is not too bad and the picture is a well-done drama, they just didn't want to see it. It will take us quite a while to make up for the loss on this one. Running time, 77 minutes. Played June 17-18.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

TOBACCO ROAD: Gene Tierney, Charley Grapewin, Marjorie Rambeau—I was surprised at this. After all the knocks I read on this picture, I did not think it would draw. But it did extra good business and seemed to please most of them. Running time, 84 minutes. Played June 13-14—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

WESTERN UNION: Robert Young, Randolph Scott, Dean Jagger, Virginia Gilmore—Very good picture to good business. Running time, 95 minutes. Played June 6-7.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

United Artists

REAL GLORY, THE: Gary Cooper, Andrea Leeds, David Niven—An historic picture depicting the testing of the initial Philippine Army. Action and sound dragged in spots, but was generally well-received. Running time, 96 minutes. Played July 5-6.—W. J. Overstreet, Florida State Prison, Raiford, Fla. Prison patronage.

ROAD SHOW: Adolphe Menjou, Carole Landis, Charles Butterworth, Patsy Kelly—Good enough wacky comedy that got laughs from the lonesome few that attended the showings. This is our weak season but, please, not so weak next week. Running time, 87 minutes. Played June 10-11.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

SO ENDS OUR NIGHT: Fredric March, Margaret Sullavan, Frances Dee, Glenn Ford—Although nothing can draw a crowd here in the summer, this one surprised me by doing better than some others we have played lately. It is very well done and, for once, the Nazi angle did not seem to hurt attendance. The book, "Flotsam," is well known and probably helped. Running time, 129 minutes. Played June 24-25.—W. Varick Nevins II, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

Warner Brothers

FLIGHT ANGELS: Virginia Bruce, Dennis Morgan, Wayne Morris, Jane Wyman—An unusual plot and some real information about the airline of today, and a real romance which thrilled our audience completely. Running time, 74 minutes. Played June 14-15.—W. J. Overstreet, Florida State Prison, Raiford, Fla. Prison patronage.

Should be run everywhere. Running time, 18 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

NIFTY NINETIES: Walt Disney Cartoons—This Disney color cartoon is well drawn but hasn't the cleverness and action that make people enjoy these generally. Only laughs came in last thirty seconds. Running time, 8 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

ATTACK ON BRITISH PROPAGANDA FILMS REVEALS UNIT RIVALRIES

Films Division of Ministry of Information Praised for Improvement in Product; Foreign Unit of Council Is Attacked

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Parliamentary artillery blazing into critical action this week in the year's most aggressive onslaught on the Government propaganda and its use of the Ministry of Information was expected to direct more than one salvo at that body's Films Division, on the administration's whole attitude to the publicity uses of the screen. The reverse happened. But a few desultory shots were fired, the Ministry's film section was hardly considered at all, and when it was the action was defensive rather than offensive.

Principal assailant of the Government was Mr. Bernays, M. P. for Bristol. Critical in the extreme of the Ministry of Information he yet tributed "I think its film service is excellent. It has developed a new technique in the very short film which combines instruction and information and exhortation, and in no way irritates the audience."

Joining the slender harmonious chorus came Mr. Graham White of Birkenhead: "The films section is the encouraging part of the work of the Ministry of Information. It is encouraging in more ways than one. In the first year of its activities I do not say that it was a case of misdirected energy but of general futility. The Select Committee on expenditure, which had occasion to consider the Film Section, recommended that it should be either mended or ended. The decision was taken that it should be mended rather than ended, and I am glad to say that it is doing work of the very highest quality."

Section Reorganized

It would seem admitted that the Films Division and the whole machinery of Government propaganda by film has undergone a metamorphosis since, in August last, the Select Committee scarified it with a report which alleged inefficiency, interference, lack of collaboration with the industry and an insufficient realization of the foreign field. Changes in method and personnel have been brought about at Malet Street since that searing indictment was issued. New faces have appeared in the Division, older ones have disappeared. Some of the personalities previously associated with the Ministry of Information have gone over to that state sponsored organ of cultural propaganda the British Council, whose film activities are second only to those of the Ministry. Principal figures at the Ministry's Films Division remain Jack Beddington erstwhile publicist of the Shell Oil concern, and trade expert Sidney Berstein, both of whom have, it is said, survived onslaughts both open and clandestine upon their tenure and operations.

Whilst the Ministry continues direct and straightforward propaganda at home and abroad (it has sponsored at least 200 films to date), the British Council with Government finance in the form of a Foreign Office grant, and with a Foreign Office nominee on its Council, essays "cultural" propaganda abroad on behalf of "those aspects of Britain which are pleasing," to quote Philip Guedalla, its Chairman. The two organizations are supposedly supplementary, allegedly collaborative. In fact they are notoriously competitive, openly critical possibly suspicious of one another, a circumstance not improbably assisted by the presence on the British Council's staff of personnel hitherto employed at the Films Division. Whilst outside authorities hitherto twitted the Films Division with high-handedness and self-assumed infallibility, they now criticise the British Council for being reactionary, point to associations with the Central Office of the Conservative Party, claim that the Council's films are oblivious to progressive thought and ideas.

Wins Trade Interest

On a factual record it appears that the Ministry's Films Division with 200 films to its credit to date, has succeeded in breaking down trade disinterest. The weekly film issue, which has persuaded five minutes out of every film programme to Government propaganda, is a case in point. The generous distribution of Ministry films on purely commercial lines, the immense success not only in Great Britain, but abroad, of such films as "Britain Can Take It," "Squadron 992," "Xmas Under Fire," "Merchant Seaman" consolidate the Ministry's claim that their work has been worth while.

Of these films some 150 are one-reelers, and the others two and three-reelers. Average costs of the Ministry's films have gone up too, and the producers who have made films to its order have publicly paid tribute to the progressive budgeting being applied the films so sponsored. The weekly five-minute films now cost approximately a pound (five dollars) a foot. Copies have been the biggest expense, and with a view to reducing this the Division has increased the original five distribution categories to seven, so that the films now run in some places seven weeks after they have been shown in Number One spots.

Typical of the type of film now being sponsored by the Ministry were a batch shown under the aegis of the 1940 Committee and reviewed elsewhere in this issue. They include two vivid studies of the adjustment of schools, one a senior and the other an infants school, to wartime conditions, emphasising the democratic idea, exemplifying the problems of evacuation, a powerful appeal to parents to have their children immunized against infectious diseases, a plea for the billeting officer, who handles evacuees, and an expose of maternity and child clinics in wartime. All had been made by the younger and more progressive producers.

Exclusively overseas propaganda but propaganda with no reference to war, rather to establishing the more pleasing aspect and qualities of Britain is the objective and purpose of the Films Division's friendly rival the British Council. This body operating with Treasury money—but, it is said, also making films with outside finance—has between 60 and 70 films to its name, and has ten in the process of production with 40/50 to come. Most of these films are aimed at self-supporting distribution, are dubbed in seven different languages (Afrikans, Dutch, French, Portuguese, Brazilian Portuguese, Spanish and Colombian Spanish) and disseminated through selected channels, some commercial, some non-theatrical, others purely educational.

Explain Council's Object

Explaining its objects the Council says "These films form no part of an effort to portray the face of Britain and her people in their everyday lives and work. . . . There is no attempt to depict the nation's war effort or to state the issues which the war raises for ordinary men and women throughout the world. . . . They show the enduring fabric of freedom and progress which lives and works long after warmakers have been forgotten."

Exposing this fabric the Council recently invited diplomats, Embassy staffs, Members of Parliament, and Service officers, to a show which included a film on British cattle breeding, a Technicolor record of colored cotton fabrics, a topical on Ulster, and a short designed to suggest that every elementary school child carries a university degree in its knapsack. The Council also issues weekly a newsreel composed of material supplied by the various commercial reels and aimed at distribution outside the British Isles.

Other films on the Council's cultural list include such titles as "Architects of England," "The Green Girdle" (London's Great Outdoors), "Good Sport" (Britain at Play), "Oxford," "S. O. S." (The work of the Lifeboats), "Sheepdog" (The Shepherd's Workmate), "The Story of the Apple" (Science in the Orchard) and "Fitness Wins the Game."

Criticism of the British Council was intense at the time that body was responsible for the films shown in the British Pavilion at the New York World's Fair. The columns of the more liberal press, e. g., the Manchester Guardian, Daily Herald, News Chronicle, New Statesmen and less "advanced" organs such as the Times, Daily Express, Evening Standard and Spectator were punctuated with suggestions that the films shown there were neither representative nor effective from the British point of view. A chorus in the same vein has more recently broken forth in the left wing press asking, a propos the films shown by the British Council "What value will these films have in the South and North Americas when Britain is fighting for her life and for a new world?"

MGM To Resume

It is understood authoritatively here that MGM is planning the revival of British production activities, although no official statement has been issued on the matter.

Plans here, it is believed, call for the resumption of production by the American company in the immediate future.

Among production probabilities, it is said, are the arrival here soon of Clarence Brown, MGM director, from Hollywood to produce and direct Robert Donat in "Cargo of Innocence." Other production plans are said to be indefinite.

BRITISH THEATRES TURN TO SINGLES

London reports that more than 1,000 English theatres will turn to a policy of single features in the near future. Plans are now under way for a reduction in the length of theatre programs. Majority support for the single bill policy is understood to be assured for a joint circuit meeting on the matter set for this week. Associated British and Gaumont British are understood to have decided definitely on the policy.

The general council meeting of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association on Wednesday was to consider the limiting of programs to 11,000 feet.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

A JOB TO DO

Now that the previewing of pictures has been confined within reasonable bounds, theatremen who have been pointing with alarum about it may now turn to something else that needs fixing. Being the kind of a business that it is, the motion picture can always depend upon the boys willing to drop whatever they are doing to "man the battlements."

Of course, all managers are not so minded. Will readers be surprised to know that most theatremen restrict their worryings to keeping their houses in order, maintaining high-grade service, and putting over the next attraction? They may be accused of not knowing any different, but these busy people figure that industry ills outside their immediate ken will be doctored by those better set to do so—and for the most part, able to show a respectable record of cures.

This doddering greybeard may be way out of step, but our conception of the manager's job has little to do with soapboxing on the wrongs of the industry. Plenty is wrong—as there is in any business. But this business of ours has enough to sell to a vast audience willing to be sold. And that part of the selling relegated to the manager is a full day's work every working day in the year for the man who hopes to hold up his end.

THE WAY IT WORKS

A recent Round Table ad page included a "Blood and Sand" layout by Eddie Sniderman. It brought him requests for mats from theatremen in situations where advertising facilities are limited, and Eddie "went to bat." Some weeks back, the book told about Chick Tompkins' successful policy change involving a "Variety Hour" of short subjects to replace the second feature. Immediately there was an increase in Chick's mail from Round Tablers asking for more dope which the Manta-man has been rushing out so that others might benefit.

As has often been told here, the immediate purpose of your Round Table is to act as a clearing house for box-office ideas that have proven themselves. Thus, one man puts over an exploitation that hits, reports it here. Detailed in the pages, the idea is picked up by another member, who, in turn, "pays off" with something of his own concocting.

That members take it upon themselves, however, to extend these services in the manner indicated above, is warming reassurance of the theatreman's eagerness to help the other fellow carry a bit of the load.

The campaign undertaken by Columbia Pictures to sell exhibitors on duplicating the recent Philadelphia Bulletin institutional advertising series, is succeeding. Replies from the field indicate wide acceptance and enthusiasm.—See MOTION PICTURE HERALD, July 12th pages 21-22.

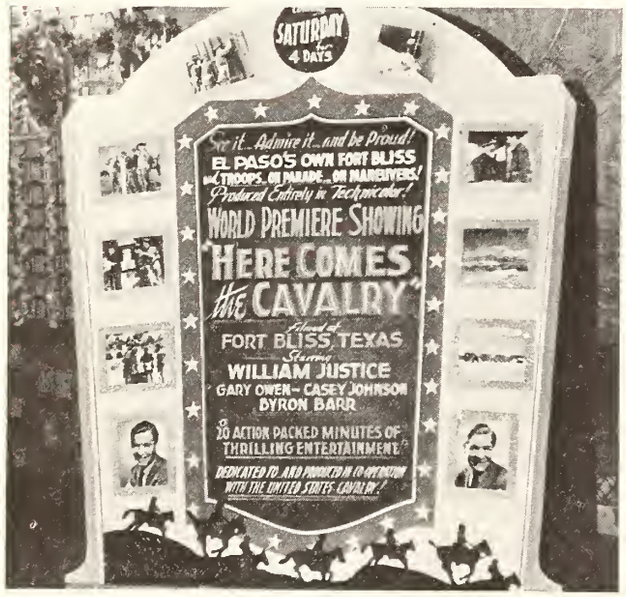
It follows then, that consistent selling of the theatre as an institution is good business and sound showmanship, to be made a definite part of all theatre advertising, all of the time.

Quality of individual attractions may vary from change to change. The quality of theatre entertainment, as such, remains a constant. Day-in and day-out, the motion picture theatre gives its vast audience the "most of the best for the least". No other entertainment offers as much.

These are factors that exhibition must keep hammering into the public consciousness.

POINTING THE WAY

At best, it is no small task for the manager "on his own" to put together effective newspaper advertising. Lack of fundamental training in this work plus limitations of mechanical facilities in smaller situations often make the job that much tougher. That goes as well for the man eager to learn.



With this in mind, Pat McGee makes a progressive step forward in compiling an illustrated advertising manual concentrating upon the fundamentals. It is accompanied by reproductions of actual ads to emphasize what the Schine Ohio district head seeks to convey to his managers.

The manual shows time and effort well spent, for the manager who can present his wares in print adequately is obviously a better investment in manpower. McGee contributes no little to this investment by making it possible for his boys to know a good bit more about it.

Round Table In Pictures

Giant cutout of Grable as she appeared in "Moon Over Miami" was planted in Loew's Poli lobby by Matt Saunders of Bridgeport. At peak hours local life guards and usherettes posed for pictures.

For the personal appearance of Art Davis and his Radio Ramblers, appearing in "Texas Marshall," Louie Charninsky at the Capitol, in Dallas, Texas, poses with the star. Left to right are Louie, Davis and Bill Boyd of Station WRR.

Two regulation U. S. Army parachutes were opened and hung from the ceiling of Warner's Troy, in Troy, N. Y., by Leo Rosen for his advance on "I Wanted Wings." Ballooned by two fans under each, display was completed by four-cylinder motor and other equipment standing 18 feet high and 20 feet wide.

Rosy's 'Man Hunt' Stirs Bridgeport

Bridgeport, Conn., recently broke out with a series of newspaper and store window announcements inviting the public to a man-hunt, that search being directed to the advantage of "Man Hunt" at Loew's Majestic. The promotion was engineered by Morris Rosenthal who obtained the cooperation of the local Times-Star in an offer of cash and guest tickets for those who could identify the certain "man" turned loose upon the main streets at designated times.

The hunt was maintained over a six-day period, breaking with a page-one spread that offered $10 for the reader carrying a copy of the daily who accosted the "man" saying: "Here is my copy of the Times-Star. You are Bridgeport's Hunted Man, aren't you?" The second day story included a shot of the "man," and as each day went by without his capture, the reward was raised by five dollars until the fifth day when he was cornered, the winner receiving $20 and guest tickets to the picture.

Following through on the wide publicity, the paper included bumper strips on all delivery cars, half-sheet cards for newsstands throughout the county, store windows and counters, these carrying the hunt copy and photo of the "man." To add to the interest the paper also ran a special story on the reactions of the New York newspaper critics to the picture and quotes from their reviews.

Nutting Inducts Local Boy Into Service on Stage

Induction of local boy into the service on the stage of the State Theatre, in Mankato, Minn., as the feature of his campaign on "I Wanted Wings" is reported by Floyd Nutting, who put this over impressively with the cooperation of army officials. After making the contacts with the regional army office, a lieutenant and mobile recruiting unit was sent to Mankato for the event.

The stage presentation was an impressive occasion with the Veterans of Foreign War color guard on one side of the stage and on the other the color guard of the American Legion Post. On opening, the bugles played "To the Colors" with the audience standing and followed by officers swearing in the enlisted man, who was a local boy. The ceremony closed with the bugles playing "You're In The Army Now," the picture followed.

Since the inductee was a home town lad, the newspapers and radio went for the idea, giving it plenty of support well in advance. Of importance to the boxoffice was the fact that the tiein played to a capacity house.

McManus' "Big Store" Party

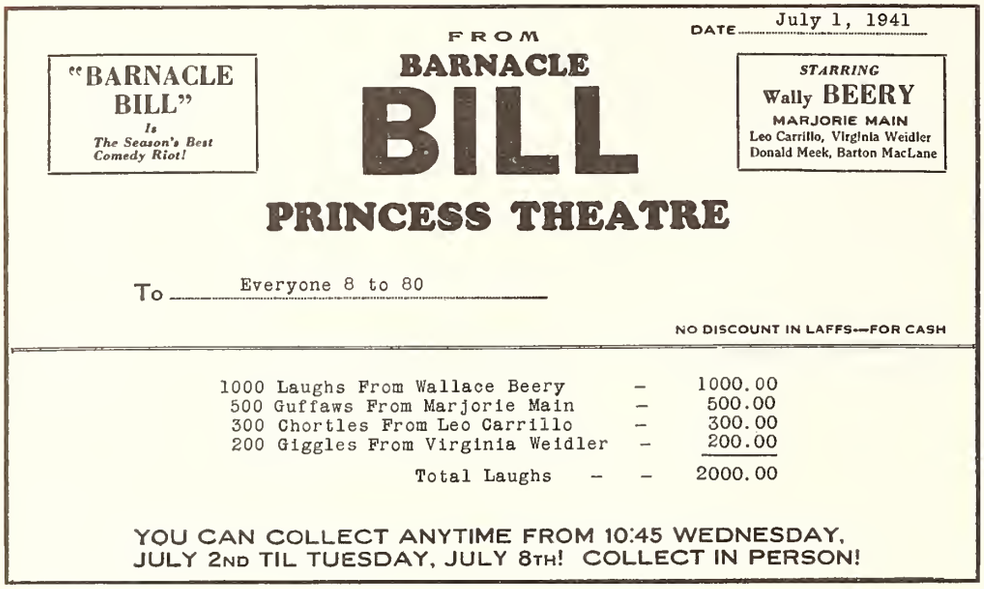
An "Employees' Theatre Party," arranged with a large local department store, proved one of the highlights of "The Big Store" campaign put over by John McManus, Loew's, Kansas City. The store publicized the event in its windows and throughout its different departments.

Round Tabler "Debunks" Publicity —But Lands Two-Column Story

Fred Greenway, new manager of Loew's Palace Theatre in Hartford, Conn., took over Julian B. Tuthill's column in the Hartford Times, the other day for a two-column article debunking publicity stunts.

Greenway managed to get in some nice plugs for the new Marx Brothers picture, "Big Store," while explaining away some of the stunts. Included among those he warned the public to expect were the handing out of a special set of license plates to the Marx Brothers, statements commending the Poli management for bringing the film to Hartford, and a Santa Claus walking down the street proclaiming that he walked all the way to see the picture.

"If you should buy a box of salted nuts, it is within the realm of reason that you will come upon a little card leering up at you from the box—'Don't forget to see the biggest nuts in the business, the Marx Brothers' ", Greenway wrote.



"There are signs, upside down in the theatre frames. Don't rush over to the manager with your discovery because that's what he's waiting for."

Commenting on the possibility of statements from the Governor, the Mayor and the Chamber of Commerce, Greenway wrote "these dignitaries aren't actually excited because a Marx Brothers picture is coming to town, but the theatre men have been hounding them."

One of stunts outlined in the column took place at a baseball stadium. "One sunny Sunday a couple of weeks ago, an unusual hush settled over the Bulkeley Stadium. There were two men on in the last inning and a deadlock to break. A rather grim pitcher rubbed a new ball on his pants leg and prepared to step into the box when a commotion arose in the bleachers off first base. Two weird looking creatures were pursuing a third human nightmare around the edge of the crowd, pelting their quarry with popcorn and shouting lustily "Stop Thief." To the irate players and the red-faced policemen they looked for all the world like the famous Marx Brothers."

BUTLER'S "BILL" BILL

Placed in envelopes with copy reading: "This bill is overdue, please give it your immediate attention," the above novelty was distributed widely by Warren Butler for the date at the Princess, in Sioux City, Ia. Made up in regulation bill form, the copy listed the great number of laughs in the picture as indicated.

Style Shows Featured For "Devil and Miss Jones"

Enio Hemila of the Cratertian Theatre, Medford, Ore., tied in the "The Devil and Miss Jones" engagement for an elaborate style show which was preceded by a fashion parade with six stores cooperating. The Medford Tribune also cooperated with the theatre and merchants and devoted several stories to the style show, while the merchants gave it space in their Tribune advertising.

Oscar Nyberg of the Fox Theatre, Spokane, tied in with style shop for a somewhat similar show, store featuring the latest in bathing suits, play suits and slacks. In addition merchant plugged the show on the air, in its newspaper advertising and store windows.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Citywide Model Plane Contest Held by Graver on "Flight"

Larry Graver, Warner district manager in Philadelphia, arranged a five-way tie-up for the key neighborhood showings of "Flight Command" at the Uptown, Savoia, Roosevelt, Colonial, Nixon, 69th St. and Midway theatres in his district. A city-wide model plane contest was arranged with the co-operation of the Chamberlain Aircraft Training School, Gimbel Brothers' department store, the "Philadelphia Daily News" and the Aviation Club of WIP radio station. The first prize in the Senior division will be a six-month training course in aircraft construction at the Chamberlin school. A cash award will be made to the winner in the Junior division, with movie tickets at the co-operating theatres to see the picture for other contest winners.

All contest entries must be taken to the Gimbel store, accompanied by a coupon carried in the newspaper. Each contestant must be a member of the WIP Aviation Club, only requirement being to listen to the program. As a result of the many tie-ups, the picture is getting display and space plugs all around.

Helson's Stage Show

Reporting on stunts put over at the Indiana-Illinois Theatres, in Goshen, Ind., before shoving off for the Vogue and Forsythe, in East Chicago, Ind., Ray S. Helson sends along evidence of his style revue held on stage through cooperation of local dress shop. Front page stories were landed in papers ahead of show, with store advertising the stunt through window displays, etc., theatre featuring it in trailers, heralds, programs, etc. Merchant's ad featured the show and plugged the double program of "Wagons Roll at Night" and "Sis Hopkins."

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Hostler's "Hopkins" Giveaway

Advance novelty arranged for "Sis Hopkins" at the Schine Rialto, in Lockport, N. Y., by Manager Al Hostler was distribution of promoted apples which were attached to card bearing copy reading: "An apple a day will keep the doctor away, but not Sis Hopkins, she's coming to Lockport with songs, gals, gags," etc. For "Rookies on Parade," Hostler had man dressed as soldier in window of a fruit market peeling spuds.

Loew Kiddie Show Is 'Funday School'

Recently started by Francis Deering at Loew's, Houston, Texas, is a series of Saturday morning kid shows under the ingenious title of "Funday School," with a program of amateur talent and radio activities offered in addition to the regular screen performance. Opened with a wide publicity break and sponsored by a local soft drink company, different stunts are put on each week, many inviting the participation of the members.

In addition to the usual auditions of juvenile singers, dancers and aspiring dramatists, Deering also has the support of Station KPRC which features a class for ambitious juvenile radio announcers conducted by the station's executives. "Classes" start at ten each Saturday, the entire program broadcast with all attending invited to participate in a radio quiz. Distribution of bottles of the soft drinks is featured.

For his main screen entertainments, Francis recently concluded a successful newspaper promotion of the "Billy the Kid" coloring contest, following that with the press-book puzzle tiein on "Big Store" wherein one of the dailies ran a series of two-column cuts inviting readers to find and in red crayon outline the Marx Brothers concealed in the puzzle.

Anthony Heads "Clean Up" Week

Also aimed for the attention of his juvenile trade and at the same time contributing to the community welfare was a "Clean Up and Paint Up Week" in Piqua, Ohio, engineered by the local Chamber of Commerce with the assistance of Manager R. Anthony of Schine's Piqua, who acted as the committee chairman. Series of daily three-column ads to stimulate interest was run by the newspapers, all ads carrying the Round Tabler's name as a chairman.

Anthony got the youngsters working for the good of the cause with a "tin can" matinee wherein each child turning in 12 of the containers was rewarded with a free admission. The grosses at the theatre were aided by the merchants' committee which reimbursed the showman for each ticket so distributed.

Lykes Ties Junior Chamber To Father's Day Celebration

Through the efforts of Jack Lykes of Loew's Valentine, in Toledo, Mayor John Q. Carey issued a proclamation in connection with Father's Day urging all citizens to join with the Junior Chamber of Commerce in giving meaning to the slogan "Remember Your Dad." One project featured by the Junior Chamber was a contest to find the 10 oldest fathers who were guested at the theatre by Lykes. Plenty of art and stories were run by cooperating dailies ahead and during run of contest.

For advance on "Billy the Kid," Jack landed break in the Sunday rotogravure section and stories on the fact that local sheriff in his collection of antique and unusual guns had among his prized possessions a six-shooter believed to have been used by William Bonney, the southwestern desperado.

'Movie Vacation' Sold with Shorts

To build up a recent show at Interstate's Lakewood, Dallas, Texas, Manager J. R. Preddy found occasion to book an added attraction termed by the theatreman "Your Movie Vacation," a four-unit 40-minute shorts show, each reel having to do with a different aspect of vacation time and labelled so in explanation, in the advertising. Thus, "Fashion Takes a Holiday" explained what to wear and when; "Yosemite, the Magnificent," — where to go; "Africa Squeaks" was captioned "where not to go and why" and how to play was noted in "Stars At Play." The theme was carefully followed in the newspaper publicity and lobby display.

Contests were used by Preddy to gather further interest, an ingenious slant employed as a lobby-stopper being a 40 by 60 upon which was shown the 48 states, each outlined in plain cutouts without identifying lettering. The contest was labelled "Know Your America" and prizes given for the most correct lists. Another contest was put out in card form, each card with a different number, and guest tickets offered for those holding throwaways with numbers divisible by the figure 19. A third slant was a herald carrying the scrambled names of the radio and picture stars shown in the four shorts with passes for the first 15 correct listings of the names.

Aimed especially at the members of his kid Booster Club by Preddy was a post card mailed to the youngsters, calling their attention to a free admission offered by a local gas station. The members were told that when the family car was serviced at the station, the owner would countersign the postcard which then would serve as a special pass to the showing.

Rosen Ties "March of Time" To Local Chinese Drive

Upon the booking March of Time's "China Fights Back" by Manager Leo Rosen, Warners Troy, Troy, N. Y., the theatreman made contact with the local chapter of the United Chinese Relief to hook the fund-raising drive to the date. This was brought to the attention of the relief corps personnel to spread the word and a plan of action arranged with Rosen appointed to the executive committee.

The plan allowed for frequent broadcasts over WTRY ahead by leaders of the drive plus special announcements also over WOKO. Post cards were mailed to the "best people" and displays posted in hotel lobbies and other central spots. Further displays featured lobby showings, windows secured in the better shops, and a special Chinese exhibit carrying theatre credits was given generous space in the leading department store.

Local Chinese girls in costume were in attendance at the theatre during the showing to take up collections for the relief fund and as an extra stimulant, officers of the national organization came to town to speak before lunch and women's clubs, the short being stressed in all the talks.

Plants Sign at Ball Park

With Fulton, Ky., a member of the Kitty League, and since the majority of games are played at night, thus bringing strong opposition to Hal Thomas of the Malco Fulton Theatre, the Round Tabler recently secured permission to erect a sign located to the right of the score board on which he lists his current feature and prices. White lettered on a blue background the sign is easily seen and with each change of program, title is added.

Lamm's Unique Lobby Exhibit

As a lobby attractor, Julius Lamm at Warner's Uptown, in Cleveland, recently had an exhibit consisting of glass blower who demonstrated his art and related historic background of various objects he had made and which were on display. IN COURTS

Loew's Appeals Screen Test Damages Suit

Notice of appeal was filed last week by Loew's, Inc., in the Appellate Division of the New York State Supreme Court, from an adverse decision by a lower court which held the company responsible in damages for failing to give a screen test. Conrad Noles, actor, brought suit for $1,500 damages for alleged failure of Loew's to grant him a screen test within an agreed period of time. The lower court granted him the judgment, and Loew's is asking for a review of this decision. An unusual aspect of the case is the fact that the agreement between the plaintiff and Loew's, Inc., stipulated that the test was to be given but there was no promise of employment thereafter. Mr. Noles claimed that he did not seek other employment for a period of 10 weeks while waiting for the test.

Suit vs. Zanuck-Fox

Claiming damages for $150,000 against Twentieth Century-Fox, Darryl Zanuck and Harry Joe Brown, Ben White, a writer, filed suit in Los Angeles Superior Court last week alleging that his story "When Glory Ends" was used for "Johnny Appollo."

"Baker's Wife" Suit Settled

Nat Sanders, vice-president of The Baker's Wife, Inc., announced last week that the dispute between Raphael Hakim and his corporation had been "adjusted and the pending lawsuits between those parties settled." The company is continuing distribution of the film and the contract between the parties continues.

Serial Copyright Ruling For 20th-Fox Upheld

Affirming a decision of the District Court, the Federal Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia upheld Twentieth Century-Fox to be entitled to a mandamus against the Register of Copyrights, last Monday in Washington. Fox sought an order to secure a copyright certificate for a book in which the picture "In Old Chicago" was serialized for newspaper publication. The Register claimed that the publication was not a book but a compilation of contributions, each sheet of which should be registered separately with a $2 copyright fee. The decision means that serials, comic strips and other features may be copyrighted in book form.

Plagiarism Suit Dismissed

The $2,000,000 plagiarism suit against Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., Samuel Goldwyn, Eddie Cantor and United Artists Corporation, filed by plaintiff Clara Dellar who claimed piracy of her play, "Oh, Shah" in Cantor's film "Roman Scandals," was dismissed last week by Federal Court Judge Clarence G. Galston. Judge Galston ruled that there was no similarity between the two works. The suit previously had been dismissed but was sent back for a new hearing by the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Theatres Fight D.S.T.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

MARTIN QUIGLEY, Editor-in-Chief and Publisher

Vol. 144, No. 4 — July 26, 1941

"ENTERTAINMENT ONLY"

IT shall be memorable that in this July of 1941 the organized motion picture industry has announced, officially, commitment to a policy of making pictures for "entertainment only".

Monday's newspapers across the land carried conspicuous presentations of a statement issued from Hollywood by Mr. Will Hays, as president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, making emphatic declaration of policy.

This has been reached after a long, often tedious, sometimes troublesome, period of screen experimentation, of yieldings to pressure groups demanding "social significance", endeavours at all manner of personally espoused causes and assorted attempts to teach what some think is Democracy and to save the nation by numerous designs. All that had to be done and came to naught, first.

Obviously, the public which votes at the box office made the decision, finally determined the policy by its negative pressures of patronage.

"Those who demand that the screen subordinate its function of recreation for any cause, however sincere, are mistaken," said Mr. Hays. "There are those who would use the films to bemuse rather than amuse the American public. The screen has no room for such propaganda."

This eventuation and official declaration comes with considerable satisfaction to Motion Picture Herald and its editors. It is the Herald, and the Herald alone, which has so insisted on a policy of "entertainment only" for the public theatre screen, as the only practical policy of success, either in terms of service rendered or dollars earned.

In many quarters through the ism-ridden years between, the Herald has been subject to attack from many quarters, mainly from the Left, but generally from those who saw "social significance" either as a way to propaganda for their special causes or as a possible short cut path to personal publicity and transient personal gain.

The real storm of controversy broke that last week in August of 1937 when Mr. Martin Quigley, editor-in-chief of Quigley Publications, spoke before a considerably hostile audience of the Institute of Human Relations in annual conclave at Williamtown, Massachusetts.

"It is the industry's judgment and mine," said Mr. Quigley, "that the entertainment film belongs in the province of entertainment and nowhere else. If there are others who wish to use this medium for a message . . . the obvious course for them is to get a camera and go to work.

"The executives of these companies (the organized industry) do not envision themselves as teachers, statesmen, churchmen or economists. They are showmen . . . "

The while it is to be observed, however, that the issues have not been entirely and forever settled. Even now, within this week of Mr. Hays' declaration in Hollywood, a new and special order of pressure group and its movement is forming to support a project to try to rewrite for America the axiom that Decency is the best policy, to invade entertainment for alleged "cause".

The policy will need defense now as never before.

A PAGE advertisement on the subject of war and civilization appears in the July 21st issue of Time, news magazine, over the signature of Mr. Russell Birdwell. It opens: "The best bill of goods any nation has ever had; the only bill of goods by which any nation can survive; the only bill of goods by which this nation has ever lived . . . Decency!" This comes from the same Mr. Birdwell who introduced to Hollywood the strip-tease picketing system.

OUT in Chicago the Essaness theatres are trying to restore, or create, a single bill policy, with notable success in two houses, passable results in two, discouragement in another. But, says Mr. Edwin Silverman, it will be a miracle if the single feature policy proves successful, simply because combinations of bookings, which exist in no other city in the country, are pursued by the "A"' houses. In no other city is the product controlled to the extent that permits the double featuring of two money pictures like "In the Navy" and "Blood and Sand". He holds that there is a public antipathy to overly long shows, but that there are enough bargain hunters to be, perhaps, a balance of power in the box-office decision.

MOVING UP

WITH this season's high accent on entertainment product, exhibitors will scan with a special interest, and perhaps surprise, the ambitious blueprint of releases "from now to New Year's" issuing from Universal Pictures Corporation. The titles and casts give evidence of a production policy addressed at a new level and constituting, apparently, a departure from what can be considered the prior and long traditional position of the concern. Previews are yet to disclose the results of application and execution of this policy. Meanwhile, there is news for showmen in what Universal is doing and the new place that it approaches in the ever mobile map of the industry.

THERE really is an Easy Street. A Herald expedition located it last week. It is one block long, running from Old North Wharf in sedate and salty Nantucket. As a pessimist might expect, no one lives on Easy Street these days. It has a real estate office and an art gallery, neither of them busy. Certainly it was not the inspiration of Mr. Chaplin's great 1916 comedy bearing that title.

This Week in the News

71 Millions in Taxes

FEDERAL admission tax collections for the year ended June 30, for 11 months of which the 20-cent exemption applied, showed an increase of slightly more than $49,000,000 over the preceding year, when the 40-cent exemption was in force, it was reported Tuesday by the Internal Revenue Bureau at Washington. The biggest part of the taxes comes from movie tickets.

The Bureau announced that total collections for the year were $70,963,094 against $21,887,916 in the preceding year.

Although collections for June dropped below the May level—from $6,955,991 to $5,880,649—they remained some $4,000,000 ahead of the June, 1940, total of $1,645,603, the report showed.

More important, the drop in receipts was concentrated in the Third New York (Broadway) District, where collections declined from $1,846,594 to $818,629, indicating that business throughout the country generally was about on the same level as in the preceding month.

The House Ways and Means Committee Wednesday approved the new revenue bill under which the addmission tax exemption goes to nine cents.

Various Government leaders and others inside and outside of the Government have variously mentioned the astronomical monetary figures of motion picture production. They're nothing when there's a war in production, as witness the Washington disclosure Monday that the U. S. spent one billion, 18 millions of dollars in 19 days, between July 1st and 20th.

Film Stocks for War Buys

THAT $25,000,000 Reconstruction Finance Corporation loan by the U. S. to the British Government, included, among collateral posted by that Government, blocks of film and radio company stocks held by British investors. It was understood at Washington that Loew's common and Radio Corporation common and first cumulative convertible preferred stocks were in the posting. Also, Eastman Kodak common.

The RFC loan is to enable Britain to pay for war materials ordered prior to this country's enactment of the so-called "lease-lend" law.

Preliminary negotiations are expected shortly, on a new monetary agreement between American film companies and the British Government, to take effect after expiration of the present agreement, October 25th. That agreement has allowed the American companies to withdraw $12,500,000. Indications of expected negotiations, slated for London, were seen in the visit last week to the New York offices of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, of Allan Styne, first secretary of the American Embassy at London.

Paramount, in New York, on Wednesday, issued a statement explaining "Although the British Government has been a relatively large stockholder in Paramount Pictures Inc. in the recent past, no Paramount securities were involved as collateral in the current $425,000,000 loan to Great Britain because Paramount over a year ago re-purchased $600,000 of the company's first preferred stock from the government of Great Britain." Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee, was quoted.

Showmanship for Safety

POLICE and traffic heads in Dallas are breathing easier these days as a result of the safety showmanship campaign put on in conjunction with Louie Charninsky in the showing of the Our Gang short, "One Two, Three—Go," at the Capitol theatre. Featured were police department talks on safety from the theatre stage and an essay contest for children on the same subject with Defense savings stamps as prizes. Other activities in the promotion are in this week's Managers Round Table, starting on page 77.

From Pictures to People

BETOKENING, mayhap, a shift of Hollywood publicity empahsis from product to personalities, the livers of press people were cheered this week by a rash of cocktail parties.

Herbert Wilcox and Anna Neagle poured from five to seven Wednesday at RKO.

Samuel Goldwyn spread a luncheon Thursday noon at Perino's private dining room by way of introducing the press to Mrs. Lou Gehrig and Paul Gallico.

Bette Davis had the journalists to cocktails in her dressing room the same day at six to meet Monty Woolley.

All the parties pertained, of course, to product in prospect.

Wining and dining the press before or after previews was ruled out by studio publicity directors some months before the banning of lay press from pre-release screenings. Mounting expense of such ceremonies, which has become general to the point of monotony, was cited as reason for that ruling. Invitees to this weeks outcropping of hospitality were hopeful that the phenomena was indicative of reviving revenues, though content enough to settle for merely better times. Regardless, the Hollywood cocktail party has been much improved because the press is no longer required to look at the picture.

No Guest List

EVERY year at this season, usually somewhat earlier, Hollywood studios release a story about barring visitors from the studios, citing expense in terms of production time lost due to interruptions, etc.

This year the studios mean it.

Effective this week, according to a letter to studio heads from Y. Frank Freeman, president of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, nobody but working press will be permitted to visit any studio in town from now on.

The difference between this ruling and the others that have preceded it is simple and fundamental. President Freeman has written few letters to studio heads since assuming the Association presidency. All of them have been in the form of suggestions—but every one of them has had, in application, the status of a law of the land. Mr. Freeman's own studio, Paramount, has been closed to visitors for months. Prior rulings have been announcements by individual companies of decisions independently arrived at. This makes it unanimous.

Roosevelt in Color

JAMES ROOSEVELT, despite his duties as Captain in the U. S. Marine Corps, is to embark on another film sideline, his fourth venture in motion pictures. Hollywood reported this week that he was made a vice president of Gasparcolor, Inc., headed by George Converse, which is about to launch a new color process for 35 mm. film.

The eldest son of the President originally went to Hollywood as Samuel Goldwyn's associate producer. He left that post without making a picture. Next, he was president of Samuel Goldwyn Studios, Inc., but he resigned to head Globe Productions which, in addition to producing "Pot o' Gold" for United Artists, gave its aegis to the English-made "Pastor Hall," also distributed by UA. Globe also made some shorts for Mills film juke boxes. Globe now is defunct.

Associated in Gasparcolor with Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Converse—the latter is the husband of former film star Anita Stewart—is A. J. Guerin, former manager of International Cinema Laboratories which Pathe took over some time ago. Gasparcolor has been used in some 16 mm. shorts. Hollywood Color Film Company is doing Gasparcolor processing.

Mrs. FDR's New Spot

THE Administration's ambitious "good neighbor" program for the 21 South American republics appears to be running right into the White House household, with announcement this week that Mrs. Roosevelt, newspaper columnist, lectures and aircaster will take to the air for 26-week broadcasts sponsored by the Pan-American Coffe Bureau, which represents bean growers of Brazil, Columbia, Venezuela, Mexico, Cost Rica and Cuba.

Mrs. Roosevelt's programs probably will follow a pattern similar to that of her previous commercials' the last of which was aired on a 13-week, bi-weekly series sponsored by Manhattan Soap Company in behalf of Sweetheart Soap. The nature of the program was "comment on current events."

Labor Loses to RKO

RKO this week announced that the first of the two additional pictures William Dieterle will produce and direct will be based on the life of Samuel Gompers, founder and first president of the American Federation of Labor.

For some time, AFL International leaders have been toying with the idea of sponsoring and financing a feature-length picture which would be a biography of Gompers. It would have been shown at union meetings and other public places, and not particularly in commercial entertainment theatres. Money for the production was to have been raised, it was understood, by assessments of 50 cents or more levied on each AFL member, of which there are now about 7,000,000.

The choice of AFL leaders, had they continued their project, would have been Dieterle, as director; and Paul Muni, in the Gompers role. Muni is reported in line for the role in the RKO film. Mr. Dieterle is an "outside" producer for RKO. The company's practice is to finance producers in that category in entirety or in part.

Big War, No Newsreels

NEWSREEL coverage of the blitz and anti-blitz between the Germans and Russians in eastern Europe continues to exist as only a fond hope on the part of newsreel editors in New York. While still photographs and news pour over the wires from the propaganda agents of both Berlin and Moscow, the newsreels, after five weeks, have received not a foot of film from what promises to be the most spectacular battlefronts in history.

Newsreel editors in New York spoke hopefully Wednesday of motion pictures which were reported to have been taken by Russian cameramen and which, if and when they arrive, Artkino, Soviet film agent in New York, promised to release. There were efforts, too, to obtain pictures via London or Siberia, but at midweek none had arrived. Efforts to send their own cameramen to Russia met flat refusal from Moscow. RKO-Pathe-News reported three interviews with Soviet Ambassador Oumansky at Washington in an effort to obtain a visa for a British cameraman now in Iran. They got no encouragement.

Sole immediate prospect of films of the Russian War was an undescribed shipment expected in San Francisco from Japan.

AN automobile plowed into a crowd of several hundred persons watching a free motion picture show put on by the merchants of Lyons, Ind., Tuesday night. Twenty-six were injured, most of whom were children.

COSTS AND POOR ATTENDANCE SEEN MOVING SCREENINGS TO EXCHANGES

Companies Study Reports and Cost of Trade Shows, Expect Low Screening Budgets to be Set for Major Exchanges

General sales managers and home office accountants were taking a careful look at costs this week as trade shows of the first groups of new consent decree pictures were completed in most exchange enters. Officials of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, RKO and 20th Century-Fox, all of whom have screened their first pictures for September selling, studied reports of costs, attendance and exhibitor reaction forwarded by exchange and regional managers and weighed the advisability of moving all screenings to exchange projection rooms.

Particularly they questioned the value of screenings in large theatres. Attendance, in most cases below the anticipated level, suggested that with subsequent blocks-of-five the would meet consent decree requirements by screening them in the projetion rooms of their exchanges, rather than going to the expense of hiring theatre, ushers, extra projectionists for more elaborate shows. There was a general impression that the effort to "show and sell" at the same time was unsuccessful.

Fox Uses Exchanges

In the first blocks of five 20th Century-Fox was the only company to schedule all of its pictures for exchange screening rooms. With the sole exception of Indianapolis where the company used a theatre, it showed its pictures in double bills, twice each, in 33 exchange centers.

Paramount used exchange screening rooms for nine of its 35 branches. In other cities it used its circuit and other theatres. RKO for its first block used screening rooms in three out of 32 cities. MGM which showed first three of its pictures in 65 cities used theatres in every case.

The total bill for the first trade showings was not known at the offices of any of the four consent decree signers on Wednesday. None had budgeted in advance for the first screening, instructing exchange men to go ahead, and send accounts back to the home offices. It is expected, however, that after study, expenses will be strictly prescribed for each local situation in the future.

Estimates of the costs varied. There was unanimous agreement, however, that it was cheaper, by far, to hold screenings in the exchange. There was also a consensus that that is where all trade shows will soon be moved unless there is a sharp pickup in attendance. It was agreed that it is impossible to trade-show a block under the present arrangement for much less than $1,000 per picture. One spokesman pointed out that the difference between exchange and theatre costs would hire a lot of ace salesmen during a year.

At RKO it was reported that figures for the screenings, completed last Saturday were not yet computed. A spokesmen said he would not be surprised if the bill topped an average of $50 per screening. Metro estimated that its screenings, all in theatres, cost up to $65 each. Only one house on its list, the Astor in New York, was owned by Loew's. A published statement that the MGM bill was $1,000 a picture was characterized as "somewhat low" by a spokesman. Paramount's costs were still to be studied, but again a spokesman set "close to $50" as the cost of each theatre screening. He pointed out that it was necessary to hire ushers, porters, stagehands and two men for the booth, according to union rules, in most cities. Official comment was not available from Fox quarters but it was reported that the company was well pleased with its policy of scheduling the first screenings in exchanges only.

From Michigan it was reported that poor upstate attendance at MGM trade shows had prompted plans to abandon Saginaw and Grand Rapids screenings.

William F. Rodgers, MGM general sales manager, returning to New York from Chicago Wednesday, said Metro would complete its present trade showings according to its announced schedule but that it would consider changes for subsequent screenings beginning late in August. "Unless interest in the showings increases it would seem that projection rooms can take care of them in the future," Mr. Rodgers said.

RKO Reports Its First Blocks-of-Five Deals

The signing of new-season contracts was reported this week from exchanges in widely separated sections of the country. There was not, however, the flood of sales which some managers expected to follow when salesmen collared customers at the end of the initial screenings. There seemed to be a tendency on the part of those who witnessed the screenings to go home and think about the pictures before they bought them.

RKO cited a contract signed at Pittsburgh on Friday, July 18th, with Charles Truran,

Oklahomans Hit Showing Costs, Time; Will Rely on Trade Press

by FREDERIC SCHOFIELD
in Oklahoma City

Most Oklahoma exhibitors will depend more on trade paper reviews and word-of-mouth reports instead of attending the trade showings in the Oklahoma City exchange center during the coming year. Reasons advanced are that exhibitors cannot give their time two to three days a week witnessing pictures in Oklahoma City with the additional expense of gas and oil, hotel bills and the like while they are away from home. Most exhibitors have been booking pictures blind for many years past and will continue to do so, it is contended.

The first trade showings held in the Uptown theatre in Oklahoma City by MGM and RKO have resulted in the attendance of only a handful. Fifteen were the most at any one showing.

Lack of any cancellation in block-of-five pictures was advanced by Morris Loewenstein, president of the Theatre Owners of Oklahoma, as the chief reason for lack of attendance at trade showings.

"Exhibitors know what they are going to buy anyway," said Mr. Loewenstein, "as there is a limited supply of product available to them. Why should they make a trip to Oklahoma City to look at something they don't have cancellation on? If the film companies will introduce a reasonable cancellation clause, they might have better exhibitor attendance at the trade showings."

Oklahoma exhibitors served by the Paramount exchange have told film salesmen that they cannot move to Oklahoma City to witness trade showings and that they will continue to buy pictures blind or ask the opinion of someone who has seen the film.

Ed Chumley, Paramount head booker, said that for more than a year Paramount held regular Monday screenings for exhibitors but as a general rule only a few exhibitors attended these showings each week, with the exception of pictures which were conceded to be real hits. This practice was discontinued by the Oklahoma City exchange about six months ago because of the poor attendance.

Walter B. Shuttee, operator of the Max and Ritz, Cherokee, Okla., said he would depend on trade paper reviews to guide him in his buying because he did not have time to attend the many trade showings in Oklahoma City and tend to the operations of his houses at the same time. "Even the boys here in Oklahoma City don't have time to see these pictures," he said. Mr. Shuttee is former general manager of Standard Theatres circuit in Oklahoma City.

Athol Boyter, manager of the Boyter booking agency, located on film row in Oklahoma City, has announced that he will see all trade showing of 1941-42 product and will keep a file of his reactions to each film for the convenience of his clients who are mostly independent exhibitors over the state. He now serves about 25 exhibitors in the Oklahoma City exchange territory.

TRADE SHOWS PROVE POOR DRAW

operator of the Park theatre in Meadville as its first block-of-five sale. The pact was signed by Herbert Greenblatt, Pittsburgh manager, with ceremony, in the presence of Ned E. Depinet, general sales chief, and Harry Michalson, shorts subjects sales head.

The Minneapolis RKO exchange, barred by the Minnesota anti-decree law from selling in that state closed its first deal with a Fargo, N. D., operator. C. J. Dressell, RKO exchange manager, signed Francis Aamoth, operator of the Roxy. Raymond Nolan, the company's St. Louis manager, signed the exchange's first block-of-five deal with Harry Pittner of Fairfield, Ill.

Reports from the Field On Advance Screenings

From the field reports were received that branch managers had been told not to release any further details on trade show attendance, exchange operations and new season sales in their areas. Officials for RKO and MGM home offices, the companies cited at Seattle and Philadelphia as having revised the rules for screenings, denied that a "closed session" policy had been ordered for future trade-shows.

Typical comments and average attendance figures were contained in the following reports from the field:

Exhibitors in the Minneapolis territory haven't the time nor the money to attend trade screenings of new pictures, Fred Strom, secretary of Allied Theatre Owners of the Northwest, declared after a trip through Minnesota, Wisconsin and the Dakotas.

Trade screenings began last week, and while the turnout was fair at the first sessions, it dropped to a low figure thereafter.

Strom said exhibitors in rural sections told him they couldn't afford to make trips to Minneapolis to see the pictures. City exhibitors told him they hadn't time to attend more than a very few of the screenings.

Most local screenings have been held at the St. Louis Park theatre, located in a suburb of Minneapolis. Mr. Strom said owners were dissatisfied with this, believing that screenings should be held in exchanges, where business is transacted.

At St. Louis, Harry C. Arthur, general manager of Fanchon & Marco, Inc., declared the trade screenings were "more or less a nuisance" and were costly to exhibitors. The former practice of holding private screenings and depending on trade papers and trade comment for selection makes the new screenings "wholly unnecessary," is Mr. Arthur's opinion.

RKO Branch Manager Raymond Nolan said the first week's screenings were "fairly successful" but below expectations. He estimated 250, of whom 125 were exhibitors, attended the five screenings. Some of the out-of-town exhibitors, who traveled as much as 150 miles to St. Louis, stayed in town for three of the five screenings. About 8 of the 125 represented circuits.

New Haven's first group of screenings, including five RKO sessions and one Metro matinee, brought a disappointing response from the territory, which is compact enough to make the showings accessible to almost every exhibitor without an over-night stay. It is estimated that only 25 accounts were represented at the showings.

However, several representatives of each account were present, and most of those who attended said the shows aided in both buying and booking. All showings have been in theatres, although 20th-Fox has scheduled its screenings beginning July 23 at its own screening room, two-a-day.

Dr. J. B. Fishman, president of Allied Theatre Owners of Connecticut, stated that various members of the group would grade pictures and compare notes and discuss values at Allied meetings for the benefit of exhibitors who did not preview.

All screenings at Portland, Ore., will be attended by a committee of Pacific Coast Conference ITO members who will report to the membership on qualities of product screened. Personnel of the committee changes at each show.

The ITPA of Wisconsin has organized a screening committee which will attend tradeshows and submit reviews of the pictures. The first report of this committee, the members of which are anonymous, will go to all members of the association but subsequent reports will be sent to members in good standing only, according to Harry Perlewitz, business manager. The program is expected to save exhibitors from distant points in the time and expense by making it unnecessary for them to attend screenings in Milwaukee.

Exhibitors Show Lack of Interest

Generally the opinion of exhibitors attending the Milwaukee trade-shows of RKO and MGM seemed to be that they would result in helping to put showmanship back into the business. Even the skeptics indicated that they felt they would benefit from the showings.

In Philadelphia, reports said, exhibitors have manifested lack of interest in mass screenings at a downtown theatre. As a result, MGM which suffered a reduced attendance of 59, compared with the first week's 90, will schedule its third screening on July 28th, at the MGM exchange projection room, at the hours of 10 A.M., 2 and 4 P.M. This will permit theatre men to attend at their convenience.

It St. Louis, 30 exhibitors, including five from circuits, attended RKO's showing last week, and about 50 appeared for the second MGM preview compared with 75 who turned up for the previous week's screening.

Albany consensus indicated that trade-shows there will continue to be failures because of exhibitors' indifference. Twenty-five attended MGM's second screening. Several of those present were from the Fabian and Warner circuits.

About 200 exhibitors, including 66 representatives of theatre circuits and independents, attended RKO's trade-show of "Citizen Kane" last Friday in New York. It was the fourth screening of the company's first block-of-five. The last of the block, "Lady Scarface," was shown the following morning to about 50 persons.

Los Angeles Showing Shifted

Following poor attendance in Los Angeles at MGM's first week of screening at the Victoria Hotel, the company shifted its second show to the Ambassador Hotel theatre.

In Des Moines, an average of 20 exhibitors attended each day's showing of RKO's block-of-five there. General comment on the pictures was good with "very favorable" for "Citizen Kane." A number of independents plan to attend all screenings.

Word from New Orleans reported that 20 exhibitors attended MGM's trade show there this week, and in New Haven, a total of 140 representatives were present at RKO showings last week. "Citizen Kane" drew the largest crowd at the screenings.

Fifty exhibitors in Portland, Oregon, attended RKO's second trade-show there last Friday and 75 turned out for initial MGM preview.

Reports from Dallas were that 80 exhibitors were present at the MGM trade show there this week.

A total of 146 theatres in 78 towns were represented at the Charlotte, N. C., MGM tradeshow last week, with 18 exhibitors or their representatives turning out for RKO's screening there.

"Little Three," Independents May Also Trade Show

Moves by the distributors, not bound by the consent decree, to institute trade screenings of their new product for the convenience of exhibitors visiting exchange centers were reported from Hollywood this week. Dates and time are being selected so they will not conflict with Big Five screenings but will follow or precede them so closely as possible.

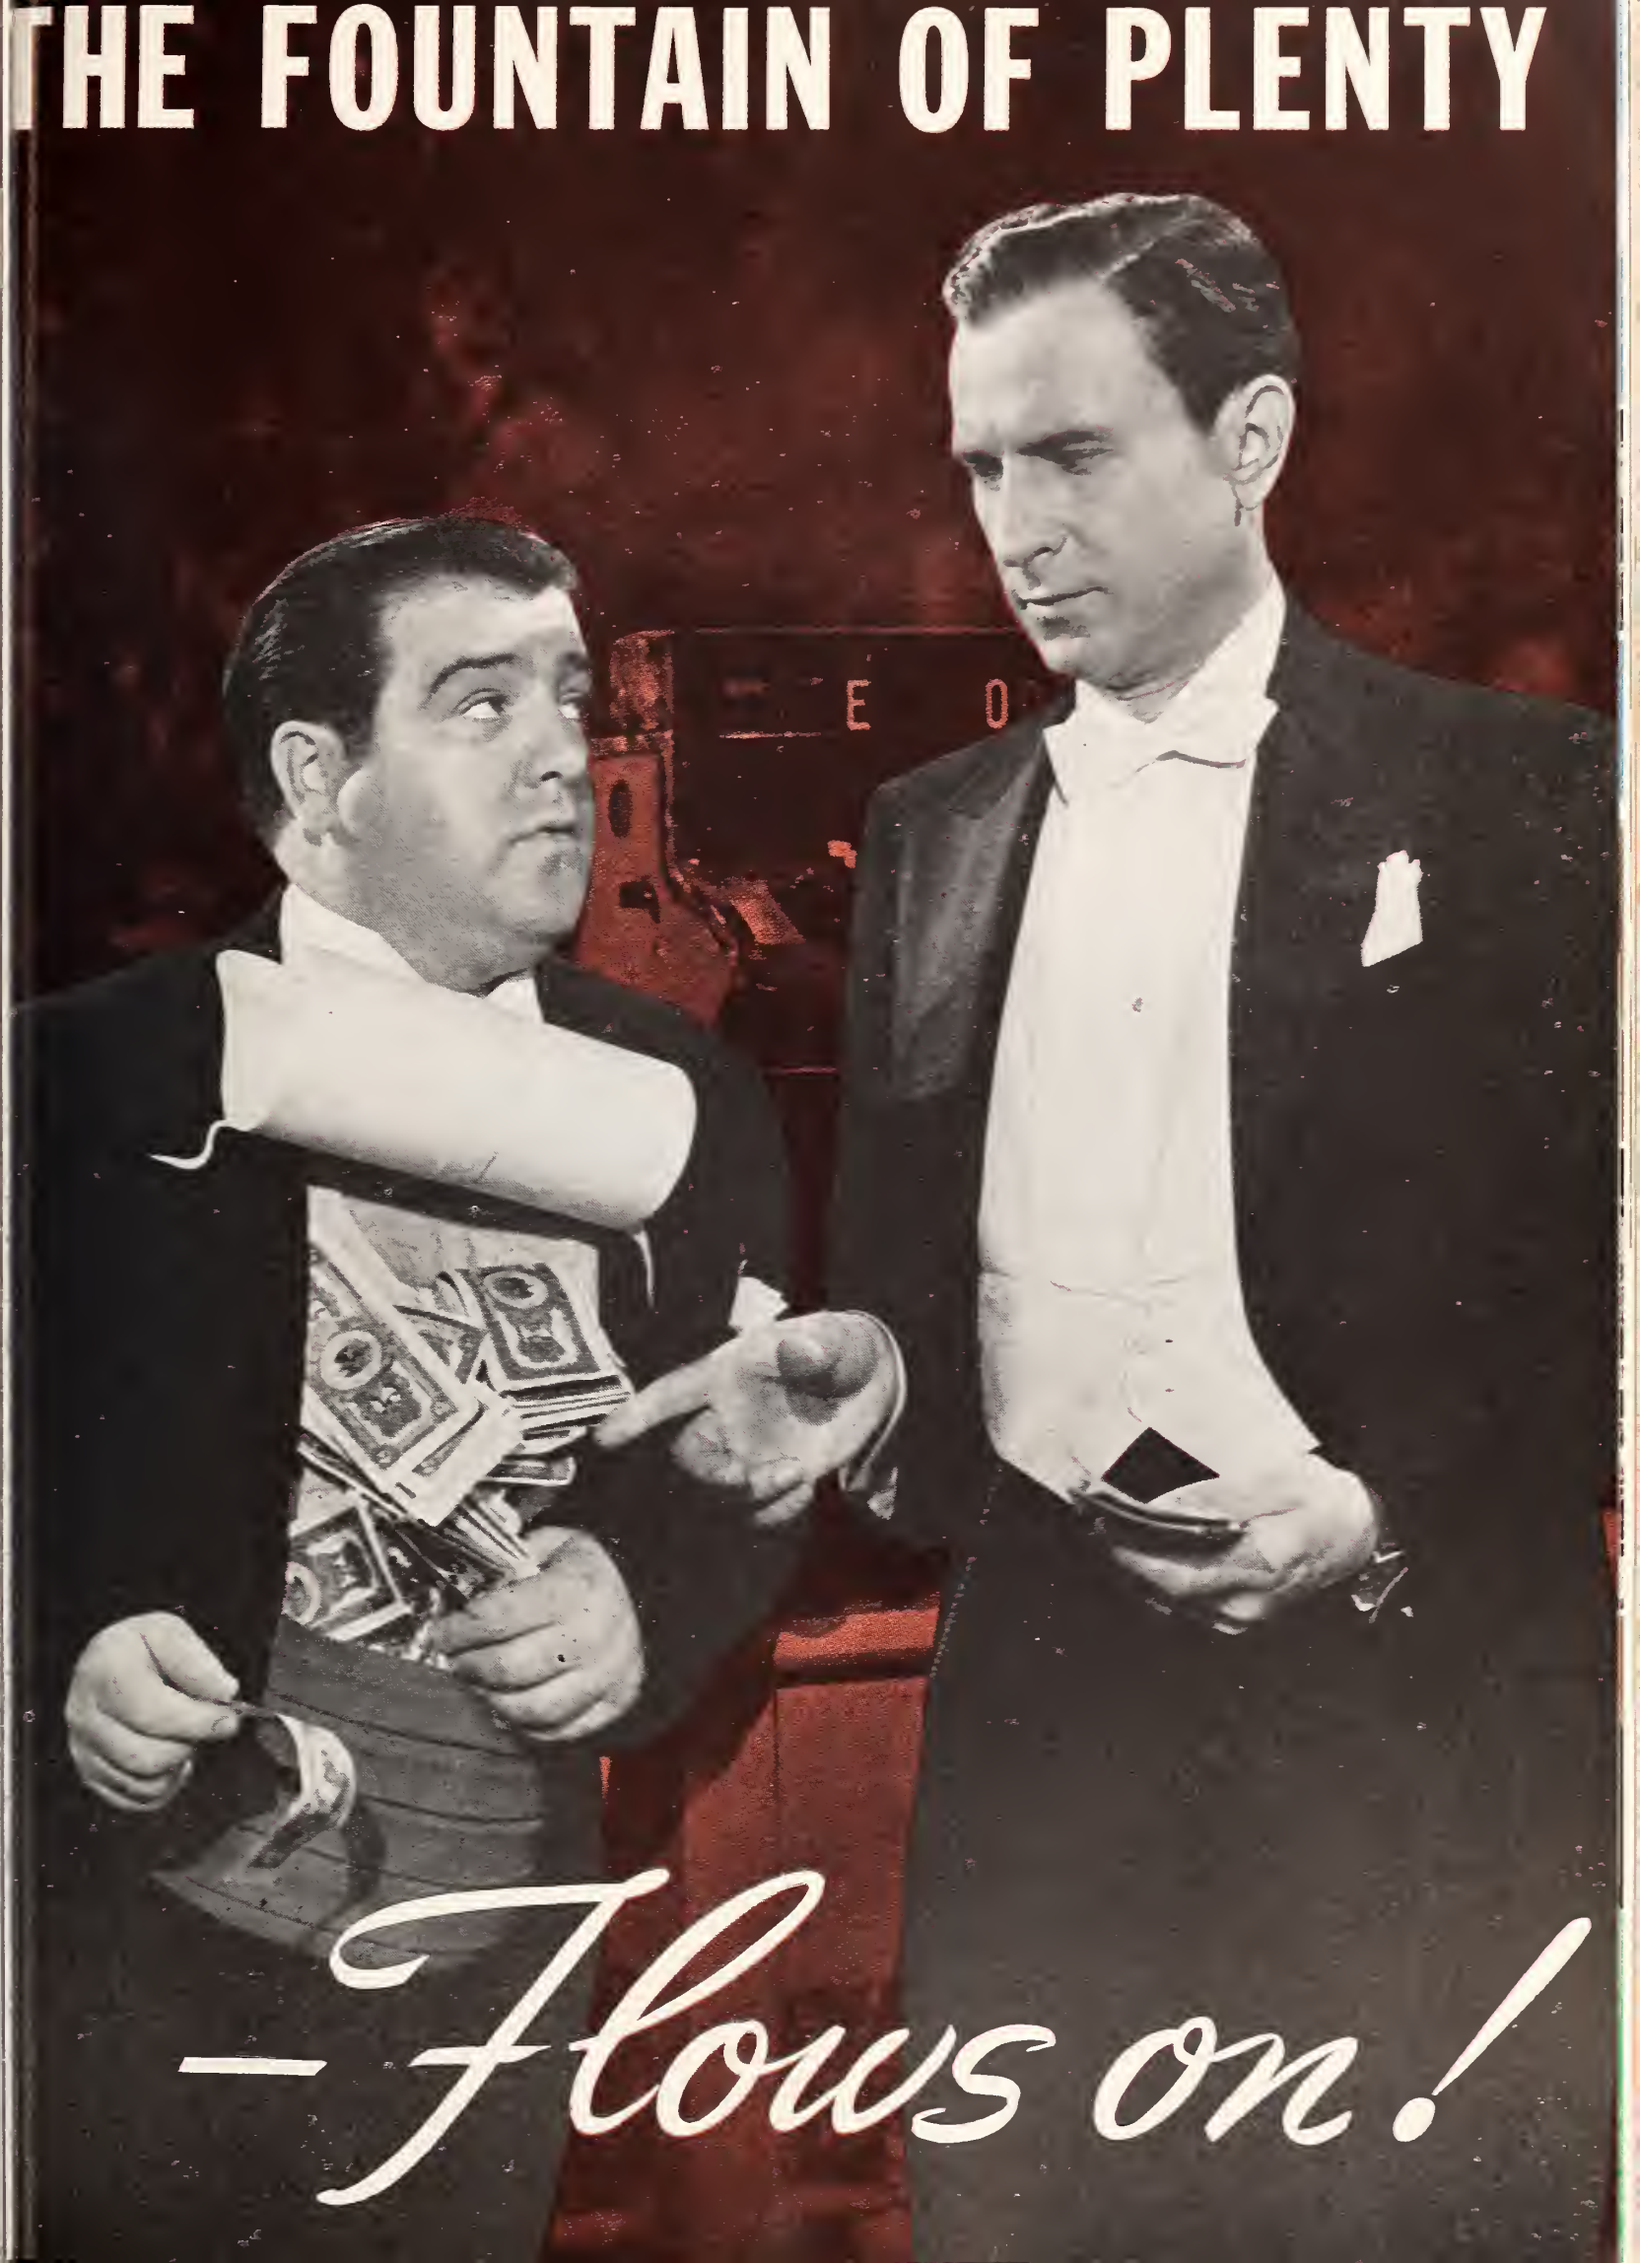
Spokesmen for the Little Three at New York on Wednesday indicated that after observing the results of the required trade shows they saw no point in running screenings of their own.

A. Montague, sales manager for Columbia, reiterated his company's decision not to hold trade shows in the decree manner but said that if any exhibitor requested a screening he would be accommodated. Arthur Kelly, United Artists sales chief, said no advance screenings will be held by UA except for occasional pictures of unusual interest as has been the custom. W. J. Heineman at Universal said his company had not plans for advance trade screenings. "What would be the point?" he asked, referring to lack of exhibitor interest in decree showings.

At Des Moines, Forrest Judd, Monogram distributor was among the first to set showings to attract exhibitors in town for Big Five screenings. During the first week of trade-shows he alternated two westerns in daily showings.

The technique of previewing product in blocks of five has been adopted by Herbert W. Givens, franchise holder of Producers Releasing Corp. in Philadelphia. Selecting dates not to conflict with the screenings arranged by the consenting distributors, Mr. Givens has arranged for a trade preview of PRC's "big five" on August 5, 6 and 7 at the Vine street screening room. Scheduled at 2 P.M., the first day he will preview "Paper Bullets" and "Billy the Kid in Sante Fe"; the second day showing "Gambling Daughters" and "Reg'lar Fellers"; and "Desperate Cargo" on the third day.

Radio Again Faces Commission Hearings



Washington heard the Federal Communications Commission, arbiter of the airwaves, this week finally launch hearings on two important radio issues, radio monopoly and newspaper ownership of radio stations.

Tuesday, James Lawrence Fly, FCC chairman, announced that execution of the network monopoly regulations had been postponed from July 30th to September 16th. Also, he offered the networks a two-year license extending station affiliation contracts pending further hearings on the option rules.

Newspaper ownership of broadcasting stations, which the FCC is examining to see if it unduly concentrates control of media of public expression, got its first hearing Wednesday, after the Commission refused requests to abandon the hearings.

Fighting words marked the first session when Elisha Hanson, attorney for the ANPA and Judge Thomas D. Thacher, Newspaper-Radio Committee lawyer, clashed with Chairman Fly over the Commission's right to discriminate among applicants for licenses.

SPYROS AND CHARLES SKOURAS TELL TRADE HOW DECREE SHOULD WORK

See Revitalization of Exhibition as Well as Distribution, with New Opportunities for Flexible Policies for Salesmen, Theatres

Two of the country's leading exhibitors—Spyros Skouras, National Theatres president, and Charles Skouras, Fox West Coast head—last Thursday told the 20th Century-Fox convention, in particular, and the industry in general, how the Consent Decree would and should affect all branches of the business.

Addressing the Los Angeles conclave, Frere Spyros saw the Decree as a revitalizing and regenerating agent for all production, distribution, exhibition, advertising and exploitation; Frere Charles viewed it as presenting the opportunity for creation by every exhibitor of a "flexible" policy for his theatre, to extend playing time on all worthwhile pictures in order to obtain every available dollar in the domestic market.

Sees Purge of "Deadwood"

Never known for soft-speaking on matters affecting the industry, the Skourases let go with both barrels, the National Theatres chieftain evidencing particular pleasure in envisioning the elimination from the business of "deadwood," "inefficients" and "Hollywood yes men."

"In my opinion," Spyros said, "the consent decree will regenerate and revitalize the industry in all its branches. By virtue of sales in groups of five, or selling singly, mass production will go. Pictures will be 'tailor made.' Budgets will be set up by the picture and not by the year. No longer will a picture be measured by its budget instead of by its quality. The realization that he won't be sold down the river a year before his picture is made or conceived will stimulate the imagination of the low budget producer. He will be inspired by the knowledge that if he injects quality into his picture, it will return a price commensurate with its entertainment value.

"Under this plan, no longer will the parasites, sluggards, incompetents—and the well known Hollywood 'yes men'—be able to live year after year and have their inefficiency concealed by the productive efforts of able and creative minds.

"They will be discovered immediately, and thereby waste in the studios will be curtailed.

"No longer will terms on deserving box office pictures be reduced to equalize the poor results of mediocre box office attractions. Pictures will be sold on merit. The rule of 'the survival of the fittest' will prevail.

New Opportunity

"As at the beginning of the business, when it grew from the nickelodeon into one of the country's largest industries, the distributor will again function as the nerve center between production and exhibition, as the guiding spirit in the development of the industry.

"As the business progressed, the appearance of circuits brought responsibility, character and dignity to it, and the 'fly by night' disappeared. However, in my experience, the appearance of the affiliated circuit created a condition whereby it took away the functions of distributors and exhibitors in every important community throughout the country and transferred them to New York, where a few would buy from a few for practically all the theatres in the country, and this same few could book all the principal theatres in the country. After that, the distributors and the theatre men in every city of the nation became stooges.

"Now, distribution and the theatres are back again in the hands of the people who should sell the pictures and those who book and manage the theatres.

"By virtue of these changes in production, exhibition and distribution, the advertising department will be revitalized and once again hold the position it formerly enjoyed in American business, when the motion picture industry was considered the most progressive advertiser.

"Showmanship will be restored but the brunt of the responsibility will fall upon the shoulders of you gentlemen as distributors.

"Selling pictures five or less at a time is not the same as selling one or two years' product at a time. You must prepare yourselves to cultivate your customer's confidence and serve and help him. Whether you sell him flat rentals or percentage, the minute you enter an agreement with him you become his partner. No sooner does the ink dry on one contract, than you try to sell him a new group of pictures. Consequently, this close relationship must be founded on a sincere desire to help your account if you are to derive the maximum benefits under the new plan of merchandising film."

"Cannot Have Fixed Policy"

Brother Charles, who followed him, declared:

"Today a salesman's job is not only to sell pictures, but he must enthuse, stimulate and help the exhibitor, with his policy, advertising, exploitation and in any other way that he can.

"The exhibitor must be educated to the fact that a fixed policy cannot exist any longer. We of Fox West Coast Theatres have no fixed policy. We take each picture, analyze its potentialities, discuss it, plan an intelligent, comprehensive campaign, then book it and squeeze out every day of playing time the picture deserves.

"This can only function where the exhibitor has no fixed policy.

"It is the duty of you salesmen to inform and educate the exhibitor to the realization that today it is imperative for a theatre to operate on an extremely flexible basis. If a picture has quality and entertainment appeal, the ordinary fixed policy of playing it, for example, three days, could be extended into five days, a week, two weeks or longer if it does business."

Commenting that Fox West Coast returned to 20th Century-Fox as much for the season just ending as the one before, Charles said:

"I am not bragging, but if every exhibitor in America followed our methods, and our policies, 20th Century-Fox would not need revenue from Europe, South America, the Orient or anywhere else.

"It would get its negative costs here in the United States, besides a very substantial profit.

"But this cannot happen until every exhibitor you do business with adopts a flexible policy and gives your pictures the playing time they deserve."

"LOVE INTEREST" CAUSES SLUMP

A new cause of the alleged box-office slump was discovered by Joseph Conway, operator of a suburban circuit in Philadelphia. Making a personal survey of 100 male patrons as to why they didn't come to the box-office anymore, Mr. Conway learned that the chief reason was that there was too much "love" in the pictures shown.

As a result of the survey, Mr. Conway has inaugurated a "Father and Son Night" each Tuesday at his Egyptian theatre, offering westerns, thrill and horror pictures—anything but "love."

More Authority for 20th Century-Fox Salesmen

Field salesmen of Twentieth Century-Fox henceforth will have more authority, befitting their new stature under the Federal consent decree, they were told on Saturday, last day of the company's annual sales convention, which began Wednesday, July 16th, at the Ambassador Hotel, Los Angeles. It was a convention at which 52 pictures were announced as the program for 1941-'42 (see MOTION PICTURE HERALD of July 19th), their names and casts disclosed, and discussed, and new company procedure under the decree exposited and argued. Chief speakers were such executives as Darryl F. Zanuck, vice-president in charge of production; Charles F. McCarthy, director of advertising and publicity; Herman Wobber, general sales manager; and Sidney Kent, president.

It was Mr. Wobber who forecast the new authority for Fox salesmen; an authority given to "streamline" sales operations, necessitated by the decree's provisions that films be shown in each territory, and sold in each territory, in blocks of five. These are provisions that call for more decision, and more important decisions, by the local "man on the spot," though, as of old, supreme authority will rest at the home office.

Mr. Wobber asserted that the field sales forces will be allowed to close any deal in which pre-determined prices are obtained.

Previously, on Wednesday, July 16th, Mr. Kent had stressed, through a message read by Joseph M. Schenck, former chairman of the board, "speed in selling" and "new faces" among company stars.

Mr. Kent asserted the latter would make a great difference in the company's record for the year.

He also recalled the 1932-'35 critical period, and said that in the current period the company must get back at least its negative cost domestically, and expect from remaining foreign markets its "gravy."

Mr. Wobber, Saturday, praised the new program already detailed, and added that "for the first time," Mr. Zanuck had adequate help, from producers the company lately acquired. He cautioned, however: "Mr. Zanuck is working with an unlimited budget. It is, however, impracticable to invest in production more money than the sales forces can obtain for the product."

Harry Brand, studio publicity director, commented anent the "new faces" needed and praised the cooperation of the local Hollywood press.

Truman Talley, vice-president of Movietone News, outlined the short subjects program. There will be 104 newsreels, 52 short subjects, including 26 Terrytoons and 26 subjects in the following series: "Magie Carpet of Movietone," "Adventures of a Newsreel Cameraman," "Sports Reel," and "The World Today."

The following release dates were announced: Aug. 1, "Charley's Aunt"; Aug. 8, "Dressed to Kill"; Aug. 15, "Wild Geese Calling"; Aug. 22, "Private Nurse"; Aug. 29, "Sun Valley"; Sept. 5, a "Charley Chan" subject; Sept. 12, "Belle Starr"; Sept. 19, "He Married the Boss's Daughter"; Sept. 26, "A Yank in the RAF"; Oct. 3, a Jane Withers vehicle."

UNCLE SAM BUILDING A LONG-RANGE THEATRE CIRCUIT FOR HIS SOLDIERS

Entertainment for 1,500,000 Men Becomes Big Business; Survey Shows Present Facilities at Each Camp in United States

On July 18th, there were 1,448,500 men in the United States Army. On Monday President Roosevelt asked that they be kept there.

That figure represents men habituated to the entertainments of a high routine standard. Reckoning each movie theatre to have 1,000 seats, 1,445 theatres would be needed to serve those men on an evening.

But the U. S. Army has only 344 theatres, and, according to information gleaned this week from the files of the United States Army Information Service, few of those theatres have as many as 1,000 seats. Some have only 250, some have 350.

Theatres are being built now, however, with a long-range view.

From the same files of the U. S. Army Information Service, it is seen that distances from Army posts to nearby towns are from one to 30 miles; and that the towns, in many instances, do not have theatres of sufficient seating capacity.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD this week considers it pertinent to present some information about the establishments of the new American Army; information enlightening to the exhibitor as a contributor to national defense, as a beneficiary of Army trade, and as a competitor to Army theatres.

Facilities Listed

Appended to this article, and to run for several weeks, is a survey of Army posts: of their theatre facilities and convenience to outside theatre facilities. Noted are the present strength or potential capacity of each post, the number of theatres existing and planned, seats of those theatres, the nearest town, and distances to those towns. It will serve not only to show exhibitors possibilities of new clientele; but also to inform him of opposition exhibition, represented by theatres at posts and it will show him the formidable loss to current exhibition represented by over one million men withdrawn from civilian life and living increasingly unto themselves, in theatre attendance at least, on post areas.

The information is obtained from the United States Army Information Service New York office and is the result of questionnaires sent from that office periodically in order to have at hand the most recent developments at each post.

Not noted in the survey are posts manned by civilians primarily, or by very small enlisted strength; posts such as shell loading depots, ordnance works, obsolete harbor forts, air force emergency landing fields, and the like. Army establishments in Puerto Rico, the Hawaiian and Philippine Islands, the Canal Zone and Alaska are excluded as are the new settlements in the Caribbean and the North Atlantic.

The figure of 1,448,500 men in the United States Army is by no means static. It is apparent from international, and Washington legislative developments that the eventual total may exceed 3,000,000.

Thomas Martell, heading the New York bureau of the Army Motion Picture Service, last week denied that film programs supplied Army post theatres were "way behind" regular theatre schedules—a charge heard frequently from some Army officers and certain of the new recruits. Mr. Martell observed that, naturally, Army post theatres have to observe normal clearance schedules, as demanded by local exhibitors; but that, despite the apparent lag which this might introduce, the majority of Army posts are getting new pictures. For the benefit of the visiting reporter, Mr. Martell displayed a program for the Fort Monmouth, New Jersey, theatre. It had recent pictures.

Mr. Martell intimated clearance had been adjusted amicably among distributors, the Army, and local exhibitors—a pattern, he asserted, which is, and will be, followed throughout the country, especially in the drawing up of new film contracts for the coming season. Theatres in the Army posts, it was noted, are newer, have in many instances more seats, and a larger clientele, to which local theatres have not the same access, and so they are entitled, in any "showdown," to better clearance, under the terms of the Federal consent decree.

However, the Army Motion Picture Service is not appealing to the decree. It is appealing, Mr. Martell intimated, to the local exhibitors' sense of fairness and patriotism, and to the special distributor-exhibitor committee, set up by the industry in the interest of aiding national defense. The committee, he said, including Abe Montague, general sales manager of Columbia; Neil Agnew, in the same post for Paramount; A. Julian Brylawski, Warner contact in Washington; Edward Grainger, head of the Feiber and Shea circuit; and Nate Yamins, independent exhibitors National Allies States Association director, and an exhibitor of Fall River, Massachusetts.

Whatever conflicts have arisen have been, and are being smoothed by this committee and the service, Mr. Martell said.

Buying on Percentage

Meanwhile, the Service is now buying pictures on percentage; on the same basis as "regular" exhibitors, Mr. Martell said. It also guarantees a minimum rental of $7.50. The departure from the flat rental method is not costing much more than the old method. Percentages now range from 20 through 30 per cent.

Of the 1,448,500 men in the Army ranks July 18th, 597,000 were "trainees"; 266,000 were National Guardsmen; 18,000 from the Regular Army, Reserve, and the one-year enlistment rolls; and 476,000 were from the Regular Army three-year enlistment rolls. Officers totalled 91,500, divided thus: Regular Army, 14,700; Na-towns, their theatres, and seats.

TEN MILLIONS SEE MINE BUREAU FILMS

During the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1941, according to M. F. Leopold, supervising engineer of the Bureau of Mines, industrial films of the Bureau were shown to 10,910,762 persons on 111,045 occasions.

Although the Bureau now has 5,961 reels in its library with as many as 100 prints of each subject, the demand is so great due to the National Defense Program that at present subjects are being booked six months in advance.

The Bureau's film activities are produced in co-operation with American industrial firms, without the expenditure of Government funds.

There are, at writing, 482 Army posts. Of these, 170 now have over 1,000 men each. Thirty-eight posts have more than 15,000 men.

Following is a partial list of the posts, their personnel totals, their distances from nearest towns, their theatres, and seats,

'Films Aid Morale'—Halifax

Lord Halifax, British ambassador to the United States, in Hollywood on Tuesday cited motion pictures as an indispensable aid in maintaining wartime morale. Speaking at a luncheon at the MGM studio, he thanked the American industry for its "assistance in British war efforts." Films, he said, are "vital" in maintaining British civilian and military morale. Louis B. Mayer, Y. Frank Freeman and Will H. Hays were among industry leaders who welcomed the ambassador.

GALLUP HAS PLAN FOR MEASURING GROSSES WITH 'RESEARCH INSURANCE'

Pulse-Taker Sees Guesswork Taken Out of Production Evaluation with Analyses of Typical Theatre Audiences

Dr. George Gallup, scientific public pulse-taker, head of the American Institute of Public Opinion, who has been studying the nation's picture-going habits and preferences for RKO-Radio Pictures, now proposes "research insurance" for production, before production.

A scientific yardstick for the country's likes and dislikes is what the film industry needs, according to Dr. Gallup. Carefully analyzed polls of cross-section motion picture audiences are, he asserts, Hollywood's best insurance against guesswork and the varying intangibles of successful entertainment. In fact, he predicts, such analyses will become commonplace in a few years when producers will insist on a survey of public opinion of story, star and other factors in advance of every major production.

Separate Unit Formed

Dr. Gallup, in his first interview with the trade press, described this week how the methods of surveying public opinion developed in political, merchandising and advertising studies by the American Institute of Public Opinion are being applied to motion pictures. The Audience Research Institute was formed as a separate organization, he said to meet the special problems of finding and studying the typical classes of film patrons.

Studying the preferences and habits of film audiences is a much more difficult and complicated task than predicting elections or other public questions on which people have definite and well supported opinions, he said. Registration lists and ballot totals provide a standard from which cross sections may be taken for sampling elections. To study the motion picture habits of the country it was first necessary to determine the constitution of typical motion picture audiences.

The work of forming a cross-section film audience dates back to 1935, according to Dr. Gallup, when, from information gathered in other surveys the Institute, at Princeton, began classifying questions that related to screen entertainment. Subsequently the Audience Research Institute was founded as a separate entity from the American Institute of Public Opinion. With its own staff, and the help of regular Gallup interviewers it conducted preliminary surveys to determine the proportionate makeup of audiences by various age groups, location, income levels, frequency of attendance and other factors.

This "weighting" of the audience is essential in polling film patrons, according to Dr. Gallup. "People who go to the films are of all ages, types, income and in widely different towns" he said. "Some attend weekly, others monthly, and some only occasionally. Many factors change a person's picture-going hamits. Finding their film habits is not the kind of a job you can do by a brief quiz." Various street polls, lobby questionnaires, and other "un-weighted" surveys are generally worthless he said. Interested by the findings of preliminary studies, George Schaefer, RKO president last year contracted with the Audience Research Institute to make exclusively for RKO the first full-size sampling of film habits.

While admitting that surveys can never measure all factors of success or failure at the boxoffice Dr. Gallup said audience research could stabilize production by pre-determining many aspects of story value, star appeal and promotion.

"A research program for the motion picture business would take a small part of the total money spent" according to Dr. Gallup "and in return would provide good insurance by stabilizing production and eliminating many of the hit and miss hunches of erratic genius."

Factors in a picture's success, which Dr. Gallup claims can be measured by audience survey, include acceptance of story, popularity of proposed casts, suitability of star to story, release timing, the best methods of publicity and advertising exploitation, and other particular aspects of proposed pictures.

"On a long range program the method would be as accurate and successful in determining public film tastes as it is in forecasting election outcomes," the statistician claimed. He pointed out that in the last election the Gallup Poll predicted the outcome by a margin of less than 2.5 per cent. Other ballot forecasts, and public opinion surveys on political questions have been equally close. The sample method expects errors, he explained, but allowing for them, we can be sure of accuracy in 95 out of a hundred cases.

Hollywood showmanship has no reason to fear a curb on its activities through increased use of audience research he said. Citing success with the advertising practices of Young and Rubicam of which he is a vice president, Dr. Gallup said that knowledge of public preference should stimulate the creative genius of producers. Such has been the case with advertising copy writers he claimed.

To gather statistics on film habits, from all possible aspects Dr. Gallup and David Ogilvy, head of the Audience Research Institute, made 194 surveys during the year since RKO contracted for their exclusive services. Question sheets were long, and involved careful interviewing by the Institute's staff of fifty, plus a thousand regular Gallup interviewers throughout the country. In one typical "blanket" questionnaire on attendance or non-attendance at pictures there were 200 questions. Dr. Gallup estimated that it required a two-and-a-half hour interview to answer the sheet.

"Ordinarily people give the first answer that comes into their head" the statistician noted, "to find their real opinion you must ask a series of questions around the same subject." Then the answers must be combined with known theatre statistics such as tax reports, frequency of bookings, holdovers, and population distribution."

Typical Questions Asked

Typical of the questions were those asking what the interviewed person did on each night of a given week; how often he played bridge; listened to the radio; his average income; the price of admissions at favorite theatres; did he budget expenses; and other detailed queries. Also the poll asked what influenced people to go to the pictures or to stay away. Was it advertising; word of mouth; the publicity; stars; etc.? it asked.

To study story preferences the Institute checks book sales, reading of national periodicals, library withdrawals, radio listening and other related factors. This research is more successful in warning against poor stories, than in selecting sure-fire themes it is said. The ratio of stories suitable for film consideration is placed at about 1 in 100 by Dr. Gallup.

"Hollywood often does not seem to appreciate how hard it is to find a good story that will appeal to enough people of all types" Dr. Gallup observed. "They must have universal appeal to old, young and all others in the sample audience to be a box-office success." Then the intangibles of artistic production, casting, editing and other of the many sales and production factors can offset the researcher's prediction he noted.

The function of audience measurement, therefore, Dr. Gallup says, is to serve as a negative ward, insuring production against use of unpopular treatments. "People themselves, who see and like, or don't like, pictures are the best guide to production. By analyzing this sentiment, on a year around basis, in all sections, research will earn a most important place in the film business" he predicted.

Study Upsets Axioms

Initial reports of the Audience Research Institute to Mr. Schaefer and RKO department heads were characterized by Dr. Gallup as trade secrets, along with the methods by which the Institute analyzed the aggregate questionings. From a speech delivered by Dr. Gallup at the RKO convention in New York last month, and from other sources it was reported however that the study upset many long-accepted axioms of the business.

According to the Gallup study the year-round average of weekly attendance at American theatres is 54,275,000 in contrast to the "80 million weekly" habitually cited by industry spokesmen. The total annual gross is calculated by the poll at $700,000,000, not a billion dollars.

Weekends, according to Dr. Gallup, still account for the bulk of theatre attendance, despite radio entertainment in the home which attracts three times as many listeners as the 11,500,000

"WHO ANSWERS GALLUP?" SHOWN IN SHORTS

One-reel shorts, now in production by Film Institute, Inc., will seek to answer public curiosity on "who votes in the Gallup polls?"—by filming the activities of the American Institute of Public Opinion. Edmund L. Dorfman is producing and directing the pictures which, according to Lawrence W. Fox, Jr., president of Film Institute, will be released through a major distributor. The first is to be ready within six weeks.

The Gallup shorts will seek to dramatize the importance of public opinion as a factor of democracy in action. Shooting is largely on location and the pictures will show Gallup interviewers questioning policemen, housewives, businessmen and others of the cross-section sample on which the polls are based. Dr. Gallup will introduce the subject of each survey, usually a public question such as "If Germany is victorious on the continent, do you think they will invade the U. S.?"—and findings will be reported in each reel.

Dr. Gallup Would Forecast Grosses

persons who go to pictures on Sunday evening and five times as many as the 5,428,000 in Monday evening theatre audiences.

Double bills still are favored by a majority of picture patrons, although audiences in cities with single features do not want doubles and those with duals do not want singles. In New York with both, 63 per cent favor duals. Nationally only 4 per cent of these queried said they avoided pictures because of double features. The early American dinner hour—90 per cent of the country eats before 7:30, 65 per cent before 6:30—leaves plenty of time for people to attend double bills.

Advance publicity is important for picture success the poll also finds. Of two 1940 pictures it reports that the one which had been heard of by 48 per cent of the people queried prior to release did far better than a picture which only 7 per cent of those questioned knew about. There was a 30 per cent difference between the business each did in subsequent runs.

Other findings of the Gallup survey placed the largest section of the film public at the age of 19. They bought 2,800,000 tickets weekly. Patrons under 30 give the boxoffice 65 per cent of its gross. The average division between male and female attendance is much less than supposed. Female attendance is only 51 per cent of the total, although the proportion varies to as much as 75 per cent, for both sexes, with specific pictures. Men like action pictures and comedies. Women predominate at romance and problem pictures.

Admitting the star system accounts for the success of most pictures, Dr. Gallup limits the number of stars important enough to swing attendance to about 60. Several stars in a picture, he finds, is waste of name power. To maintain position box-office favorites should make at least three pictures a year. He places Spencer Tracy at the top of the favorites list.

To avoid costly misses the report concludes that Hollywood must concentrate on making pictures, at high budget, primarily for the 19-25 year old segment of the audience, at risk of losing more mature patrons. The alternative is production of lower budget pictures designed for special segments of the audience, in small towns, metropolises and in varying age and educational groups.

Paramount Sold To 9,017 Independents

Neil Agnew, general sales manager for Paramount, announced last week that company sales contracts with independent exhibitors total 9,017 as of July 1st. Added to 1,500 circuit accounts, this makes a total of 10,517 contracts secured by Paramount for its 1940-41 product, Mr. Agnew said.

With three additional pictures, "Kiss the Boys Goodbye," "Shepherd of the Hills" and "Aloma of the South Seas," the latter two in Technicolor, still to be released nationally, Mr. Agnew is hopeful of topping the 10,517 mark before launching Paramount's selling campaign on the first block-of-five for the 1941-42 season.

Harry Sherman, film producer releasing through Paramount, upon his arrival in New York from Hollywood last Monday, said that he had signed a contract for acquiring production rights to the Hopalong Cassidy character created by Clarence E. Mulford, for an additional span of five years. The existing agreement expires at the end of 1941.

Mr. Sherman announced that his 1941-42 program calls for nine features, including three specials.

BOOK REVIEW

DESIGNING FOR MOVING PICTURES. By Edward Carrick. 104 pages, illustrated, indexed. $3.50. Studio Publications, London and New York.

Here is the most comprehensive and compact compendium of studio processes and techniques yet to be made available. It is cheerfully and fluently written, making for rapid, easy reading. It incidentally presents many minor splashes of the art opinions and philosophies of the author, with comments on policies that even any lay reader with a tinge of interest in the motion picture will find challenging and entertaining. While assuredly no "fan" book, it makes itself most available to any adult reader of reasonable intelligence and interest in any of the arts of expression. In excellent, bold, clear typography and high-grade presswork in both halftone and line, the volume meets the usual high physical standards of Studio Publications.—T. R.

Golden as OPM Film Consultant

Nathan D. Golden, motion picture consultant to the Department of Commerce and formerly chief of the Department's motion picture section, was assigned last Wednesday to assist the Office of Production Management in any matters relating to films which may arise under the national defense program. Los Angeles County probate court on Tuesday appraised the real and personal estate of the late Carl Laemmle, founder of Universal pictures at $2,518,908. Included in the estimate were stocks in many film and other corporations, Hollywood business properties and a home and other real estate valued at $150,000. A will, probated following Mr. Laemmle's death in 1939, left the bulk of the estate to his son Carl, Jr., and a daughter, Rosabelle L. Bergman. It also included many charitable bequests.

RKO Polishes Its Footlights

A legitimate stage show will be booked into motion picture houses when Oscar Serlin's successful Broadway play, "Life With Father," goes into three RKO theatres next October, with more houses scheduled later. First bookings are the Grand in Columbus, Temple in Rochester and Albee in Providence. The deal was closed by RKO's president, George J. Schaefer with the Broadway producer. The idea is said to have originated with Mr. Serlin. Mr. Schaefer was quoted as saying that this play was a good choice for experimentation of play bookings into film houses and that it might prove to be a forerunner of similar bookings by other majors. RKO's promotional, advertising and publicity forces will cooperate with the Serlin office in exploiting the shows.

WARNER FIELD FORCES TOLD TO GO OUT AND RING PUBLIC'S DOORBELLS

Advertising Executives Discuss Campaigns to Draw Wider Audiences to New Films; Loew Heads Analyze Selling

Participating in a pronounced industry trend to go out and ring the public's doorbells, to sell the industry direct to the public, Warners field forces were assigned this week to devote extra time hereafter to "public relations" work.

This was decided at the second day, Tuesday, of a special four day advertising department conference of that company, at the home office, in New York.

Even as the publicity and advertising men of the company conferred thus, this week, other workers and executives of the company were getting ready for a descent upon Chicago, for the annual sales convention, next Monday through Friday.

Advertising Men Gather

At the New York meeting were Mort Blumenstock, Eastern advertising and publicity director, who presided; Monroe Rubinger and Jack Yergin, Chicago; Sam Clark and Martin Weiser, Los Angeles; Bill Lewis, Dallas; Bill Brumberg, Washington; Phil Engel, New England; Glenn Ireton, Toronto; Mitchell Rawson and Lee Blumberg, home offices. Charles Einfeld, director of advertising and publicity, from the Coast.

Monday's program included informal discussion by Mr. Einfeld, and Mr. Blumenstock, and attendance at the "Sergeant York" showing at the Astor Theatre.

With Mort Blumenstock presiding, the Tuesday session was addressed by Mr. Einfeld, Gradwell L. Sears, Joseph Bernhard and Harry Goldberg; also, Francis S. Harmon, executive assistant to Will H. Hays; Roger Albright of the Hays Office and John L. Fortson of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ.

The importance of creating wider markets for pictures and the necessity of developing larger special audiences for particular films were among the topics discussed.

Specific pictures and campaigns discussed included "Sergeant York," "One Foot in Heaven," "Dive Bomber," "The Bride Came C.O.D.," "Underground," "Manpower," "Highway West" and "Bad Men of Missouri." The "York" campaign was gone into in greatest detail. This is expected to serve as a pattern for the handling of a large number of new season's films of equal caliber.

Big List of Single Sellers

A feature of the Warner product announcements for 1941-42 will be the large number of "specials" that are to be sold on a single basis instead of in blocks.

Headed by "Sergeant York", the films in this category will probably include "The Man Who Came to Dinner", from the Broadway stage play; "Kings Row", best-seller; "One Foot in Heaven", which will have cooperation from the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America; "Navy Blues", musical; "Captains of the Clouds", Royal Canadian Air Force story in color, starring James Cagney; "The Male Animal", "George Washington Slept Here", "The Corn is Green" and "Arsenic and Old Lace", another quartet of Broadway plays; Somerset Maugham's "Up at the Villa", Edna Ferber's "Saratoga Trunk", and "Yankee Doodle Dandy", in which Cagney portrays George M. Cohan.

Other properties, some already in production or finished, on the company's list include "In This Our Life", "Quietly My Captain Waits" and "Captain Horatio Hornblower", all from the best-seller lists; "Rhapsody in Blue", the life of George Gershwin; "Here Come the Girls", musical; Jack Benny in "The Widow Wouldn't Weep"; "The Maltese Falcon", famous mystery story by Dashiell Hammett; "Flight Patrol", first RAF picture; "New Orleans Blues", musical; "They Died With Their Boots On", "The Prime Minister", and "Gentleman Jim", the life of James J. Corbett, just acquired for Errol Flynn.

Meanwhile, executive personnel to attend the Chicago convention, at the Blackstone Hotel, was announced, as follows—there being 157 branch managers and field salesmen in addition:

Home Office: Gradwell L. Sears, Carl Lesserman, Roy Haines, Benn Kalmenson, A. W. Schwalberg, Arthur Sachson, Stanley Hatch, I. F. Dolid, Norman Moray, Sam Schneider, Joseph Hummel, Mort Blumenstock, Mitchell Rawson, Lee Blumberg, Paul Lazarus, Gil Golden, Don Gillette.

Hollywood: Jack L. Warner, S. Charles Einfeld, Bob Taplinger.

Field advertising men who will attend the convention are: Phil Engel, New York; Munroe Rubinger and Jack Yergin, Chicago; Sam Clark and Martin Weiser, Los Angeles; Bill Brumberg, Washington; Bill Lewis, Dallas, and Jack Goldsmith, Atlanta.

Delegates will see the following pictures: "Navy Blues," "The Flight Patrol," "Dive Bomber," "Sergeant York," "The Prime Minister," "Nine Lives Are Not Enough," "New Orleans Blues," "Law of the Tropics."

Warners' Trade Showings for 'York'

Loew District Chiefs Study Decree Selling

Loew's district managers held a two-day session over the week-end in Chicago, at the Blackstone Hotel, called by William F. Rodgers, general sales manager for GM, for the purpose of discussing sales policy before inaugurating the company's new season selling. Another topic under discussion was response of exhibitors to the first block-of-five showings.

Among those present were:

Aaron and Joe Bezahler from the New York headquarters; Jack Bowen, New York; Robert Lynch, Philadelphia; Maurice Wolf, Boston; Henry Nathanson, Toronto; Rudolph Berger, Washington; J. J. Maloney, Pittsburgh; Jack Flynn, Chicago; Harris Wolfberg, St. Louis; Brutus Bishop, Kansas City; C. E. Kessnick, Atlanta; George A. Hickey, Los Angeles, and Jack Byrne, Denver.

MGM announced last Monday 44 additional promotions among its field personnel, which brought the total of recent advancements, all from within company ranks, to 91, in the move started three weeks, ago, to streamline its field sources for consent decree localized selling.

Eight men have been added to the selling staff. They are Frank Sculli, Philadelphia, formerly fourth booker; Alex Arnswalder, from New Jersey-Staten Island booker; Albert Wheeler, Boston, from first booker; John P. Harrington, Cleveland, from office manager; Thomas B. Kirk, Memphis, from office man-

Welles To Have Three, Dieterle Two at RKO

Orson Welles announced this week definite production plans in the immediate future for three of his Mercury Productions now in preparation for RKO Radio release. First of the Welles' trio, with shooting scheduled for mid-September, is Booth Tarkington's "Magnificent Ambersons," which won the 1919 "best novel" Pulitzer Award. "Journey Into Fear," a novel by Eric Ambler with screen adaptation by Ben Hecht, will follow in production and the third Mercury feature will be "It's All True," an original Orson Welles project for motion pictures. Also on the Welles' schedule is an untitled film with Mexican background in which Dolores Del Rio will star. Negotiations are now under way with Mexico City interests for its production.

Mr. Welles' first Mercury film production, "Citizen Kane" which has had two-a-day runs in leading cities, will be released generally the first week in September.

George J. Schaefer, RKO's president, announced this week that he had exercised an option with William Dieterle and Charles Glett for two additional Rieterle productions to be made in 1942. First picture under the deal will be "The Life of Samuel Gompers" which in no way affects "The Band Played On," Dieterle's second feature on the current season's schedule. The first, "The Devil and Daniel Webster," based on the Stephen Vincent Benet work, is an October release, offering an all-star cast including Edward Arnold, Walter Huston, Anne Shirley, James Craig, Simone Simon and Jane Darwell.

P. R. C. Sets Its Convention For August 2nd and 3rd

Producers Releasing Corporation, one year old, and on the eve of its second series of sales staff meetings, now has 4,000 accounts, and expects 6,000 by next year; promised 38 pictures this season, and has delivered 34 to date; had a high budget this season, with 38 films, and will have a higher one next year, with 42 pictures—and all of this is because the company, "keeping its promises" has won the confidence of exhibitors nationally, and of its financial backers.

So said Arthur Greenblatt, PRC general sales manager, in New York this week, as he prepared to attend the first of five regional sales meetings, in Cleveland, August 2nd and 3rd, at which the company's new season program will be disclosed in detail. There will be another regional meeting in Atlanta, August 9th and 10th, another at Dallas, August 16th and 17th, and another at Kansas City, August 23rd and 24th. Mr. Greenblatt added that there will be more regionals later in the year. For, as he put it:

"I don't believe in national conventions. We've got to set sales and product policy as we go along. Our sales policy will be flexible—for each territory. This decree, which we are not under, is nevertheless bound to bring problems, which we must discuss."

Mr. Greenblatt noted that the fact of 34 pictures of 38 promised having been delivered; and the fact of the rest being in production—has created a confidence among exhibitor customers not usually accorded a new company.

"We are no longer 'just another company,'" he said. "We have shown we can deliver. Furthermore, we have shown we can deliver everything we said we would. That means a lot, when you consider all the promises you hear from new concerns."

Mr. Greenblatt added that the company also made it a policy to deliver its pictures for release "exactly on the release date set—no hedging with us," he remarked. The 4,000 accounts now secured are "legitimate accounts"; they take almost a season's product, Mr. Greenblatt insisted. The 6,000 figure he set for next season's goal may be near the maximum, he admitted, for a company of PRC's current calibre.

PRC does not intend, for the present, to produce its own pictures. The films are still to come from independent producers banded together for PRC release. Budgets on all pictures will be increased. "We showed a profit on last year's budgets; therefore, for the coming season, we're entitled to spend more," he said.

The company has during the past year obtained "100 per cent" coverage of the nation, and representation in Canada, Mr. Greenblatt noted, pointing out that the representation is by franchise holder; so that efforts put behind company product are sincere and thorough, inasmuch as each exchange is in effect a partner in the company.

The sales organization will, shortly, be increased by "at least 25 to 30 men," Mr. Greenblatt said.

Regional meetings scheduled will be attended by the following:

U. A.'s Negotiations for More Producer Talent

The Selznick-United Artist negotiations, started some weeks ago, which would result in David O. Selznick becoming a producer-owner for UA, are reported to be progressing satisfactorily toward a completed deal this week. The Frank Capra-UA talks, however, have reached an impasse, due to the fact, it is indicated, that Mr. Capra submitted a number of conditions which are not acceptable to the present United Artist owners.

The deals offered to Capra and Selznick contemplate their purchase of one-fifth interests each in UA, with payment to be made out of dividends on the stock.

Lineup for the new season's product has been revised to include 18 features, UA vice president Arthur Kelly announced last week. Hal Roach will supply 10 "streamline" productions, two of which are ready now. Mr. Kelly also announced that Max Gordon and Harry Goetz were planning a minimum of two and a maximum of three films a year for three years, but Mr. Gordon, in a subsequent formal statement released through Columbia, said he had neither been approached nor had been given the opportunity to discuss, accept or reject any such association. UA later retracted the Gordon association with Goetz and said Mr. Kelly had erroneously named Mr. Gordon instead of Gregory Ratoff as a partner in the deal.

Revised list of UA titles and pictures on the 1941-42 program are:

"International Lady," "Twin Beds," "Annie Rooney," with Shirley Temple, "Heliotrope" and "My Official Wife," to be produced by Edward Small; "The Mating Call," David Loew and Albert Lewin; "A Man's Wife," with Joel McCrea, to be made by Richard Rowland; Arnold Pressburger's "Shanghai Gesture"; Gabriel Pascal's "Major Barbara" and "Snow Goose."

Also the Michael Balcon British production, "Three Cockeyed Sailors"; Alexander Korda's "Lydia" and "Jungle Book"; William Sekely's "New Wine," and Walter Wanger's "Sundown," "Eagle Squadron," "To Be Or Not to Be" and a Western similar to "Stagecoach."

Republic Closes Four More Circuit Deals for 1941-42

J. R. Grainger, president of Republic Pictures, announced in California last Monday the closing of a deal for the company's 1941-42 product with the Blumenfeld Theatre Circuit. S. D. Weisbaum, local branch manager for Republic in San Francisco, assisted Mr. Grainger in completing the deal with Joseph Blumenfeld, head of the theatre circuit.

Another circuit deal for 1941-42 product made by Republic was with J. J. Parker Theatres, operating in Portland, Pendleton and Astoria, Oregon. Mr. Parker acted for the circuit, Mr. Grainger for Republic and J. T. Sheffield, franchise owner in the Northwest, also for Republic. Mr. Grainger also closed with United California Theatres and the Golden Gate Circuit, operating the T. and D. Circuit. R. A. MacNeil and M. Naify of the circuit sat in on negotiations with Mr. Grainger and Mr. Weisbaum.

NEW TAXES CAUSE TOP RANK STARS TO CONSIDER 'LESS WORK' PROGRAM

Change in Joint Tax Return Status Would Accelerate Trend, Hollywood Thinks; Poses Problem for Exhibitors

From HOLLYWOOD BUREAU

One of the most important single problems confronting Hollywood at present, a serious threat to the exhibitor's supply of the type of picture which in the past has enjoyed greatest success at the box office, and a problem that has the motion picture production center riding the horns of a dilemma, is the subject of taxes.

There is nothing new about taxes, nor their effect on the production of motion pictures. But Hollywood believes that if the proposed new income taxes, particularly the requirement of a joint return for husband and wife, are passed by Congress, a large number of high-salaried executives and performers will make fewer pictures while others who adopted such a curtailment policy several years ago will extend it. (Quick figures, to illustrate the point, show that a man and wife earning equal incomes of $450,000 each would have paid separate surtaxes last year totalling $585,560, whereas a joint return would have raised this figure to $647,780, an increase of $62,220.)

Naturally, it is the highest paid group of Hollywood workers which is giving consideration to a "less work—less taxes" program, but it is on the members of that top group of stars and studio executives that the burden of making successful films has rested to a great extent. More decisions by top players to appear in fewer pictures, and by producers, writers and directors to make fewer pictures, can result in a lack of sufficient quantity of the type of motion pictures which the American public has most enthusiastically received.

Problem for Exhibitors

Hollywood has long recognized that name value is one of the most important components of a popular motion picture. Any curtailment of the use of the available name value becomes a problem of the exhibitors. The vote of the nation's exhibitors every year in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD-FAME poll of Biggest Money Making Stars has shown, time and again, that it is the popular performer who is seen frequently that means most at the box office. A number of highly paid actors and actresses fail to place in the First Ten chiefly because they have limited the number of pictures which they will make.

Pictures that are never made cannot be smash hits. A biggest Money Making Star appearing in one or two pictures a year, instead of four or more, is that much less of a magnet to draw patrons to the theatre and does not long remain in the Top Ten. A good producer who makes only one or two pictures a year instead of a customary larger number cuts down the potential number of big hits. A studio executive who decides to become a producer of only a few pictures a year, instead of worrying about a larger number, may handicap the flow of important films.

The trend toward limiting the number of pictures which top players make in a year started sometime ago and already has had its effect. In general it has been the highest paid performers, and hence those who mean, or have meant, most at the box office, who have adopted the strictest limits to their work so they will not fall in a higher income bracket and be required to give most of the additional money to the Government in the form of income taxes.

According to opinion in Hollywood, the proposed increased taxes, and particularly the regulation which would require husbands and wives to file joint income tax returns, would increase the number of motion picture stars who would decide to limit their appearances before the cameras. The same trend would be expected to be continued and expanded in the ranks of producers, directors, writers and studio executives.

Today a number of the higher paid citizens of Hollywood are asking themselves, "Is it worthwhile to work so hard?" And answering themselves, "Perhaps I should take it easy—even if I earn considerably less money I will net almost as much on account of decreased taxes."

And yet the Government must get additional tax revenue for defense purposes. And it is on this point that Hollywood finds a dilemma and no ready solution.

In Hollywood, as everywhere, it is realized that additional taxes are needed to pay the necessary costs of defense. The Hollywood star or executive, tempted to take it easy, wonders if that is not just a little unpatriotic. Some few have decided to devote the entire returns from certain pictures to charity, but many are tempted to drop that extra work and have more time for recreation and rest.

A consideration not overlooked by those weighing the question as to whether there is justification for curtailing the number of films appeared in per year is the always-present knowledge that each picture is not solely a source of revenue but also a risk of popularity, the belief that two bad pictures in a row kill any star being a basic conviction among the headliners.

Since success has been measured in Hollywood almost solely in terms of dollars, it is logical, now that part of the chance of reward is removed, that there should be considerably less stimulus for work.

If Congress approves the tax law requiring joint returns by husband and wife, it is pointed out in Hollywood, a number of popular stars might not make any pictures at all. As an example, it was said that a situation could easily arise in which the husband or the wife would be netting almost nothing for work in pictures if the salary had to be heaped upon the other's income.

Indicate Tax Opposition

There are indications that Hollywood will oppose the joint tax return proposal just as hard as it can without appearing to be unwilling to bear its share of the increased costs of Government. It is said that the number of husbands and wives, each earning large incomes, is larger in the motion picture industry than in perhaps all the other industries of the country combined.

Whatever action is taken by Congress on the new tax proposals, there are signs in Hollywood that the less work trend on the part of many who, either as stars or production men, have contributed much to successful motion pictures, will continue at a greater pace than ever. In every branch of production men and women are weighing salary against taxes, extra work against extra leisure, and the decisions and trend are of interest to the exhibitor, even though there are no ready answers to the problem, because ultimately there is a real effect on the flow of high quality pictures to the theatres.

One thing is certain—any curtailment of the use of real talent for making motion pictures is a blow to the whole industry.

TELEPHONE TOLL RATES LOWERED

Reductions approximating 14 per cent in long-distance telephone tolls become effective July 10*th as a result of the* $13,000,000 rate adjustment negotiated by the Federal Communications Commission. Interstate message toll rates and incidental charges of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company were reduced $12,500,000 and other Bell System associated company interstate rates and incidental charges were reduced $1,475,000.

Of particular interest to telephone users, of which the motion picture industry is one of the largest, is the elimination of report charges. Also, overtime rates for person-to-person calls have been reduced to the corresponding overtime rates for station-to-station calls between the same points.

Lloyd's New Film

Harold Lloyd will produce and star in a film for RKO's new season release under negotiations he is conducting with George Schaefer, president, and Joseph I. Breen, studio head. Though no Lloyd film was listed in the company's product announcement he has been working on a script of "My Favorite Star" as a possible vehicle for himself.

Loew-Pepsi-Cola Tieup

A cooperative arrangement has been completed with Loew's New York City circuit and the Pepsi-Cola Company. The Pepsi-Cola Company becomes sponsor of Loew's annual city-wide bathing beauty contest for $500 in cash prizes and the title "Miss Greater New York."

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Interesting indeed are the origins of some of the words used in the world of photography. Camera, for instance, comes from the Latin word for a chamber or room, Eastman Kodak tells us. Thus, the camera obscura, ancestor of the camera, was simply a darkened room into which a lens in one wall transmitted light to form an image on the opposite wall.

When we speak of "tone values" in a picture, we're echoing a word used by the Greeks—who always have a word for it—and meaning a rope. It eventually came to mean the sound emitted by a stretched string, and so on until its present application in describing the general effect of light and shade. . . . The original meaning of focus was a hearth or fireplace. comes from the Medieval English word fell, which means a "thin skin." . . . Emulsion is derived from the Latin word emulgere, meaning to milk out—hence, it is used to describe a milklike mixture. . . . Photography is derived from two Greek words, meaning "light" and "writing." . . . The lens gets it name from the seed of the lentil plant: a double-convex lens resembles a lentil seed in shape. . . . Panorama comes from two Greek words, pan meaning "all," and horama, "that which is seen."

Look out, men, Warners are behind a little project known as the "Kisses for Breakfast Clubs," started in Chicago and spreading elsewhere, to have housewives organize and demand more attention from their husbands.

"No kisses in the morning, no breakfast," is the slogan of the wives who, prodded by Warners, are calling a revolution against the perfunctory peck and race to the morning bus or train.

Purely coincidental, of course, is the fact that Warners have a motion picture coming up entitled "Kisses for Breakfast."

The baby chick industry, like the motion picture business, is making fine progress with its new code of fair practices. The only basic difference between the two is that the baby chick people voluntarily adopted its code, whereas the United States Department of Justice sort of 'invited' the movie magnates to regulate.

The baby chick code is really strict. The marketers, for example, cannot use guarantees of baby chicks such as 'Guaranteed to Live,' or misrepresent any egg-laying potentialities.

Buster Keaton, of old film fame, has been around New York to try a comeback at theatricals, returning to the footlights of the stage where he was all but born. In some reminiscings with newspaper writers, he went all the way back to the time when he went to school, for the first and last time, for half a day in Jersey City.

Keaton's parents were playing the old Bon Ton Theatre in Jersey, when he was about six, and his folks thought he ought to be going to school. Arriving at the neighborhood place of learning, Buster looked with disdain at the regimentation possibilities, so when the teacher asked him what is an island, he snapped back that an island was a wart on the ocean. She sent him home with a nasty note to his father.

As the city's theatres increased, he followed a pat system in order to see every show. On Monday and Tuesday he'd see three shows a day and again on Thursday and Friday when the bills changed.

In recent years, however, De Looze has slowed down to a mere three or four shows a week. "It's a case of losing interest," he says.

"Members of M-G-M's shorts production department take their work seriously. Producer Jack Chertok has produced three little shorts of his own, Barbara, Billie and Vivian in the five years that he has headed the department. Production has now hit an all time high when, in one month, six members of the shorts department became fathers. Gertie the Dinosaur, Windsor McCay's creation of years ago, would be envious of the news that photographs of the Tyrranosaurus Rex, the Diplodocus and many other of the strange prehistoric animals that were recreated and animated by Walt Disney's artists for the "Rite of Spring" sequence in "Fantasia," have been incorporated as part of the permanent exhibition of Cretaceous Dinosaurs, on the fourth floor of the Museum of Natural History, in New York. Gertie was the first prehistoric animal cartoon animation which motion picture audiences saw, a generation ago.

'ENTERTAINMENT IS THE PUBLIC'S ONLY MANDATE TO HOLLYWOOD': HAYS

No Room for Those Who Would Use Films to Bemuse Rather Than Amuse; Decency Best Policy, Press Told

"Entertainment is the public's only mandate to Hollywood," Will H. Hays this week told Hollywood and all others, and reminded that decency is the best policy.

The president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, in one of his periodic statements to the press, released from Hollywood on Monday this week, reported on the current problems of the industry in connection with national defense and reiterated the plea for maintenance of decency standards.

"If there ever was a time when the highest possible standards of wholesome entertainment were demanded of the industry the time is today," he said, "with millions of our youth being prepared in body and mind for the task of national defense that faces the nation." Mr. Hays pledged that "nothing that has to do with the moral content of pictures is too unimportant for the need of the greatest possible vigilance."

Prepared for "Any Strain"

Mr. Hays scored those few, "a very few, on the fringes of the industry who think that if they could break the Motion Picture Production Code they could improve the boxoffice appeal of the product," and said, "only those in whom originality is dried up believe they need to pick up themes or treatments in the gutter. Frailities of judgment," he said, "we will always have with us, but we have erected machinery which has shown that it can function under any strain. Ours is an organization that applies group judgment to every picture under the Code, with the chances of error constantly lessened as personnel becomes trained in interpreting the provisions of the Motion Picture Production Code. The code service is available to and used by non-members as well as members of our association of Motion Picture Producers and Distributors.

"The history of entertainment proves that more time, money and artistic material have been lost in unconsciously working down to some supposedly popular standard than in working up to higher levels of public appeal. It is a fact that certain pictures which have over-aimed the mark have not succeeded in covering costs, but they have succeeded in tapping new strata of attendance for the motion picture theatres of the country. On the other hand, pictures that under-aim public demand tend to reduce general theatre attendance, even for the better films. There can be no doubt that the demand for better entertainment operates to free, not to restrict, the artistic capacity of producers, directors, artists and writers gathered in this, the greatest creative center of entertainment in the world.

"There is no fear the industry will ever be far behind public demand in the production of entertainment for the nation. But it must be entertainment. The informational, educational and inspirational elements on our screens are growing. That is as it should be. But when the public lays down its money at the boxoffice, it is primarily for entertainment.

"The fact is that if there ever was a time when the highest possible standards of wholesome entertainment were demanded of the industry the time is today, with millions of our youth being prepared in body and mind for the task of national defense that faces the nation. That the industry has built well in its self-regulation should be evident from the work of the Production Code Administration both here and in New York. Frailties of judgment we will always have with us. But we have erected machinery which has shown that it can function," said Mr. Hays, adding:

"Motion pictures have a definite service to perform," he said, "and I have every confidence in their ability to do the job. Pictures speak for pictures, and the coming season will show films which reach a more successful and more significant entertainment level than ever before. The great function of the entertainment screen is to entertain, and in both scope and variety the pictures now planned or making in Hollywood studios will live up to that principle. Entertainment and recreation might be likened to machine tools necessary to bring human machinery to the height of its efficiency.

Will Solve Film Problems

"Those whose hopes of the screen fall with every seasonal drop in theatre attendance have been weeping too soon. It does not make much difference that many theatres broke all their boxoffice records during the recent holiday weekend. That is only an incident. What really counts is the vitality inherent in this great medium of entertainment; the resources of the creative men and women of the industry in meeting public demand. Hollywood always is keenly alert to its problems and seeks methods to solve them," he continued.

"It is natural that theatre attendance should be somewhat affected by the preoccupation of the millions with the news of the flaming events which are happening in the world today, but this is a temporary condition. Moreover, it means that a wideawake and vigorous public opinion exists in our country. This very situation offers a tremendous opportunity for the motion picture screen.

"The creative capacity of Hollywood is up to the highest possible demands of the theatre-going public. True, every big picture is a risk which needs a wide audience to justify it. But errors of judgment, not lack of talent, more often lead to under-shooting the mark of public acceptance."

Mr. Hayes believes that those "who demand that the screen subordinate its wholesome function of recreation for any cause, however sincere, are sadly mistaken. Significance is not achieved at the expense of entertainment; it is the result of entertainment . Pictures do not need any other horse to ride in order to play their part in the preparedness of mind and body which results from recreation.

"There are those who would use the films to bemuse, rather than amuse, the American public. The screen has no room for such propaganda."

"Deserved Satisfaction"

The motion picture industry "must operate successfully," he said, "if the screen is to render the greatest possible service in the present emergency. I think that the industry—exhibitors, distributors and producers—can take some deserved satisfaction from the contribution that the screen is making to the paramount task of national defense. The industry, as none other, still faces the heavy task of readjustment made necessary by the loss of some of its most important foreign markets, the tying up of receipts abroad, and other calamities of war. But every factor is enlisted in one or other of the many activities which the industry is undertaking. What is being done by more than thirty separate industry organizations, by thousands of leading exhibitors, by film exchanges throughout the country and by the creative personnel in Hollywood who have volunteered their time and services, is amply proven by the gratitude publicly expressed by the heads of Government departments and activities. Public morale must be maintained. It can only be maintained through the knowledge of the problems that face us and of the far-flung efforts of the Army, the Navy, the Air Corps and of the many civilian groups now operating in the field of national defense. The screen, which deals with the picturization of living events, can make such achievements speak as no other medium can. The industry is doing its part without stint. Moreover, it is a task achieved under freedom, not under the duress of dictatorship which can create only propaganda.

"The industry in this phase of the nation's whole production upsurge not merely has the responsibility of seeing to it that picture entertainment meets the mood of the American people; it must also strive for theatre operation to meet the requirements of the millions today engaged in the hard toil of production.

"The industry's earnest efforts on all fronts are evident, also, in the manner in which those companies affected are preparing to make good their commitments under the Government consent decree in the sale of pictures in blocks of not more than five and in other provisions, the advantage and practicability of which time must prove.

"As to entertainment, there is no mystery as to what the public expects from the screen. It expects entertainment—intelligent entertainment—and it wants it for every mood and for every requirement of recreation. That's the only mandate it can give to the creative men and women of the industry. And that's a job as limitless as imagination itself. I, for one, have complete faith that Hollywood will come through with whatever is demanded of it," he concluded.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS LAUD HAYS MESSAGE

Endorsing the policy of entertainment only for motion pictures, forty New York councils of the Knights of Columbus, through George A. Timone, chairman, on Tuesday congratulated Will H. Hays, president of the MPPDA, on his reassertion in the press of principles of decency and entertainment for the film industry. The Knights of Columbus, Mr. Timone wrote Mr. Hays, fully support "your implied rebuke to those producers who have wittingly or unwittingly failed to observe the sound provisions of self-regulation in the public interest embodied in the Production Code."

The letter noted an increase during the last year of Class B (objectionable in part) pictures in the Legion of Decency ratings. "We sincerely hope that this expression of your sentiments will remind producers once again of their grave public responsibility . . . " Mr. Timone concluded.

New Season Flagship

This flagship of the company's first block-of-five pictures for sale under consent decree conditions is in every sense a man-'o-war, a dreadnaught built to breast any storm or shatter any calm which may be riding the sea of show business come September.

Big gun of the craft is, of course, Jack Benny, top man in radio and among the tops in films at this point, and the big news about him in this picture is that he's better in it than he ever was in any other. That could be because this time he's playing a character, instead of himself, and it is one of the chief comedy characters of the past half-century.

Equivalent in firing range is the play it pertains to, a property which has amused virtually every adult and most of the children now living, not once but many times, yet has distinguished itself, notably in the case of last year's sensationally successful Broadway revival, as perhaps the most sure-fire repeater in the annals of comedy.

Production by William Perlberg is authentic to the letter in point of setting, background and detail with only such liberties taken with the original script as were thought suitable in view of the star's maturity. These rate as gains rather than sacrifices.

Direction by Archie Mayo misses never an opportunity, sparks every situation and sequence.

As in every production of the play necessarily, emphasis is upon the principal character's absurd impersonation of an elderly woman, fashioned for comedy in all particulars. But the players in support, particularly Laird Cregar and Edmund Gwenn, turn in portrayals of utmost effectiveness.

Unlike many, maybe too many, comedies of current manufacture, this one is for the very young, the adolescent, the middle-aged and the old, a circumstance on the side of box-office prosperity.

Previewed in studio projection room to a small group of trade press representatives who, nevertheless, laughed out loud and often, auguring practically unlimited audience satisfaction under auditorium circumstances.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Comedy of Life and Death

Stepping far out of routine channels and venturing boldly into the realm of life-after-death for comedy, producer Everett Riskin has supplied in this mixture of fiction and fantasy a film packed with laughter for persons not averse to abandoning for the moment whatever serious convictions they may have about what becomes of people when they die. On the evidence of a midweek audience before which the film was previewed without advance knowledge of title or subject matter, this would seem to mean not less than nine persons out of ten, for no lesser a percentage could have accounted for the gales of laughter and bursts of applause which blocked out whole sections of dialogue.

The film tells a story, which defies thumbnail synopsis, about a puglist whose spirit is "taken" prematurely by supernatural agents (played by Claude Rains and Edward Everett Horton) who, discovering their error, agree to return him to life to live out his allotted span. Finding that his body has been cremated in the interim, they agree to return his spirit to a satisfactory substitute, trying first the body of a murdered millionaire and, when that body is murdered a second time, the body of a boxer. That is the framework of a tale as fantastic yet as amusingly complicated as has come from a camera in many months.

Robert Montgomery fits like a glove the requirements of the principal role, while Messrs. Rains and Horton handle the astral personifications (visible to the audience but not to the other players) with a nicety guarding against the giving of offense. James Gleason's portrayal of a prize fight manager was being talked of, minutes after the screening, as likely to win him an academy award. Direction by Alexander Hall betrays a keen appreciation of the delicate values in hand and a confidence which his cast rewards.

The subject matter could be expected to confuse juvenile minds and the film may turn out to be more suitable for cities than towns, although no moral issues, apart from such as some may consider to be involved in the possible impropriety of using life-after-death for purpose of humor, are raised.

Previewed at the Alexander Theatre, Glendale, to a capacity attendance, made up in about equal parts of paying guests and invitees, with rafter-shaking response. On the basis of this presentation, the film appears to be a comedy hit of major proportions.—W.R.W.

Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde

(In MGM first block)

Spencer Tracy Version

Showmen who exploit this version of Robert Louis Stevenson's shocker as surpassing the John Barrymore and Fredric March filmings of the subject will be well within bounds.

Showmen who elect to reduce the matter to a definite comparison of Spencer Tracy's performance in the title role with those which have preceded it may point to his rank in third position among the biggest money making stars of 1940 in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD-FAME poll with profit.

There is plenty to say, additionally, about performances by Ingrid Bergman and Lana Turner, the two girls murdered in the picture, and it is also a point to indicate to the public that this is a more mature and unrestricted picturization of the story and is not, therefore, an item for the juvenile trade.

As produced and directed by Victor Fleming, who appears to have proceeded without budgetary limitation, the picture strikes and holds a deliberate pace piling detail upon detail, horror upon horror, in a manner to keep an audience squirming between gasps. Dialogue is expertly handled to intensify the striking power of these incidents in the plot which have always gripped spectators. Closeups are employed steadily for sustaining tension in some of the most extensive uses of the fear motivation on record.

In its sequences depicting the hero in his evil phase torturing the girl upon which he releases his sadistic perversion, the picture approaches the limits of emotional tolerance. Mr. Tracy's switches from this phase of his personality to the noble side are managed with utmost proficiency. The period of transition from good to bad, on partaking of the drug he has compounded, is negotiated by means of montage passages which utilize psychological symbols with a directness of significance not previously ventured in entertainment films.

In point of performance, production and direction the picture rates high. In point of box office it makes good on all the promises it may imply to persons who like the star and persons who like the Jekyll-Hyde story. On all points it ranks as "strong meat" for the adult market.

Cracked Nuts

(Universal)
Filler Comedy

There is little in this number to engage interest save the names of the cast, a group of accomplished comedians who struggle without success to put humour into situations and dialogue which do not warrant the effort.

The story, synopsized on page 160 of your Product Digest, pertains to the fleecing of a young man who has won $5,000 in a radio contest and is persuaded by his takers to invest it an invention. The invention is a so-called mechanical man, activated by a confederate inside, and no effort is made to give the device a semblance of realism. After a number of gags have been run off, most of them familiars of long standing, the young man gets his money back. Then there is a chase, for a finish.

Direction by Edward Cline and production by Joseph G. Sanford do not cope with the inadequacy of story material which is the film's basic fault. Result of their efforts is at best a picture in the "filler" category.

Wrangler's Roost

(Monogram)
Western

This latest of the Range Busters westerns produced by George W. Weeks for Monogram release is one of the best, if not the best, of the series to date. There is a plentitude of action in the better tradition of these outdoor dramas and a slight screen of mystery providing for a measure of suspense. The improvement over preceding pictures of the series is attributable to a thoughtfully conceived and cleverly carried-out plot.

The Range Busters continue as of before, with Ray Corrigan as "Crash," John King as "Dusty" and Max Terhune as "Alibi." Supporting players include Forrest Taylor, Gwen Gaze and George Chesebro. The director was S. Roy Luby.

The script has the Range Busters assigned to tracking down a stagecoach robber who resembles an outlaw known as "Black Bart." "Black Bart" had been imprisoned for ten years and then paroled. While on parole he had disappeared. When they find "Black Bart," they realize they have been on the wrong track, for the outlaw has reformed. But, the real crook, the impersonator, is brought to justice and the Range Busters ride on in search of more excitement.

Ringside Maisie

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)
Maisie, Fights, and Love

The two words comprising the title of the picture should be sufficient to ignite the imagination of any live-wire showman; one part, "Maisie," Ann Sothern; her voluptuous walk, her honey-drawl talk, her fights for her honor, her espousal of the cause of the underdog, her sheer humanity; the other part, the ring, fights, punches, action and excitement.

The opening finds our "Maisie" a hostess in a dance hall. In one of the funniest sequences in the production, she goes through the grotesque and rhythmic contortions of the current jive-jitterbug-boogie-woogie dance with an over-ambitious customer who has purchased about 500 tickets. She dances until she is swept off her feet. Next she is en route to a hotel in the Adirondacks, which come perilously close to resembling the Catskills, and here she comes in contact with fight-trainer "Skeets Maguire," played by George Murphy, and fighter "Terry Dolan," played by Robert Sterling. And in this portion of the picture, the ringside is given prominence. The fights are above all, realistic. One actually feels one is at the ring, and sometimes one feels one is actually getting all the punches. These scenes are admirably done and very exciting—to the point where it actually hurts.

There are problems and conflicts and near-tragedy, too. Each character knows what he wants, and gets it—with compromise. And through it all, we see the shining eyes of "Maisie," with a helping hand to the one who needs it, and plenty of steel-edged sarcasm for the ones who deserve it.

The ring sequences will attract the male of the species, the human problems and love scenes will appeal to the female and "Maisie" will just about make it unanimous. Anyway, she shouldn't lose any customers.

Lady Scarface

(In RKO first block)
Metropolitan Melodrama

Reportedly filmed at less cost than any of the four other pictures in RKO-Radio's first block-of-five, this melodrama of gangsters and detectives rates on a par with contemporary films in its classification. It is something with which to fill an hour of program time, making no claim to distinction but furnishing, nevertheless, pastime.

Opening in Chicago, the story moves to New York, shooting and death occurring at both ends. The title refers to a gang chief known to the police as "Slade" and assumed to be a man, though made known to the audience as a woman. Efforts of a Chicago detective and a girl photographer in employ of a picture magazine to track down the criminal are ultimately successful, humour as well as suspense marking the proceedings.

Produced by Cliff Reid and directed by Frank Woodruff, the film stays within bounds of plausibility and does not attempt too much.

Dressed to Kill

(In 20th Century-Fox first block)
Crime and Comedy

Third in the 20th Fox series based on the "Michael Shayne, Private Detective" character, "Dressed to Kill" again presents Lloyd Nolan as the leading character, whose contemplated marital status never matures due to the fact that the lure of solving murders for a living intervenes. In this number, which deals with a bizarre double murder, and whose background is show business, Nolan is supported by Mary Beth Hughes, Sheila Ryan, William Demarest, Ben Carter, Virginia Brissac, Henry Daniel, and others.

The film is a compactly made melodrama, neatly paced by director Eugene Fordem who leavened tradegy with comedy. One of the lower budgeted offerings in 20th-Fox's first block, this Sol. M. Wurtzel production is ample supporting fare in the situations for which it is aimed.

A stage producer and his former star are murdered in his apartment, which has entrances connecting it with his theatre next door. "Shayne" accidentally stumbling onto the case, undertakes to solve it in order to obtain funds for his marriage. A third murder is committed before the criminal is found.

Previewed in Fox studio projection room, Hollywood to a press audience which thought this better than its predecessors.—V. K.

Wild Geese Calling

(In 20th Century-Fox first block)

Wanderlust in the Nineties

Life, love, sin and adventure as they prevailed in the great Northwest in the Nineties, a variety of fiction recalling the era of "The Spoilers," are dealt with bluntly and with realistic and impressive result in this melodrama co-starring Henry Fonda and Joan Bennett. It is a tale told with candor and power and with the elemental emotions, both good and bad, ranged in opposition plausibly, birth of a child furnishing the climax which puts everybody's affairs to rights.

Performances by the above and others, notably Warren William, Barton MacLane, Ona Munson and Russell Simpson, are clear cut and strong in terms of simplicity. Production by Harry Joe Brown and direction by John Brahm are of the best.

The story concerns the career of a lumberjack, victim of wanderlust, who marries a dance hall girl of dubious past relationship to an adventurous blackleg who continues to figure in both of their lives through a sequence of travels from city to city, finally to Alaska. Episodes of violence characterize the progress of the tale, but the characters develop as circumstances influence them until, with birth of their child, man and wife find peace and happiness.

The spirit of the period, as familiarized by books and legends which have been popular since the turn of the century, is preserved with fidelity and no trimmings. A high degree of realism is obtained without cost to logic or the essential values of the story.

The nature and treatment of the material suggests discouragement of juvenile attendance.

Private Nurse

(In 20th Century-Fox first block)

Vocational Trivia

This surface skimming of the aspects of the professional calling named in the title stacks up as the trading factor in the company's first block of five, a picture which an exhibitor can take or let lay, so to speak, without depriving his customers of anything important to their entertainment satisfaction. It is a program item of no consequence save as a subject with which to consume an hour of running time in areas where the double feature policy is mandatory by custom.

Top name in the enterprise is Jane Darwell, portraying a nurse who takes into her matronly custody a younger member of her profession who has been left at the altar by her betrothed. The story, however, generates no suspense or interest as it pertains to the lives of these principals, coming to a climax, instead, when the child of a racketeer, crippled in a skating accident, finds out that a mother believed dead is still living and prevails upon her father to reunite them. Ann Todd, single-handedly, puts pathos into this section of the picture, making its only claim for attention.

Directed by David Burton for Executive Producer Sol Wurtzel, the picture suffers from dialogue trouble and inadequate performance.

Hurricane Smith

(Republic Pictures)

New Wrinkle on a Western

This is an action film based on "reclamation of the land" idea which was argued some years ago in "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town." Sandwiched in the plot for greater suspense-builders are a murder and bank theft. Ray Middleton, who came to Republic via "Lady from Louisiana" and "Gangs from Chicago," plays the lead, opposite Jane Wyatt, former Broadway actress who was last seen in "Lost Horizons" and Republic's "Girl from God's Country." Mr. Middleton is not much on histrionics but his charming smile, good looks and he-man physique should make him a favorite with the ladies.

"Hurricane Smith" is a young rodeo star who, through unusual circumstances, finds himself possessor of $200,000 stolen by two gangsters who had involved him in a bank theft and murder, for which he had been convicted and sentenced. "Hurricane" takes the money, marries his girl, a reporter from Chicago and settles down in a western ghost town to help the citizens reclaim their land and generally build up community enterprises. After five years, one of the gangsters learns of "Hurricane's" project and moves in to blackmail him. In a tense, dramatic scene, "Hurricane's" wife kills the interloper and when the town sheriff arrives with lawyer "Ingersoll Reed," a friend of the Smiths, the lawyer adroitly concocts a suitable explanation of the killing which throws the sheriff off the track of uncovering "Hurricane's" past, and all ends happily.

The film, produced by Al Wilson and directed by Bernard Vorhaus, lags in certain scenes and the dialogue is not exactly inspired. But on the whole the story provides good entertainment for audiences who prefer action romances.

Harry Davenport in the role of "Lawyer Reed" gives a creditable performance as the wily friend who saves the Smiths from further disaster. Jane Wyatt is good as the wife, and J. Edward Bromberg plays an oily, moon-faced, slick gangster with an eye to the Peter Lorre type of villain.

Arizona Bound

(Monogram)

New Western Series

Monogram herewith introduces a new series of westerns, feature of which is the return to the screen of Buck Jones and Col. Tim McCoy, two of the most popular of western stars of yore. Under the general label of "The Rough Riders," the series will present them, teamed with Raymond Hatton, another screen veteran, as three retired United States marshals who are periodically called from retirement to restore law and order in various parts of the west.

"Arizona Bound" gives promise of a group in which action and other elements will find ready customers among western fans. However, the series' debut film is marked by irregular pacing, trite dialogue, and unsteady direction.

There is plenty of movement in the story, which deals with the trio's ridding an Arizona town of a criminal element which seeks to take over the Wells Fargo franchise from a girl whose late father started the stagecoach line. After the climax, they ride their separate ways again, back to their respective ranches.

This is a Scott R. Dunlap production, directed by Spencer Bennet.

"THERE'S NO PLACE LIKE HOLLYWOOD"

Fame came to Sanford Stock, Jr., of Hollywood, and joy to his parents when, at the age of 10 months, MGM hired him, because his personality and red hair harmonized with Greer Garson's, for the studio Technicolor production of "Blossoms in the Dust".

As the weeks sped by, Mr. and Mrs. Sanford Stock, Sr., amassed a fine collection of clips from fan magazines and rotogravure sections showing their son clasped in Miss Garson's arms and his name in print.

When the picture opened at the Four Star theatre, the ads contained a closeup of MGM's star and their baby.

The Stocks attended the opening performance, thrilled at the pictures of their son displayed in the lobby.

Inside came the letdown.

Critics Conform

Lay press critics and correspondents, who were expected to "take steps" last week to frustrate the rule banning them from tradeshows conducted for exhibitors and trade press exclusively, didn't.

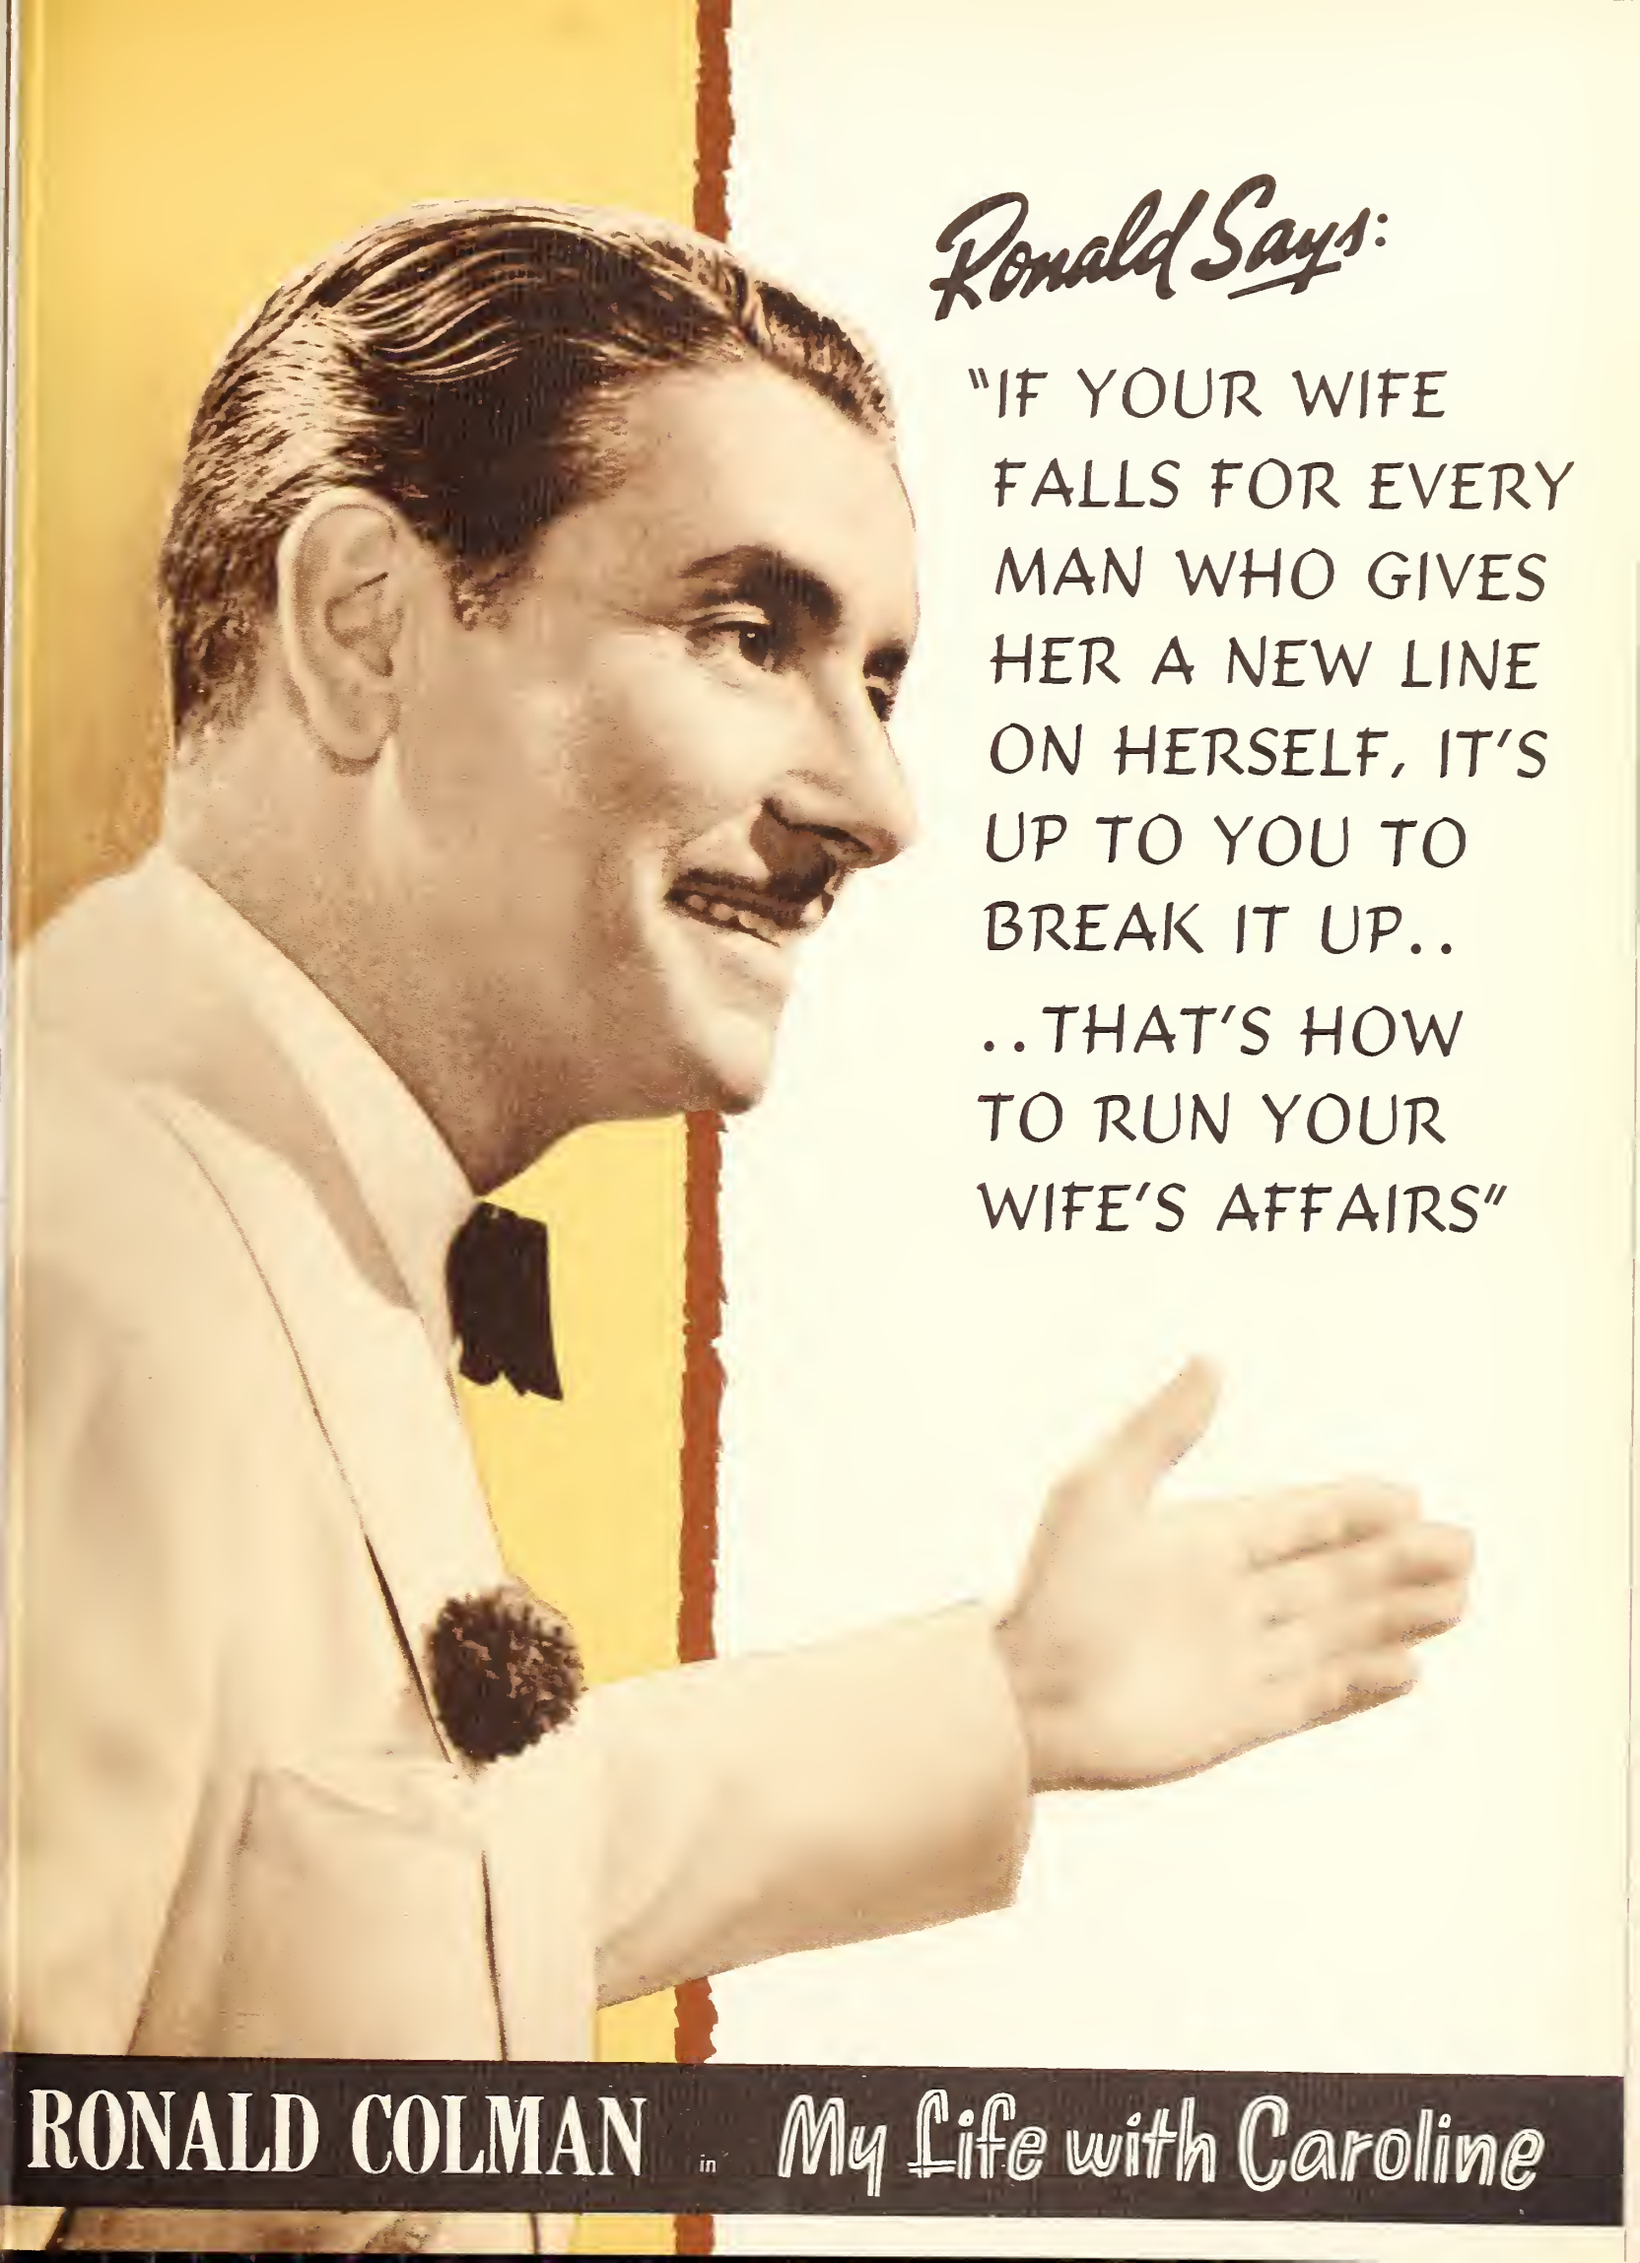
On the contrary, and with an unanimity in sharp contrast to past performance, they not only conformed to the procedure established by companies signatory to the Consent Decree but told their readers, in print, that they had fallen into line. Hollywood had expected them to renew their recent efforts, undertaken on less provocation, to "cop sneaks," which is the colloquial term for the practice of attending test-screenings of pictures and reviewing them in their incompleted form.

Louella Parsons, International News Service columnist, indicated her intention to abide by industry wishes in the matter by giving top-of-column prominence to a somewhat wistful but finalistic farewell to the institution of the "Hollywood preview."

Sidney Skolsky wrote a piece in which he appraised the industry's decision as something less than wise but took occasion to say, positively, that he was not going to fight it.

Most surprising and complete of the printed approvals of the new procedure was that of Jimmie Fidler, McNaught Syndicate columnist and whose radio reviews of product in the past were counted as perhaps the most damaging ever contrived. He wrote in his July 18th column:

"Frankly, I side with the studios. Why should they permit their films to be previewed months in advance? What possible advantage can they gain from praise that is apt to be forgotten by the time the pictures reach theatres? It's even possible that the public, vaguely remembering reviews and the titles of pictures, may think they are being shown old films and, consequently, avoid seeing them.



"As for you who read columns, I should think you would much prefer timely reviews of pictures that are being shown or are about to be shown. In that way critics' opinions may help you to select your screen entertainment—and isn't that what you want?

"Certainly the refusal of studios to preview pictures prematurely isn't going to prevent critics from seeing them. If I'm barred from advance peeps, I shall simply catch the pictures when they are shown in theatres here (which is usually about the time or just prior to the time they are shown elsewhere) and pass along my opinions.

"In so doing I think I'll be rendering a better service than I have rendered in the past when I was often forced by competition to publish reviews weeks in advance."

PHILADELPHIA SOME RUN DECISION BRINGS FIRST DISTRIBUTOR APPEAL

MGM Seeks Affiliate Protection for Wilmington House; Settle Dallas Clearance; Second New Haven Action

A consenting distributor sought reversal of an arbitration award for the first time this week when Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer filed an appeal from the decision of Ruppert C. Schaeffer, Jr., who awarded some run to the Earle theatre, New Castle, Del., on July 1st. The complaint, filed in March by David Silver, was the second case in the Philadelphia tribunal.

The case is the fourth to be carried to the three members of the Appeals Board at New York. Two cases, one on clearance, one on some run, are pending before the board. Its first decision, in the Ken theatre case at Chicago, upheld the arbitrator.

Asks Review

The notice of appeal entered by MGM through C. Stanley Thompson, home office attorney, asks the "supreme court" of the consent decree arbitration system to review the company's argument before Mr. Schaeffer on May 15th at Philadelphia. At that time Mr. Thompson and witnesses for the distributor argued that they were entitled to withhold run for the Earle on the basis of a 10-year-old regional agreement protecting affiliated Metro houses in the Wilmington area.

Loew's Parkway theatre at Wilmington was named as an interested party in the complaint. Under the unique Wilmington setup whereby Loew's took over the operation of certain key houses in the area under a former sales policy the company sells no subsequent runs of its product to unaffiliated houses in Wilmington, New Castle or other nearby towns.

Mr. Schaeffer, professor at the Wharton school of the University of Pennsylvania in his decision overruled MGM's contention that the case involved protection of circuit theatres under section 17 of the decree rather than some run under section 6. He ordered the distributor to offer some run of its pictures to the Earle and assessed costs of the case against the defendants.

The case is now complicated by the fact that in the interim since the hearing on May 15th the Earle has been sold by Mr. Silver to John Kozac. Neutral attorneys, however, are of the opinion that the award will continue to be binding upon the distributor unless reversed by the Appeals Board.

Meanwhile the Earle theatre continues without MGM pictures. Under the terms of the decree a period of 30 days is allowed for compliance with an arbitrator's award. The filing of an appeal during this period further suspends the award until the Appeals Board publishes its ruling. This will extend final decision in the Earle case by at least 90 days.

Attorneys for MGM indicated that they will not ask for oral hearings before the Appeals Board. Their case will be based on the Philadelphia record and on supplementary briefs. Mr. Kozac also, reportedly, will not seek oral hearings. Neutral observers declared that the case was exceedingly important in setting precedent and predicted that the Department of Justice might again intervene.

The third Dallas arbitration case was settled this week when Lloyd W. Klingman, arbitrator, granted the request of L. M. Rice, operator of the Campus at College Station, Tex., that all five consenting companies be ordered to reduce the 30-day clearance of the Dixie and Queens theatres at Bryan, Tex. Mr. Klingman reduced the margin of the two theatres to 14 days, but maintained the 30-day clearance of the first-run Palace, also in Bryan, and named in the complaint.

Chicago Precedent Cited

The first decision of the Appeals Board in the Chicago Ken case was cited as precedent for a dismissal Tuesday at New Haven of the tribunal's second case by A. G. Gulliver, arbitrator, who ruled that he did not have jurisdiction. He dismissed, during the course of the first hearing, the request of the Saybrook Theatre, Inc., Saybrook, Conn., for a reduction of clearance to national release date. Currently the theatre plays after the Garden theatre, New Haven, and the Essex, in Essex, Conn. Leo Bonoff, treasurer of the Saybrook asked for day and date release.

Mr. Gulliver, who is dean of the Yale University Law School, ruled however that he lacked jurisdiction to say that the theatres are not competitive and that all clearance therefore should be eliminated and national release date run granted the Saybrook. Max Alderman, New Haven attorney, represented the Saybrook. Stuart Aarons, representing Warners and Morton Siegle, representing RKO, argued in behalf of the defendant distributors, Warners RKO and MGM, that Section VIII of the decree does not permit change of run.

Milwaukee Withdrawal

At Milwaukee on Wednesday Lee Macklin, operator of the Grand theatre at New London, Wis., withdrew his clearance complaint, Case No. 2, against the Big Five and the Rio and Appleton theatres in Appleton, Wis., following an amicable settlement. Terms were not revealed.

Observers in New York and Los Angeles, after studying the decision of Herbert Cameron dismissing most of the claims for clearance adjustments in Los Angeles' first case, filed by O. W. Lewis, operator of the Mission Playhouse in San Gabriel, declared that Mr. Lewis had lost his tilt with the consenting distributors and Coast circuits by seeking to adjust too many clearances in one complaint. By seeking to set clearance from large first-runs in Pasadena, including houses of the West Coast and Edwards circuits, they said, Mr. Lewis threatened to upset the whole Southern California clearance arrangement, adding to the difficulty of proving his own situation was "unreasonable" under terms of section VIII of the decree.

If he had sought to adjust clearance in relation only to the immediately competitive Alhambra and San Gabriel houses he would have been more likely to have received a favoring award. Lawyers based their interpretation on the fact that Mr. Cameron slightly modified the San Gabriel-Alhambra-Rosemead margins, but refused to touch existing clearances between the Alhambra and Pasadena, and Alhambra and San Gabriel.

Washington

The initial hearing on July 17th of Washington's sixth case, clearance action filed for the K and B Amusement Company's Apex theatre by James Hayes and Robert Sher, former department of justice attorneys, was uneventful. The first stages of the action against MGM and the Warner circuit in Washington were limited to routine introduction of evidence on past booking, contracts, admissions ad other details. The hearing was continued on Wednesday.

Chicago

Richard F. Kuhns, arbitrator of the fourth Chicago complaint, clearance action of the Portage theatre has sent intervenor applications to 18 theatres named as interested parties. They are: the Irving and Avon, Essaness circuit; Patio, Mitchell Brothers; Times, Mark Brothers; and the Milford, Rivoli, Commodore, Dale, Nita, Logan, Rio, Avaloe, Armitage, Bell, Oak, Karlov, Grand and Pickwick theatres.

Philadelphia

Philadelphia's seventh case clearance complaint of N. Herman Bornstein, operator of the suburban Hatboro, originally scheduled to be heard on July 30th, was postponed to September 10th. All parties agreed on the later date. The complaint involves the Warner circuit's Grove, which enjoys seven-day clearance over the Hatboro. S. Eugene Kuen, Jr., arbitrator, is asked to allow a run immediately following the Grove.

September 8th has been set for the hearing of the clearance complaint of Columbus Stamper, operator of the Great Northern theatre, Philadelphia's eighth case. Walter H. Robinson, local attorney, was selected as arbitrator for the complaint, directed against Paramount, Metro and 20th Century-Fox and involving the Warner theatres. Now playing 21 days after the circuit's Strand theatre, he asks that the clearance be cut to 14 days, seven days after the Warners' Keystone in the same neighborhood.

New York

Hearings at New York on the complaint of the Squire theatre, Great Neck, came to an end on Wednesday. The sessions, which started on April 9th, were the longest series of arbitration sessions reported to date.

New Haven

A. A. Ribicoff, Hartford attorney, will arbitrate the third New Haven case, a clearance complaint from Fred Quatrano, operator of the New Newington theatre in Newington, Conn., against the Big Five.

Theatres Pile Aluminum for Defense Needs

Among the millions of pounds of scrap aluminum being collected for national defense, in the nationwide drive which got under way this week, will be found no small lot from motion picture theatres. There is hardly a place in the country where exhibition interests, large and small, affiliated and independent, was not joining local community drives, piling up the metal, frequently at the cost of admissions donated by hundreds of exhibitors to persons carrying an old pot or a pan to the box office to claim a free ticket offered for single aluminum presentations by young and old.

Theatre lobbies were being turned over by the hundreds as aluminum depots, and in many places action was concentrated through special theatre committee aluminum-recruiting projects. "Special Aluminum Matinees" were the order in many places, with the public invitation to "Pan Our Theatres," as one circuit pundist put it. In other communities, the exhibitors worked with local American Legions, Boy Scouts and thousands of owners made mention of the aluminum collection in their daily theatre advertisements.

Erpi, RCA Waive Royalties

Both Electrical Research Products, Inc., and RCA Manufacturing Company have waived all sound recording royalties for Army Training films produced by Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences for the War Department, it was announced by Darryl F. Zanuck, chairman. All studio licensees were informed of this decision by the companies.

The elimination of these royalty charges will result in a considerable saving in the cost of the training films to the government, and will materially increase the motion picture industry's contribution to national defense.

The broadcasting industry will give priority to those government programs dealing with the essentials of national defense. This was the opinion of the National Defense Committee of the National Association of Broadcasters, following the adoption of a "priorities" resolution for the guidance of the industry.

The committee pointed out that the governmental agencies had made so many requests for time on the air that many stations were finding it impossible to grant all of them and, at the same time, to preserve a balanced program service. Such a balanced program is necessary, the committee said, to continue to attract and hold the large listening audiences, without which governmental programs and announcements would be ineffective.

The committee also approved the resolution adopted by the NAB Executive Committee reaffirming "the industry's desire to continue its present practice of making its facilities available at no cost to government agencies engaged in promoting the national defense program."

Exhibitors Aid U. S. O.

Motion picture exhibitors throughout the country have joined forces to aid the United Service Organizations for National Defense. During the week of September 1st, an intensive campaign will be conducted in theatres to help raise funds for the USO.

The exhibitors meeting in New York, have formed a committee at the request of Thomas E. Dewey, USO campaign chairman, and elected Joseph Bernhard general manager of Warner Theatres, as committee chairman. Serving with him as co-chairman are Edward Kuykendall of Columbus, Mo., president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association; Martin G. Smith of Toledo, president of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, and Nathan Yamins, of Fall River, Mass., a member of the executive committee of the Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors.

Other officers are Leonard Goldenson of Paramount, treasurer; Abe Montague of Columbia, head of the distributors' committee, and Maurice Kann, chairman of the trade paper committee.

The executive committee includes:

Harry Brandt of New York, Colonel H. A. Cole of Dallas, Texas, Jay Emanuel of Philadelphia, Si Fabian of New York, Charles Koerner of New York, John Harris, president of the Variety Clubs of America, Pittsburgh; Herman Robbins of New York, George Skouras of New York, Sidney Samuelson of Philadelphia, Jules J. Rubens of Chicago, R. B. Wilby of Atlanta, Georgia, Pete Wood of Columbus, Ohio, Major L. E. Thompson of New York, Joe Vogel of New York and R. J. O'Donnell of Dallas.

Theatres of Tampa, Fla., are doing their bit to aid the government's defense program by aiding the USO drive. The Victory, in downtown Tampa and the Seminole, a neighborhood house, are running special aluminum matinees at which one or more pieces of abandoned aluminum is the ticket of admission.

The Royal in West Tampa is running a weekly quiz program with defense stamps as prizes. This program operates very much the same as radio quiz programs.

Willard R. Seale, manager of the Orpheum theatre in Spokane, Wash., has announced a "Help Your Country and Help Yourself" plan.

RELEASED THRU UNITED ARTISTS

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Carrying On

Threats of invasion, the quintessential confusion of the world political situation, and the continued fog over the industry's legislative position have failed to stop British producers from getting on with the job. At the moment of writing, mid-July, with thunder clouds massed more ominously than ever above the European horizons, no less than eight feature films are in current and full production on British stages. There would be more were there more stages available, and manpower to operate them. One company—Gainsborough—has reopened a studio in order to cope with its production program, and is making two films at the moment.

Into the bargain innumerable documentaries and shorts are being produced on location, in the smaller studios, and in various parts of the country. Even if military events were to bludgeon the industry to a standstill it would not be without a fierce fight on the part of the victim.

This week's credits for continuity in the face of difficult circumstances go to producer Maurice Ostrer, whose Gainsborough teams are working at Shepherds Bush on the Twentieth Century film, "The Young Mr. Pitt," and at a blitzed but now revivified Gainsborough lot at Islington, on a screen version of British radio's wartime high spot "Hi Gang!"

"Hi Gang!" has gone to Islington because there is no room for it at Shepherds Bush. There, on the banks of the Regent Canal, in one of London's most heavy industrial and thickly populated areas, a district badly hit by enemy action, Ben Lyon, Bebe Daniels and Vic Oliver, an all-American trio, are at work on a translation into screen form of a show which has admittedly been the most popular program the B. B. C. has devised and broadcast, every Sunday evening for a year, since the war started.

Marcel Varnel is directing the Gang in the film, which will have music as one of its strongest features. Song writer Manning Sherwin, who set millions singing about a purely mythical nightingale in Berkeley Square, and who transformed a fevered American hero into a moral object lesson for English children in "The Little Boy Who Never Told a Lie," has teamed with Gainsborough's resident litterateur, Val Guest, and achieved three originals for the film, "Singing to a Million," "Hi Gang" and "They Call Me Sal," which is to be sung by Bebe Daniels as Salome to Ben Lyon as King Herod.

Meanwhile, at Shepherds Bush, the London of George III is being recreated for "The Young Mr. Pitt," which is to be directed there by Carol Reed, for 20th-Fox release. Robert Donat is to be the star.

Three draughtsmen are creating the London of 150 years ago. With already two months spent on research, and upwards of 300 scale drawings complete from old records, documents, contemporary engravings and paintings, Laurence Broadhouse, Maurice Carter and William Bowden plan their Georgian London for "The Young Mr. Pitt," second in 20th Century's £500,000 program in Britain.

The exterior of the old Parliament will show on the side of the House of Commons the quaint coffee shop, hatter's, hosier's and Bellamy's historic Pie Shop, frequented by M. P.'s of the day.

Apart from London, the scope of this production under Carol Reed's direction will cover such incidents as George III at his Royal Bathing Pavilion at Weymouth, the birth of Napoleon in Corsica, the storming of the Bastille in the French Revolution and the training of the "Home Guard" of the time at Walmer in Kent.

Full Program

Total activity is the watchword at the Ealing Studios, where, for the time being, purely dramatic pictures have been shelved to enable Michael Balcon's teams to launch into production of documentary dramas with a war bias.

Final studio touches have been applied to Will Hays' "Black Sheep of Whitehall," and the unit is at present away on location making use of weather, description of which the Censor will probably refuse to pass, but which can be recorded as very suitable for exterior filming.

At Ealing itself the two pictures upon which the units are concentrating are "Ships With Wings" and "The Big Blockade." Actual shooting has been finished on the former picture and the artists have gone their several ways. Sergei Nolbandov is presently working on various technical and treatment sequences.

On the stage Charles Frend is in charge of his first directorial assignment, "The Big Blockade," which is an ambitious documentary drama, dealing with Britain's economic war, and in which no less than 80 speaking parts are provided, many of them to be taken by distinguished members of the Government and public propagandists. For instance, Mr. David Bowes-Lyon, Public Relations Officer to the Ministry of Economic Warfare, has already played his own real life role in a sequence depicting a press conference at the Ministry. Mr. Ronald Cross, erstwhile Minister of Shipping, Dr. Hugh Dalton, and American newspaperman and British broadcaster Quentin Reynolds are among others who will be seen on the screen. Among the artists who are playing in the film are included Will Hay, in a straight role of skipper of a trawler, Alfred Drayton, as chief of an ersatz rubber factory in Germany, Leslie Banks, Michael Redgrave and Bernard Miles.

Five at Elstree

The war situation is not going to deter British National from pursuing their production programme in Britain. With one picture already on the floor, "The Common Touch," which John Baxter is directing at Elstree, four more are now announced by George Parish, chief of the organization. Principal subject in the line-up is an ambitious Air Force story, "One Of Our Aircraft Failed To Return," charge of which is to be taken by Michael Powell. This is due to commence in a few days.

Arthur Lucan will continue his adventures as Old Mother Riley, this time in "Old Mother Riley At The Circus," which begins at Elstree the Monday after this is mailed (July 14th).

Also acquired for production by the British National company are two other subjects. One J. B. Priestley's "Let The People Sing," and an original story by Ian Dalrymple, chief of The Crown Film Unit, dealing with the landing of British paratroops in Italy. This will be directed by Lance Comfort, who recently made "Penn of Pennsylvania" for British National.

All are set for release by Anglo-American Film Corporation.

Meanwhile, in association with British National, Leslie Hiscott has been concluding "The Seventh Survivor" at Teddington. Actual shooting has been finished and final touches are curently being applied to the picture. Exteriors have yet to be filmed somewhere on the coast of Britain.

Title changes being in the air, William Sistrom, executive producer in charge of RKO-Radio British Productions, has decided that the film launched as "Meet The Tiger" shall now be changed to "The Saint Meets The Tiger." Final sequences are being filmed at Denham on a set representing a Cornish fishing village, with Hugh Sinclair and Jean Gillie under the direction of Paul Stein. Meanwhile exteriors have been taken in Cornwall itself by production Manager Phil Brandon recently, with the unit and the permission of the Naval authorities.

Camerawork on "The Young Mr. Pitt," Twentieth Century Production for 20th Century-Fox release, is to be handled by Freddie Young, one of Britain's noted camera "cracks," and to whose credit are "Victoria the Great," "Sixty Glorious Years" and "Goodbye, Mr. Chips."

Recording has been completed at Pinewood this week, where the stages were reopened for the first time in many months to permit the London Symphony Orchestra to do the music for "Jeannie," Tansa film production with Barbara Mullen in the leading role.

HEROISM OF STAFFS AND PUBLIC KEEPS BRITISH CINEMAS RUNNING

Only 290 of 5,000 Film Theatres Closed for Duration by Fire or High Explosive Bombs; "Calm Tenacity" of Managers Praised

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

With Britain's second year of battle drawing to its close, and British chins at the same level at which they have always been poised, a survey of the industry scene reveals that the picture house in this bombed and Blitzed battlefield has survived with a normalcy the more astonishing for its spirit of seeming indifference to abnormal conditions.

To date some 690 odd picture houses have closed their doors as a result of war conditions, most of them because they have been either damaged or destroyed by enemy action. As some are repaired and opened again, others are closed as a result of raids. Probably 190 of these closures were voluntary, economic rather than material casualties. In all likelihood the total number of picture houses still closed as a result of enemy action does not exceed 290 . . . a small figure as compared with the 5,000 odd cinemas within range of Hitler's Luftwaffe.

Many of the casualties are total losses, not likely to be met this side of the War. Total damage to cinemas, in towns like Southampton, Merseyside, Portsmouth, Coventry, Bristol and London has removed them from the lists entirely. In other areas the evacuation of the population has made it uneconomic for picture houses to operate, and repairs have not been essayed even up to the legal limit of £100. Yet in some shattered and devastated districts, where, the uninitiated might not expect to find a living soul, cinemas are carrying on, and patrons still paying their bobs to get solace and distraction from the sordid preoccupations of a war-shattered existence.

A Record of Heroism

The record of survival in those houses which have continued to operate in face of the most cruel conditions is a record of heroism and calm tenacity on the part of audiences, no less than that of staffs, in the most epic tradition.

Many houses which still remain out of circulation will in due course be returned to the arena, when the physical processes of servicing, of electricity, water, et cetera, have been restored to normal in the requisite areas. Others are prevented from restoration by the limit of £100 imposed on expenditure in regard to repairs and rebuilding, though special permits have been given for this figure to be exceeded in particular cases.

Within the week of writing—the second week in July—one West End London cinema, the Leicester Square Theatre, closed by blast damage since October, 1940, and damaged again in another raid, has been re-opened to the public. Later this month the New Gallery, closed frequently since the War, will re-open again shortly.

Whether the story concern circuits or independent houses, areas not badly hit by raids, or badly Blitzed regions like Southampton and Portsmouth, it is a story to stir the souls of the most detached or commercially minded student of the industry.

A characteristic circuit in Blitzed Britain is Associated British, with some 450 houses in its organization, all over the country, in remote villages and busy industrial towns, residential suburbs and cathedral cities. Of these 450 since the outset some 210 have been damaged by raids, in various degrees, burnt out by incendiaries, blasted by high explosive. All but eight of these are open again, and operating normally. They have been closed for a day in some cases, for three months in others, not closed at all in many instances.

"Open at Normal Times"

Says Arthur Moss, General Manager of the Associated British chain: "I have no words to express my admiration and appreciation for the way the staffs in our houses have carried on not only in helping put things back to normal, but in saving cinemas and property during the most intense raids. They have risked their lives putting out incendiaries and oil bombs, dashed through blazing buildings and over dangerous staircases and passageways to save the cinemas. They have been indifferent to danger and as a result have saved not only the houses but surrounding buildings. All night, with the bombs bursting all round, and fires blazing nearby, they have worked like Trojans, clearing up debris, tidying, cleaning, and restoring order so that next day the show might go on. . . . And as I say, again and again, I have had the same report. . . . A cold detached record of heroism and unselfish devotion. . . . Followed by the formal laconic statement 'The theatre was open at normal times.'"

In some cases films have been destroyed and programmes have next day been carried on with emergency films kept at hand for that purpose. Projectionists must work at the top of the buildings with an open vent to the roof or balcony. In spite of this they have carried on with no protection other than the wall and the roof, first stop for the Nazi incendiaries. In one instance a manager, oblivious of danger, went into a theatre which had become a blazing inferno, to try and put out fire bombs. He died in hospital twenty-four hours later.

Blitzed towns, of which the port of Southampton is a typical instance, suffer badly when the Luftwaffe comes over in force. Southampton has had, since the war, some 800 alerts (nine words censored) of these raids were of the concentrated "Blitz" type. Yet of the City's seventeen cinemas over half are still operating. On one night, in January last, seven picture houses were damaged or destroyed. The Picture House, veteran among the town's cinemas, was the first to suffer and was burnt out. Next door, the City's newest house, the Classic, escaped, its only damage the burning of the vestibule, licked by the flames from the Picture House next door. Same night the Forum, one of the City's largest houses—and now operating again normally, and with hardly a sign of bombing—was hit by a high explosive, which badly damaged the stage and rear of the theatre. In the ordinary way, Manager Scott Buccleuch was wont to ask his audience to stay and see the show through. That night he suggested they go home. Half an hour after the last patron left, the H. E. fell. There were no injuries, neither to Scott Buccleuch nor his staff, nor to a party of soldiers who stayed behind. On the roof of the Forum, as well as that of the Broadway, The Gaiety and other cinemas in the town, incendiaries poured—either to burn themselves out on the concrete, or to be doused by staffs using hoses, stirrup pumps, and sand buckets.

During the Southampton Blitzes the vestibules and foyers of cinemas such as the Palladium were used as casualty dressing stations and relief centres. The same story can be repeated from other towns and cities in Britain.

Snub Hitler's Threats

In Blitzed Southampton today, despite the scarred and ruined streets, and where life goes on with a normalcy which is both astonishing and inspiring, the remaining picture houses are open and doing good business. When the sirens sound audiences ignore them, save those who want to go out for a few minutes to see what is going on.

Not many miles away is another heavily Blitzed town, the naval centre, Portsmouth, which has been the repeated victim of the Luftwaffe's attentions. Like its sister city, Southampton, it has had more than its share of damage. Like its sister city, it is carrying on, not so much with a conscious smile, as with a complete indifference to Hitler's threats, and a nerve unbroken by the bombs of his airmen.

Typical of the Portsmouth spirit and typical of the British, is the Queen's Cinema, a small 520-seater in a cruelly bombed part of the city, a normally peaceful working class area. It would be injudicious, probably to tell the Luftwaffe what it has, and what it has not hit. But that its untrained men are very bad shots is the most charitable way of expressing conditions in a city with many military objectives.

The Queen's Cinema is owned byCEA's ex-president, Councillor H. P. E. Means.

To walk through a Blitzed and battered area like that in which the Queens is situated, to pass boarded windows and broken shops, clamber over hundreds of yards of debris and rubble where only a mangy cat or forsaken dog may be living, is naturally a shock to the traveller. To come across a 520-seater cinema with its loud speaker-ors going, and a British audience, besprinkled maybe with a few foreign sailors enjoying Lone Wolf or Tom Tyler, is a shock of another and more invigorating kind.

"When the sirens go," said Manager James Dickson, "they just mutter, 'Oh! there they go again,' and either stay where they are or maybe run out to satisfy their curiosity when the guns begin to bark. They never lose their heads. And those whose houses are standing will not be budged. They are marvelous!"

FILM FOOTAGE EXCEEDS QUOTA

Footage registered for the British exhibitor quota during the war year from October, 1939, to September, 1940, far exceeded the statutory obligation, despite the blitzkrieg and general dislocation of business, according to Board of Trade figures just released.

The total of British feature footage shown during the year was 22.9 per cent, as compared with the statutory minimum of 15 per cent. The total feature footage for the year was 41,743,000,000, of which 9,599,000,000 was British. The total was an increase of 8 per cent over last year.

Total footage of all grades was 45,741,000,000, of which 11,000,000,000 feet or 24.1 per cent, was British.

JUSTICE DEPARTMENT SPEEDING UP TO PUSH FILM AND OTHER ACTIONS

Crescent Case Goes Into Third Week of Trial, with More Criticism of the Government by Presiding Judge Davies

The Justice Department's first "field suit" against a large independent circuit and the majors—that in the Nashville Federal Court against Tony Sudekum's Crescent circuit and Universal, United Artists, and Columbia—rolled into its third week Monday, with Federal Judge Elmer Davies, sole determinant of the trial, on several occasions criticizing the Government's conduct of the prosecution.

Meanwhile, Thurman Wesley Arnold, heading the Department's anti-trust division, Monday began to reorganize it. The first step was an 11-man board to recommend and formulate policy, and devise time-saving procedures. Reason for the board is the division's heavy calendar on which are two other film industry "field suits," and one against the "little three," in New York.

The Department will push its case against the Schine ciruit and the "little three" at Buffalo, New York, in the autumn; and against the Griffith circuit and the same, at Oklahoma City, later. It then plans to continue its "key" anti-trust prosecution in New York, against Universal, United Artists, and Columbia, majors who did not enter the consent decree now being observed by the other five large film companies.

Alleged Conspiracy

Judge Davies, in the Nashville case, last week criticized the volume of the Government's testimony from independent exhibitors who claim they were threatened or forced from business by the Crescent circuit or its affiliate, Cherokee Amusements. "All that is necessary," he said, "according to the Government's conspiracy theory, is to show that Tony Sudekum, through a large number of theatres, exercised circuit buying powers in a conspiracy with distributors in restraint of trade."

The judge also belittled the testimony of one witness, Tim Smith, an exhibitor.

On Monday, after two weeks of continuous testimony from a stream of Government witnesses, the judge remarked, after defense contention that a prima facie case had not been built, "There is not a strong prima facie case of conspiracy."

The Government, nevertheless, apparently coming to the end of its exhibitor testimony, on Monday produced the first witness from the majors, Oscar Morgan, now Paramount short subjects sales manager, and formerly a district manager for the company, at Atlanta; and Tuesday saw Thomas Connors, of MGM, take the stand.

Last week had seen a continuation of the independent exhibitor testimony anent Crescent methods of acquiring theatres. Additional testimony and revelation of Government methods of obtaining information came from an agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, A. J. Lemaire, of Covington, Kentucky.

It was in connection with this testimony that William Griffith Head, Crescent theatre manager, who charged severe grilling and threats by Government attorneys, repudiated statements allegedly made by him anent Crescent methods.

Monday's testimony by Mr. Morgan produced a section of a telegram and a paragraph of a letter, for argumentation, in each case the Government contending the exhibited portions bore out its charges of collusion between Crescent and the majors; and each case calling for definitions of terms, words, and intentions.

Judge Elmer Davies on Wednesday, July 16th, criticized the volume of Government testimony. "Why go into all these matters," he said, "when all that is necessary, according to the Government's conspiracy theory, is to show that Tony Sudekum (president of the Crescent circuit) through a large number of theatres exercised circuit buying powers in a conspiracy with distributors in restraint of interstate trade?"

John F. Clegget, on the Department of Justice legal staff, then displayed a letter from the circuit to Paramount, on film buying in Union City, Tennessee, contending that Crescent's methods of acquiring theatres were connected closely with the Department's conspiracy charge.

The judge on the same day barred from the record all evidence on chance games. He said this type of testimony was too speculative and too remote from the issues of the current case. The ruling came during examination of J. D. Henry, Hickman, Kentucky, who asserted that one week before he opened a house in Union City, Crescent came in with a third theatre.

Both the judge's observation that Government testimony might not be strictly necessary, and that chance games' evidence is not relevant were taken by observers to portend Court espousal of the defense. The defense had previously objected to testimony concerning chance games.

Mr. Henry's testimony dealt with difficulty in getting product. He said three months after opening his theatre, in March 1939, he sold it to Mr. Sudekum for $8,000, and agreed not to erect or acquire a theatre in a Crescent dominated town for 25 years.

Another Department witness that day was Joseph Wiley, associated with Mr. Henry in the latter's current insurance business, and formerly, when Mr. Hickman operated the Roxy Theatre, at Union City.

Still another Wednesday deponent was Robert L. Curry, former operator of a theatre at Gadsden, Alabama. Mr. Curry's appearance was greeted at the outset with defense objections to testimony concerning a period after the suit was filed. The suit was filed August, 1939.

The judge ruled that charges of violation of the Sherman Act could be those of a "continuing conspiracy."

On Thursday, July 17th, something of a sensation was caused in court, when William Griffith Head, manager of two Crescent-affiliated houses in Central City, Kentucky, denied, on direct examination, the truth of statements he allegedly made to an agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation concerning purported threats instigated by Crescent in order to acquire his theatre in Greenville, same state.

Grilled "Three Solid Hours"

He was then cross-examined by George H. Armistead, Jr., of Crescent counsel, who drew from him the charge he had been held six days in Nashville, by Government subpoena; and that he was grilled three times during this occasion by Government attorneys, one time for "three solid hours."

Mr. Head charged Allen Dobey, of Government counsel, had shaken a fist in his face, and had intimated he was lying. He added he returned to Kentucky two weeks ago, after Seymour Simon, also of the Government staff, asserted he had been intimidating Government witnesses.

A. J. Lemaire, of Covington, Kentucky, an FBI agent working from the Louisville office, then testified about Mr. Head's alleged statements concerning operations in Greenville. Mr. Lemaire asserted Mr. Head sold his Greenville theatre in January 1938, for $8,000, after averring "rumors and threats" that Crescent con-

Majors Attack Minnesota's Attack on Decree's Blocks-of-Five Selling

The majors have moved at long last to defeat the Minnesota anti-decree law which forces selling of films en masse with 20 per cent cancellation privilege. At midweek, Loew's Inc., and Twentieth Century-Fox went to court with their complaints, to join those entered Friday, July 18th, in Ramsey district court, St. Paul, by RKO, Warners, and Paramount—complaints which ask declaratory judgments and permanent injunctions against enforcement of the state law. Named as defendants are James F. Lynch, Ramsey County attorney; Edward J. Goff, Hennepin County attorney, and Thomas Gibbons, Ramsey County sheriff.

United Artists, whose policy of selling pictures singly also is threatened by the Minnesota law, was drawing up papers similar to those of the other consent decree majors this week. Hearing, next Tuesday, was expected to result in consolidation of all suits.

The opposition also acted. Clarence E. Holten, attorney for the Allied of the Northwest, consulted with specialists on constitutional law and at the state attorney general's office. Northwest, sponsor of the law, and the attorney general, bound to defend it, will cooperate in a vigorous opposition to the majors' legal move, it was predicted.

David Shearer, of Shearer, Byard & Trogne, and Joseph Findley, of Bundlie, Kelly & Findley, represented the majors in court.

A state rather than Federal court was chosen because less delay was foreseen; and attorneys hope a decision will come before the consent decree buying season is in full progress.

Crescent Judge Scores Witnesses For Government

templated invasion. Such "rumors and threats" were substantiated, it was related, by surveying of a lot next to Mr. Head's theatre.

Mr. Lemaire's statement to the Department of Justice was then read:

"Head will make the Government a good witness. He is alert, and thoroughly familiar with Sudekum's methods."

Tim W. Smith, president of Peerless Enterprises, Inc., Knoxville, was a witness Friday, July 18th; and he asserted his newly opened theatres in Harriman, Morristown, and Newport, all in East Tennessee, were forced to close in 1938, because of Crescent competition, and resultant inability to obtain good product.

Under cross-examination by Mr. Armistead, Mr. Smith admitted he expanded in 1938, in Crescent-towns, because "they were the only towns that were any good."

Mr. Smith said he complained to his Congressman in September 1938; that in October he wrote to Thurman W. Arnold, assistant United States Attorney General; and that he later conferred in Washington.

He said he received evidence, via letter, from Fred Gorman, discharged Cherokee Amusements (Crescent affiliate) bookkeeper, which impelled him to file a $100,000 damage suit in November 1938, in Knoxville Federal Court, against Cherokee and Crescent, and against several distributors.

Judge Davies remarked there was no evidence to prove that Mr. Smith would have succeeded in the theatre operations concerned, even if he had been able to secure product.

Another Friday witness was Andy Anderson, Hartford, Kentucky. He testified about his inability to secure MGM and Paramount films in 1937 for the Kentucky Theatre, Hopkinsville, that state.

Case in Third Week

The case opened its third week Monday, with Judge Davies stating that, thus far, "there is not a strong prima facie case of conspiracy."

The judge's remark was made after his overruling of a defense objection to introduction of all distributors' letters; an objection on the grounds no conspiracy had been proved and therefore distributors' letters were not admissible.

First witness from the majors was Oscar Morgan, Paramount short subject sales manager, and formerly district manager, at Atlanta.

Exhibited was a telegram, March 20th, 1935, from him to William F. Bugie, Paramount's Memphis office, saying:

"Have made deal with Sudekum for S-7; therefore void Paris contract, and do not negotiate Brownsville or Union City." The two first named towns are those previously mentioned in the Government's chain of testimony that Crescent froze out numerous independents.

On cross-examination, Mr. Morgan said the word "void" meant "cancel applications."

There then came under argument a paragraph in one of Mr. Morgan's letters to J. J. Unger, Eastern sales manager for Paramount. The letter concerned negotiations with Tim Smith, previous attestor. The paragraph read:

"In any event, the only way we could sell second run, even if we wanted to in these particular towns, would be after Sudekum had taken the refusal, because Paragraph E of Article 8 of the Crescent Amusement Company franchise provides that he can repeat any feature at a certain given price."

Mr. Morgan clarified meanings of "second run" and "repeat run." He said the former meant showing in another theatre than the first in which the picture played; the latter meant a second showing in the same theatre.

The distinctions were asked as having important bearing in the Government charge.

The testimony then disclosed that the Section 8-E of the franchise with Crescent was modified, limiting the privilege of a "repeat run" to 30 days after the first run. Mr. Morgan denied that both the section and its modification were intended to hamper competition from other second-run clients.

When Mr. Morgan's attention was drawn to Tim Smith's statement that Paramount refused to give second runs in Harriman, Morristown, and Newport, he answered it was because Mr. Smith wanted only "10 or 12 out of 50 or 60 pictures."

Under examination by Robert Wright, of Government staff, Mr. Morgan denied there were numerous complaints from exhibitors about their inability to obtain Paramount films. He asserted he knew of only two.

He defined a franchise as a device to assure definite and continued outlet for films, and abjured the contention it was designed to freeze out independent exhibitors.

Depreciation of the Crescent company's role as a customer, in comparison to dealings elsewhere, was expressed on Tuesday, by Thomas J. Connors, MGM's Eastern, Southern and Canadian sales manager. Mr. Connors was put on the stand by the defense, to show how overemphasized was the relation betwen the distributors and the circuit. Mr. Connors supported this by noting that one picture at the Radio City Music Hall, New York City, can bring more revenue to his company than MGM receives from the whole Crescent circuit in one year.

Mr. Connors denied Loew's ever agreed to suppress competition. It determines its own selling policies, he said.

Dealt with on Tuesday were Loew's negotiations with independent theatres in Gallatin and Brownsville, Tennessee, where presvious testimony had related difficulties of such theatres in competition with Crescent.

Meanwhile, over the weekend, the Government and the defense entered into a stipulation by which distributors' inter-office communications may be entered as evidence without appearance of the parties concerned. The stipulation apparently had the consent of the judge, who had previously barred such procedure. Federal attorneys predicted a result of the stipulation would be shortening of the trial, which they added Monday, might end by Friday. They had originally intended to call 75 additional witnesses, after being apprised of Judge Davies' ruling.

It was said the Government might call only about 10 witnesses from the major's sales staffs.

Arnold Revamps His Division

Thurman Wesley Arnold, head of the Department of Justice anti-trust division, on Monday began reorganizing it, with a special 11-man board, to recommend and devise policy and procedure. The board is necessitated by the heavy calendar, which in turn must be expedited, it was asserted. The division now has 120 Sherman anti-trust act cases pending. It also has pending ten general and five defense patent cases, 22 food cases, forty building trades cases.

Chairman of the new board is Corwin Edwards, economist.

Purchase Theatre, End Trust Suit

Purchase by the Stanley-Warner circuit in Philadelphia of the suburban Lansdowne theatre on Tuesday ended the anti-trust action against the circuit which was started by Henry Friedman, in 939. Mr. Friedman had asked $150,000 in damages for the Lansdowne, alleging monopolistic practices by the circuit. Purchase price was reported to be $170,000.

Variety Clubs Set Recreation, Charity Plans

Variety Clubs throughout the country continue with their plans for their annual outings, cowboy roundups, golf tournaments, dinner-dances and banquets, and for further charity work.

Plans have been completed for an elaborate show at the Columbus, Ohio, Variety Club's second annual Roundup, to be held at Beulah Park on August 2nd, according to Virgil A. Jackson, chief barker. The club promises a "bigger and better" show. The affair will be stag, and in addition to a midway show, there are planned a golf driving contest, frontier fiesta and frolic, a chicken dinner and special entertainment. The subscription is $5 per person.

Field Day at Omaha

Members of the Omaha Variety Club will hold their annual field day for everyone associated with the motion picture industry on July 28th at the Highland Country Club. The program will include an all-day golf tournament, luncheon and dinner and entertainment. Morris Cohn, exhibitor of Council Bluffs, Ia., and Meyer Stern, of Capitol Pictures, are in charge of the affair.

The Kansas City Variety Club's annual party, the big event attended by members, exhibitors, their families and friends, will be held August 11th at Swope Park. The affair had been originally planned for July 28th. Rube Melcher is chairman of the committee and has charge of reservations for the refreshments, events and games.

The Buffalo, N. Y., Variety on August 4th will sponsor District Managers' Day at the Wilmont Golf and Country Club. A golf tournament followed by a dinner-dance will be the features of the day.

In Seattle, Wash., the Northwest Film Club's third annual golf tournament was held on July 23rd at the Inglewood Golf and Country Club. Frank Christie, president of the organization, was in charge of the event which was attended by exhibitors and others connected with the motion picture industry from Seattle, Portland, Tacoma, Bellingham, Wenatchee, Evereet, Olympia, Spokane and other cities. A dinner followed the tournament at which cups and prizes donated by various motion picture stars were awarded.

Charity Work Continues

Rudolph Berger, welfare chairman of the Washington, D. C., Variety Club, has announced that the organization will present the Columbia Hospital with a complete dental unit in the near future. Mr. Berger, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer district manager for that territory, said the equipment would compare with the units given by the Variety Club to the Children's and Providence hospitals in Washington during the past year. Installation of the Columbia equipment is expected to be made within the next two weeks.

The Pittsburgh Variety Club's 13th annual charity banquet will be held November 2nd with Harry M. Kalmine, general chairman. The tent will sponsor a pre-season professional football game Labor Day, at Forbes Field where the Pittsburgh Steelers and the Detroit Lions will turn over the net proceeds of the game to Variety charities. The Club's annual golf tournament was held Monday, July 21st, at South Hills Country Club, with Art Levy and Archie Fineman as co-chairmen.

The Reel Fellows Club in Detroit has been organized by Michigan film salesmen, and includes a total of 36, all but two salesmen in the state at the present time. Plans for national organization are being made, with a branch club proposed in each exchange city. One activity will be the establishment of a fund from which members can borrow without interest if they become sick or unemployed—with no obligation to repay. Finding employment for members who lose their jobs, as salesmen, theatre managers or others, is another object.

Officers of the club, which will hold noonday luncheons the first Monday of each month, are: president, Jack Stewart, Universal; vice-president, Jack Ryder, Paramount; secretary, Harold Sandelman, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and treasurer Irwin Pollard, Republic.

Al Fisher, owner of the Keswick theatre in Philadelphia, has been elected secretary of the local Variety Club to fill the term of the late John J. Monroe, who died last month.

Members of the St. Louis Variety Club honored Harold Evens, who has been transferred from Loew's in St. Louis to Cleveland, with a luncheon last week. Mr. Evens was a charter member of the St. Louis club.

Chief Barker Heck Everett held a special meeting of all members of the Charlotte, N. C., Variety Club late last week to formulate plans for activities during the fall season.

Sound equipment for the club's "Shut-in Truck" has been installed and first showings with the new vehicle are expected shortly. Philip Longdon and Benn Rosenwal, assistant chief barker, were largely responsible for acquiring and equipping the truck.

WAR GIVES CANADIAN TRADE WIDE ASSORTMENT OF RULES, REGULATIONS

Acute Shortage of Theatre Help Due to Enlistments and Government Employment; New Unemployment Insurance

by W. M. GLADISH
in Toronto

The film industry in Canada knows there's a war because of the censorship, imposts, assessments, restrictions and regulations which must be observed by all exhibitors and exchanges. In like manner, film employes have more than a slight inkling that a modern war costs money when they scan the deductions, voluntary and compulsory, which are made in weekly pay envelopes.

The work of the theatre manager has been made more intricate because of additional book-keeping for amusement tax reports and the additional levies, the latest of which, effective July 1st, was Federal Unemployment Insurance which is expected to build up a reserve to take care of post-war labor problems and to which employer, worker and Dominion all contribute every time a payroll is signed. Theatre book-keeping is no longer a vest-pocket procedure.

Payments and Statements

Today the theatre employe gets what is left after the following deductions have been made: National Defense Tax of five per cent—lower in some wage classifications—Unemployment Insurance premium, also compulsory; regular weekly War Savings Stamps purchases; instalment on Victory Loan purchase; regular contribution to War Victims' Fund and, possibly, an income tax instalment.

For the theatre manager, there is the weekly job of making out a special boxoffice report to the Customs and Excise office for the 20 per cent Federal Amusement Tax along with tax payment; weekly reports on Defense Tax with periodic payments; Unemployment Insurance forms to be filled out and insurance stamps to be purchased to be fixed into insurance books held by employes; War Savings Stamps records, and entering voluntary contributions by the staff.

Apart from tax and assessment routine and, in some instances, group insurance and pension requirements, the theatre manager takes part in patriotic campaigns, decorates the theatre for Loan and other drives, donates the house for war charity shows, gives part of his newspaper advertising for the cause and attends a flock of community meetings when he may be expected to give time, money and facilities for war work.

The film exchanges are in the same situation with respect to wage deductions, co-operating in campaigns, donating films, sending out patriotic trailers without charge, committees to be organized, meetings to attend, war loans to support, etc.

In addition, there are a variety of war taxes, such as the 10 per cent Defense War Tax on practically all imports from countries outside of the British Empire, the 10 per cent tax on funds exported to other countries and special taxes on corporation income. The film distributors must apply many times to the Foreign Exchange Control Board for authority to make payments involving foreign exchange and permits must be secured for some commodity imports. Many items of equipment and printed matter are banned entirely to conserve exchange. In every film office there is a corps of clerks who do little else but handle Government permit applications and report forms. There is the cost of this help and the license fees to be paid in addition to the restrictive nature of the regulations.

Then there are the prohibitions. You can't build a new theatre because the material is wanted for war purposes and big projects are left until after the war to help employment. You can't modernize a theatre if the cost of alterations runs greater than $10,000. You cannot install new equipment which costs more than $5,000. You cannot install oil-heating plants at all because of difficulties found in the oil industry.

Theatres Lack Help

Ushers, cleaners, caretakers and doormen are hard to get because of enlistments in the armed forces and the attractiveness of war industries. The usher situation has eased during the past week or two because high school graduates have become available but when many of these young fellows enter university in the fall there will be another shortage, it is anticipated. Charwomen have quit because their men are now getting army pay or have secured munition jobs. Janitors with mechanical experience have been "drafted" into the metal trades.

There is no complaint. Theatre managers and exchange staffs are busier than ever before but there is only a shake of the head when they see government reports piling up. It is all accepted as a part of the war effort—without distinction of military uniform.

Exhibitors, Undertakers Grouped

In the midst of war activities, munition production, Victory Loan campaign and legislative developments affecting business generally, Canada is engaged in census taking for the decennial survey of the country and those in the film industry have still another feature to engage their current attention.

The surprising jolt of the enumeration job is that theatres have been grouped with undertakers, cartage companies, barber shops and repair shops under the heading of "Service Establishments."

Film distributors are being listed as wholesale importers along with a wide variety of merchandisers while provision is made for the registration of film booking associations as co-operative buying and selling organizations. These include the Exhibitors Booking Association, Associated Theatres Limited, and Consolidated Theatres Association, operating in Toronto.

Film laboratories in Canada do not have to be listed because they do not produce goods in their own establishments which are sold to customers at retail prices, it is announced, while those engaged in professional services are not being listed as merchandisers. These include musicians, actors, radio performers, artists, doctors, lawyers and customs brokers. Chain theatres are not classed as branches or units of chain companies because they have been grouped as service establishments. In the case of exceptions, it has been pointed out that the Bureau of Statistics is already in possession of necessary data through annual company and financial reports otherwise received. But the census questions run into the hundreds for individuals and business enterprises anyway.

Theatre and film exchange companies are also busy with arrangements for Federal Government unemployment insurance for extensive groups of workers to start July 1, to which both the companies and employes will be required to make periodic payments under a gigantic state insurance scheme.

New Theatre, Despite Priorities

Because of the prohibitory measures for the conservation of metals and building supplies and the effect of the restriction upon the development of the new Odeon circuit and the trade generally, the news that a new theatre would be provided for the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto was definitely startling. It is to be completed in time for the annual exposition which is scheduled for Aug. 22 to Sept. 6 and, according to announcement, it will be complete in every detail with seating accommodation for 900. The theatre, which will be operated by the Exhibition management, will be used for the presentation of propaganda films and newsreels, with stage shows at scheduled hours, it is announced.

Apparently this theatre does not come within the scope of the Priorities Board of the Department of Munitions and Supply but the loophole is probably the fact that some official government releases are to be included in the daily programs for the enlightenment of the thousands of visitors from all parts of Canada and the United States.

The creation of the C.N.E. theatre is not being happily received by film exhibitors who have been stopped short in the completion of theatre projects, however, and it would not be a surprise if the unfortunate owners of half-theatres use this precedent as a strong argument for dispensation to permit them to finish what has been started. Sam Fingold, owner of theatres at Mt. Forest and Chesley, Ont., made a special trip to Ottawa to try to obtain official action with respect to his theatre project at Cornwall, Ont., for instance. When the ban was put into effect, the steel fabrication and other material for the new house had actually been delivered and was ready to be put into place when work was ordered stopped.

U. S. Tax Amendments Watched

The adoption of Federal Amusement Tax amendments in the United States, presumably to become effective in the Fall, has been watched with more than usual interest by Canadian moving picture men because of the establishment of the 20 per cent amusement tax by the Dominion Government in a first step in this direction. The Canadian tax has no theatre exemptions with the slight exception that passholders are not required to pay the levy because they do not contribute to the direct boxoffice revenue of a theatre, on the total of which the government percentage is collected.

The decision at Washington to remove the tax on admissions for uniformed members of the armed forces has touched a delicate point in the Canadian scene. There have been objections to the imposition of the tax on Canadian soldiers but nothing has been done about it because the Government has said that it needs the money—and probably the authorities hesitate to start to make any exemption for any class of the general public during the war at least. The only thing that Parliament has done along this line for the troops has been to provide reduced fares on the railways for the warriors but only when it can be shown that they are taking their annual leave—which may entail a considerable mileage—or their final leave before proceeding to a destination outside of the country for active service.

Many Canadian exhibitors have granted reduced admission prices to men in uniform and the government has taken no objection to this practice in a ruling that the Department of Finance is not concerned in the admission scale of any theatre or from whom the tax is collected, as long as the public treasury receives 20 per cent of the gross take from week to week. The exhibitors, in turn, have been practically solid in the decision to pass on the tax to the public on a pro rata basis, from juveniles up.

Exhibitors Included in New Brunswick 'Co-op'

by VICTOR SERVICE
in St. John, N. B.

The co-operative movement which has been active in the fisheries, agriculture, banking in eastern Canada the past few years, has been extended to include theatre operators. At a conference held at Amherst, N. S., a new organization was founded for co-operative action in booking and renting pictures, equipment, accessories. The official name has not been decided. The organization is the brain child of Archibald J. Mason, of Springhill, N. S., for the past three decades operating the Capitol there, and John Butler, of Moncton, N. B., for the past few years manager of the Imperial, and formerly manager of the St. John exchange for Empire-Universal.

Mr. Mason was elected to the presidency of the new association, with M. E. Walker, of Halifax, N. S., as vice-president. Mr. Walker operates the Gaiety in Halifax and Imperial in Sackville, N. B., and also theatres at New Germany and Barrington Passage, N. S. Naming of the secretary-treasurer was left to the president. On the board are the president and vice-president, Peter Leger, of Bathurst, N. B., Fred Gregor, of New Waterford, N. S., and Frank Sobey, of Stellarton, N. S. It is claimed 25 independent theatres are affiliated, and that the following exhibitors are committed, in addition to those already named: Earl Nesbitt, of Edmundston, N. B.; H. Curston, of Grand Falls, N. B.; S. C. Brownell, of Sackville, N. B.; A. A. Fielding, of St. John, N. B.; John Khattar and Starr McLeod, of Sydney, N. S.; John Farr, of North Sydney, N. S.; Louis Weiner, of Glace Bay, N. S.; Lloyd Mason, of Springhill. Having looksees at the Amherst meeting were: Del Goodman, of Toronto, Dominion general manager for Paramount; J. J. McCarthy, of New York, who has Canada within his sales jurisdiction for Universal; Clair Hague, of Toronto, Canadian general manager for Universal.

Before arranging the organizing gathering at Amherst, Mason and Butler toured the provinces seeking support of individual exhibitors in behalf of their plan, aimed at reducing the cost of picture programs, projection machines, advertising, seating, sound systems, etc., for those lining up with the co-operative venture. Believed to be the first of the type attempted anywhere.

Deviation from the attitude of theatre operators toward the 20 per cent war levy, has developed in New Glasgow, N. S., and adjoining industrial towns of Stellarton, Westville and Trenton. There had been a solid front in favor of transfer of the tax in full to the customers until Henry MacNeil and N. W. Mason, New Glasgow exhibitors, made a joint decision to absorb some of the tax, and cut the prices to the public. There is a probability that other exhibitors will follow their lead, and that at least half of the 20 per cent will be paid by the theatre operators instead of being collected wholly at the boxoffices. Mr. MacNeal manages the Jubilee and Roxy, and Mason, who is 77, and one of the oldest active theatremen in the world, owns and directs the Roseland and Academy. The 20 per cent assessment has been a vital factor in a business recession at the theatres, prevailing everywhere in Canada, and the absorption of part of the tax, with consequent admission reductions, is aimed at coping with the slump.

Exhibitors Score Carnivals

Theatremen of Moncton, N. B., who had been congratulating themselves on the benefits that would accrue from the ban on all carnivals by the city council, have suddenly found their rejoicing to be premature. After barring all carnivals as nuisances and menaces, and sources of danger during blackouts, the council has reversed its position and granted an application from the Lynch Shows, for July 7 to 12, inclusive. The Child Welfare Association and Firemen's Association had applied for carnival dates under their auspices, and both had been rejected. With the council granting $200 to each association as balm for the refusal. Under the "reconsideration" of the question, a fee of $150 per day to the city has been accepted, but only by a majority of one when the council vote was taken. The local theatre operators have been heavily affected each year by invading carnivals, which damage business greatly, and take almost all their receipts out of the city. All three of the Moncton theatres are locally owned.

Theatre Serves as Church

Donation of the Regent Theatre in St. John, N. B. for use as a temporary church has spelled the difference between failure and success at this house, about six years old.

Despite the efforts of Franklin & Herschorn, owners, business at the Regent, a fine house, seating about 900, failed to respond. Then fire ravaged the Main Street Baptist Church, one of the largest congregations in the city, and located not far from the Regent. The fire was hardly extinguished, when the use of the theatre was offered to the congregation for every Sunday, morning, afternoon and night, for bible school, Sunday school, and the regular two Sunday services, with lighting paid for by the theatre. The offer was accepted, and the Regent became the temporary Main Street Baptist Church, functioning as such about four months, until the church reconstruction was completed. At the return to the church, the pastor, from the pulpit recommended that his parishioners patronize the Regent, although he stressed that he was opposed to theatres and pictures.

That was the turn of the tide, and business has been improving since. Incidentally, at a public ceremony in the church, J. M. Franklin, head of Franklin & Herschorn circuit, was formally presented an expensive gold watch, suitably inscribed, and an address of thanks in appreciation for his timely generosity.

LETTERS FROM HERALD READERS

IN a recent issue, the HERALD'S editorial page had a paragraph about harvest days, breezes and buttermilk out in the great mid-continent. It had, to be sure, not so much to do with the industry of the motion picture, but rather with the life of a land of peace. The HERALD sees journalistic obligation, and opportunity, to be not only the trade paper complete, but also cheerful and aware of the human interests of the nation's showmen. Subjoined are two letters of reader reaction. — T. R.

To TERRY RAMSAYE
Editor of MOTION PICTURE HERALD:

I have been reading your offerings about twenty years I guess. At least as long as I can remember you have been writing in the trade papers, but never in all the time I have been reading your work have you ever said anything that rang the bell like the phrase you use in your last paragraph of the current HERALD editorial wherein you start with "away out yonder the wheat harvest has begun, etc." I spent the first fifteen of my thirty-five years in that country and worked many a hot summer day in the great wheat fields of the Texas panhandle. And when you talk about that cool refreshing breeze after a hot summer day and drinking buttermilk in the shade—man you make me so home sick I can hardly sit here in this hot office and take it much longer.

I've kicked around quite a bit and have seen most of our states as well as much on the outside, having met a lot of people in hammering out a living in this thing called show-business, but I wonder sometimes if those people back there on the farm do not have a lot on us when it comes to contentment and honest to goodness down to earth happiness. Anyway they are a great people and I'm happy to have been one of them.

Keep up the good work Terry. Your leadership has been a grand inspiration to those youngsters like myself who at times have found the ruts pretty deep in the road of success and a lot of curves all of which he has not rounded with a great deal of success yet. But then I wonder if we would recognize it if it came by.—WADE G. LOUDERMILK; Roxy Theatre, Buckeye, Arizona.

To TERRY RAMSAYE
Editor of MOTION PICTURE HERALD:

I don't often write Letters to The Editor, any editor. But I just wanted to say that I got a kick out of reading your final paragraph in the July 12 issue: "Throbbing New York is below this cliffside window." It's very nostalgic and very real, and it's a fine bit of writing. — HAROLD WENGLER, Kiesewetter Advertising Agency, New York City.

WHO SAID CRITICS WERE INFALLIBLE?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:

Just who in tarnation is a movie critic anyway? As far as I can figure, he is just an ordinary human being who sees movies and (unfortunately) writes about them. The unfortunate part is that every time he sees a movie which he doesn't happen to like, he has to prejudice several hundred thousand potential showgoers against that picture. A picture which a good many of them probably would have enjoyed seeing. But they respect the authentic opinion of a real honest-to-goodness newspaper writer, so they stay at home. Why do they consider him an authority? That's simple: it is because he has a job on the paper. As soon as he gets a job, he is allowed to attend previews and is permitted to enter the studios. Does that make him an Einstein or a Greek God or even a good critic? They seem to think it does.

Well, one thing is certain—if he should see a picture he doesn't like, it does not mean that the picture isn't good.

No picture was ever made which could satisfy everybody in the country. It is a known fact that individual's tastes are so varied that no two in the world could ever be alike. It is no secret that certain pictures which are "poison" to one group of persons are often "perfect" for a different group. Of course, some pictures are better than others. So are some columnists. But, no picture is without some merit. I am not so sure I can apply that remark to all columnists. More than a few times, so-called authorities have criticized certain films which were proven and accepted as works of outstanding quality. Some of the views and comments of these famous writers display a surprising lack of intelligence.

What we exhibitors don't quite understand is:—why don't these great critics who understand so much about the show business, and know just exactly what is wrong with modern motion pictures, go into the producing business themselves. There is no doubt that they would revolutionize the industry.—STANLEY M. FRANKLIN, Strand Thatre, San Francisco, Cal.

LACK OF "COMPETENT SHOWMANSHIP" HIT

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:

Kindly permit space to a showman who wishes to add his opinion to the discussion now being conducted on your pages as to why theatre business is what it is today.

I will list what seems to me to be the major causes for this box office drouth, and will then elaborate:

(1st) Lack of competent showmanship on the part of the rank and file of exhibitors.

(2nd) Too much poor product.

(3rd) Liquor and Taverns.

For years now your A-Mike Vogel has carried the torch for the downtrodden manager, and rightly. If more circuit operators had read and put into practice his advice there would be a different air surrounding theatre operation. But no, individuality was crushed under the rubberstamp of the Home Office. Salaries of efficient managers were cut time and again because some youngster just out of High School could see that the routine advertising could be done and the daily and weekly reports.

It is my contention that there is going to have to be a lot of hard work done by some efficient and able showmen to undo the work of the past ten years by the above mentioned Rubber Stamp managers.

The average theatre manager does not make himself a part of the community, does not have his ear to the ground and his hand on the public pulse of his community so that he can properly sell his business and the pictures he shows to that community.—H. M. JOHNSON; P. O. Box 14: Arnolds Park, Iowa.

STRIKE THREATS, SPLIT RANKS AND 'SUBVERSIVES' PLAGUE STUDIO LABOR

A. F. of L. Group Backing Film Cartoonists Causes Inter-Union Disputes; Readers Protest "Piece-Work" Clause

Hollywood was beset with brand new union troubles this week which again threatened widespread studio tieups because of a new crop of inter-union conflicts, and which, along other fronts, involved a purge of "subversive" elements in the ranks.

Of major importance was the threatened tieup of all the studios because of an inter-union dispute over the backing by certain American Federation of Labor groups of the Screen Cartoonists Guild strike at the Walt Disney plant.

Secondly, it appeared that the majority of the ten IATSE business locals, stymied thus far in negotiations for new wage scales and working conditions with the producers, would appeal to the international and consequently to Willie Bioff for aid.

Thirdly, some of the unions embarked upon intramural programs of ridding their own memberships of all termed "subversive"—Communist, Nazi, Fascist and, as one leader put it, "just agitators."

A. F. of L. Ranks Split

Continued support by several AFL groups, especially Cinema Lodge 1185, International Machinists Assn., of the Disney strikers, who are members of Screen Cartoonists Guild which is Local 852 of the Painters Brotherhood, has split AFL ranks sharply. The machinists, by threatening to observe cartoonists' picket lines contemplated being placed around Technicolor, should the color plant continue to process Disney footage, had stopped effectively Technicolor's plan to handle Disney film after other AFL unions, through Bioff, had signed agreements to return to work at Disney's.

Irked because of the machinists' withdrawal from the "front" of AFL crafts, leaders of other unions contemplate reprisals by refusing to work with machinists in other studios, a move which would tie up all Hollywood production. Joseph P. Touhy, business representative of the Studio Transportation Drivers Local 399, and Al Speede, business representative of Studio Electricians Local 40, IBEW, both of which are in the studio union basic agreement, called on E. J. Mannix, to tell him that such procedure was contemplated, in view of the machinists' action. Mr. Mannix reportedly told the union delegates that the studios then would be the injured innocent bystanders, that thousands of workers having no connection with the original dispute would be out of work, and asked that the studios' plight be given full consideration before action was taken.

To prepare the way for any action they might take, union leaders with agreements at Disney's plant decided to ask for the removal of Disney products from the official "unfair" list of the Los Angeles Labor Council, and call in their international representatives for advice on procedure.

Another unusual feature of the "split" in labor ranks was the continued support of the strikers by Film Laboratory Technicians Local 683, IATSE, which is donating $200 weekly to the strike fund. All other IATSE locals are aligning themselves with the locals disapproving of the walkout.

TRUCK STRIKE HITS PITTSBURGH

A truck-drivers' strike in the Pittsburgh territory early this week hampered almost 350 theatres in producing film and created new transportation modes. Some exhibitors picked film up personally while others received it by parcel post. Eighty drivers of the Exhibitors Service Company, are the strikers. They ask, among other things, a ten cents per hour wage increase, and a 48 hour week. George Callahan, president of the shipping company, said strikers' demands would raise his costs $75,000 annually.

A "New York Disney Strike Committee" was formed last week, to aid the strikers. The Screen Publicists Guild, the Screen Readers Guild, the United Office and Professional Workers of America, the League of Women Shoppers, the United American Artists, and the New York Screen Guild Council participated.

On Tuesday, the Disney studio and the strikers appeared nearer conciliation, as representatives of both met under the aegis of J. R. Steelman, Labor Department conciliator, whose offices Disney had previous refused. Gunther Lessing, studio attorney, stated:

"We have agreed to refer the entire matter to Dr. Steelman. He has been advised accordingly. It is our understanding that all parties directly interested have also consented, and the mater is now in the hands of the Government agency."

Charges and counter-charges have been flying since the Disney strike settlement fiasco. An agreement covering not only the cartoonists, but other AFL crafts that supported the guild by direct strike or observance of picket lines, was conceded by Disney and Gunther Lessing, attorney and vice president of the company, with Bioff, who had been asked to aid the situation by the IATSE international which had been appealed to by the other unions, bringing negotiations to what he and everyone else had thought was a close.

(Bioff, it was reported in reliable quarters, had agreed to lend his weight upon condition that his name not be mentioned outside of the conference rooms.)

Accord Repudiated

When the guild strikers were informed of Bioff's participation in the negotiations, they balked and refused to countenance the accord, even the terms of the concessions by Disney being in dispute now.

The Machinists Lodge, after announcing their agreement to the terms given it, next day cancelled it and continued to support the strike physically and financially. Technicolor began processing the Disney footage again, but were forced to stop when machinists threatened to stay away from work. Painters Local 644, a sister local of the cartoonists, and whose business representative is Herbert K. Sorrell, refused the proffered terms.

The Society of Motion Picture Film Editors at first refused to settle their allied dispute with Disney, but later capitulated, going through picket lines. However, the society continued to support the walkout financially.

Disney then issued a statement to the strikers, declaring he had offered "your leaders" the following terms:

"All employes to be reinstated to former positions.

"No discrimination.

"Recognition of your union.

"Closed shop.

"Fifty percent retroactive pay for the time on strike—something without precedent in the American labor movement.

"Increases in wages to make yours the highest salary scale in the cartoon industry.

"Two weeks' vacation with pay."

He continued: "I believe that you have been misled and misinformed about the real issues underlying the strike at the studio. I am positively convinced that Communistic agitation, leadership and activities have brought about this strike, and has persuaded you to reject this fair and equitable settlement."

The striking cartoonists immediately answered:

"Willie Bioff is not our leader. Present your terms to our elected leaders so that they may be submitted to us and there should be no difficulty in quickly settling our differences."

Several days later, the guild declared no such terms as announced by Disney had been offered them.

Meanwhile, Mr. Disney rejected and the strikers accepted a proposal to arbitrate their dispute made by Dr. J. R. Steelman, director of the U. S. Department of Labor conciliation service, Mr. Disney castigating the National Labor Relations board which, he said, had interfered with his employes and had acted in such a manner "as to almost warrant a congressional investigation." Actions of the NLRB made it impossible to agree to arbitration, Gunther Lessing, acting for Mr. Disney, said.

Asks Strike Prohibition

Mr. Steelman proposed that the strikers return to work immediately, and submit all points of dispute to a three-man board whose decision would be mandatory on both parties. Stanley White, of the conciliation service, has been in Hollywood for several weeks investigating all phases of the situation.

On another governmental front, investigators of the NLRB working out of the Los Angeles office have been probing into the charges of Wagner Act violation brought against Mr. Disney by the Cartoon Guild, and a hearing is expected to be set shortly.

The Screen Actors Guild, affiliated with the AFL, has supported and is continuing to support the strike. A total of $2,000 has been given the strikers, and the actors are considering producing a benefit show, in collaboration with the Screen Writers Guild, for the workers "out on the bricks."

The guild claims, in addition, the support of the Film Laboratory Technicians Local 683, IATSE; Screen Office Employes Guild, Screen Publicists Guild, Screen Readers Guild, Radio Writers Guild, American Federation of Radio Artists, Screen Set Designers.

C.I.O. Supports Strikers

Support is also being given the strikers by the CIO's Los Angeles Industrial Council.

Stopped almost in their tracks in attempting to conclude negotiations for new working agreements, changes in which have not been made since 1939, business representatives of at least seven of the IATSE unions are about to appeal to the international officers for aid, thus reversing an announced stand of previous months when they decided to go into the talks with studio heads on their own.

The appeal, if and when, will be a formal communication to international headquarters,

AFL Cleans House; Film Publicists Win Labor Victory

setting out the locals' difficulties in consummating new deals and asking its help. The International, for purposes of the record, then will ask Bioff to step into the picture.

It was disclosed last week that various AFL unions, apparently acting under secret orders from their respective internationals, have started to "clean house" of subversive interests. First local to do so was Drivers Local 399, of the Teamsters International, which expelled two Communists after a union-conducted trial at which evidence purporting to show the pair belonged to the Communist party was given, and the other unions immediately evinced interest in following suit.

The teamsters, at their September convention, adopted stringent rulings concerning subversives, making it mandatory on locals' executive boards to expel them, or in turn be ousted.

The local's trial was conducted with all the aplomb and austerity of a court hearing, handwriting experts being called in to identity similarities between the defendants' penmanship and that appearing on photostatic copies of Communist Party membership cards.

So thorough was Local 399's trial that its method of obtaining evidence was being sought by other unions.

Charges of Communist agitation have been hurled in the Disney strike, principally as a result of the CIO support being given the walkouts.

Paralleling the Hollywood move are the recent actions by AFL groups in other cities in ousting subversive interests there.

At the same time, it is reported that William Randolph Hearst's newspapers are about to publish an "expose" on alleged Communism in Hollywood's talent ranks, especially among writers.

Screen Publicists Win Labor Board Victory

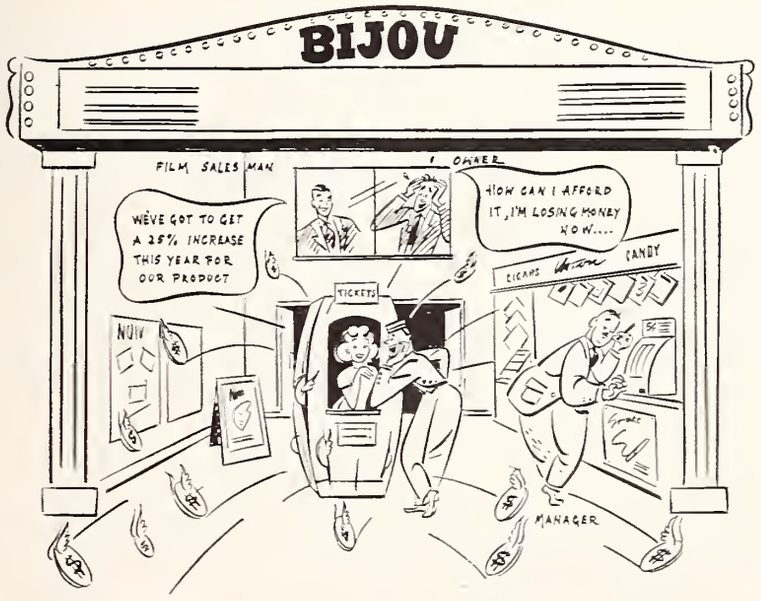
Having secured from the National Labor Relations Board the right to an election in the publicity departments of the majors' New York home offices, held two weeks ago, the Screen Publicists Guild went to that board's New York offices Thursday, July 17th, for a counting of the ballots. The total was 172 to 19, for the Guild, which announced it would press immediatel for negotiations on a closed shop contract.

Charles Kramer, trial examiner of the Board, supervised the counting. Present for the Guild were Joseph Gould, United Artists, its president; Jonas Rosenfield, Jr., Warners, second vice-president; Irving Kahn, Twentieth Century-Fox unit chairman; and Charles Cohen, MGM unit chairman. Strongest opposition to the Guild occurred at Paramount, with nine votes cast against it. The Guild scored 100 per cent at Universal, five out of five votes. Lawyers for the majors watched the proceedings.

Readers Guild Protests "Piece-Work" Exclusion

The National Labor Relations Board last week announced that bargaining agency elections would be held in the story departments of the majors' New York offices, within one month. It excluded from voting story readers employed on a piece work basis. The Screen Readers Guild, seeking election, this week termed the board decision "at complete variance with the facts." It sent a protesting letter to the Board, and to the White House. The letter said, in part:

"You say that piece-work readers do not work on the premises of the companies. You fail to mention that many piece work readers are given desk-space and do their work on the premises of the various companies. They do this at the companies' request. One of the piece-work readers at Paramount Pictures is assigned to such a desk at this very moment (of writing) . . . . You have overlooked that some piece-work readers are guaranteed minimum salaries. You have ignored the condition of those readers who work at home, yet are paid regular salaries. You failed to mark the regularity of employment. . . . We believe that you have made no effort to understand the basic problems involved in the Guild's petition to include all the readers in its bargaining unit."



The elections will be held in the offices of six majors: Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox, RKO, Universal, Columbia, and Loew's. Each company has stated it opposes the unit proposed by the Guild, and the fact of a Guild majority.

It is retroactive to July 1st, runs for one year, and provides for a five cent per hour wage boost, time and one-half for overtime, double time for midnight shows, Sundays, and holidays, seniority rights, and vacations with pay.

F. L. Mayer Aide to Minneapolis Mayor

What Minneapolis theatre men feared might become a semi-official censorship appeared dissipated this week when Marvin L. Kline, newly-elected mayor of Minneapolis, appointed Frank L. Mayer his secretary.

Mayor Kline succeeds former Mayor George E. Leach, who banned the showing of the stage opus "Du Barry Was a Lady" on grounds of indecency, curtailed the showing of a French picture "Rasputin" on complaint of the Legion of Decency, and closed the revival of "The Birth of a Nation" on complaint of racial groups.

Mr. Mayer at the time was press agent for the Lyceum theatre and was one of those actively opposing Mayor Leach's action. For the past several years he has also been press agent for the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra. He is widely known among the theatrical groups in Minneapolis.

Motion picture appearances proved of value to stage talent last week at the Pittsburgh Stanley Theatre, when the Andrew Sisters appeared with Gene Krupa's orchestra, grossing more than $33,000, a gate exceeded only once in that theatre's history. 20 AXIS MOTION PICTURE FIRMS ON SOUTH AMERICAN 'BLACKLIST'

Agfa, Ufa Among Companies To Be Barred from Trade with U. S.; Majors "Purge" Pro-Axis Agents from Ranks

The presidential proclamation dated July 17, 1941, made public last weekend blacklisting and blocking trading in the U. S. by 1,833 pro-German and pro-Italian Latin American business houses and individuals included 20 engaged in motion pictures, mostly independent, and chiefly the distributors or agents of Germany's state-controlled Ufa producing and distributing project in Berlin.

At the same time, and in line with a related general program, announcement of the proclamation brought the disclosure from motion picture quarters in New York that various of the major companies here had purged the ranks of their workers in the Latin countries of pro-Axis sympathizers, based upon information furnished the film managements in New York by the Rockefeller-Whitney Office of the Coordinator of Commercial and Cultural Relations Between the Latin American Republics.

Mr. Rockefeller, as Cultural Coordinator, is a member of the Governmental committee which furnished the President with information for the new blacklist. The committee includes Sumner Welles, acting Secretary of State; Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Secretary of the Treasury; Francis Biddle, acting Attorney General; Jesse H. Jones, Secretary of Commerce, and Russell L. Maxwell, Administrator of Export Control.

In Eight Countries

The following motion picture firms, most of them small agencies, or, in the case of Agfa, distributors of photographic equipment and film to Latin American producers and laboratores, were on the presidential blacklist:

ARGENTINA: Agfa Argentina (Dr. Kurt Oppenheim y Cia.) Buenos Aires; Condor Ltda., Sindicato, Buenos Aires;

BOLIVIA: Jose Capdevila, Santa Cruz de la Sierra;

BRAZIL: Agfa Photo a Chimica Bayer Ltda., Rio de Janeiro; Allianca Cinematographica, Ltda., Praca Getulio Vargas 2, Rio de Janeiro, and all branches in Brazil; Italfilm Ltda., Rua Helvetia 647, Sao Paulo;

COLOMBIA: Bohmer y Cia., S. A. (Mrs. F. Schmidt, Frederick Schmidt, Harold Bohmer, Herman S. Bohmer) Calle 13, Gerrera 5a, Cali (also in Pasto); Cine "Isaacs" (Bohmer y Cia., S. A.); Foto Agfa (H. Wolf) Medellin;

COSTA RICA: Agfa, San Jose;

CUBA: Cifesa, Noberto Solino, Consulado 156, Habana (Cia. Industrial Film Espanol S. A.);

GUATEMALA: Diestel, Hastedt & Co., 10 A Calle Poniente No. 3, Guatemala City, agents for Ufa films;

MEXICO: Agfa Foto (Union Quimica, S. A.), Mexico City.

Issuance of the blacklist had a dual purpose, it was explained at Washington, and is intended not only to eliminate Axis participation in and interference with our trade in Latin America but also to block the re-export of United States products to Axis countries.

As a further step to prevent Axis benefit from or participation in American trade, the President imposed a priority system controlling the commodities which legitimately might be exported to meet the requirements of the South American countries, and the State Department announced that it would act as a procurement agency for all Latin American governments, securing directly all the supplies on the restricted list needed by them.

Newspapers, magazines and other publications listed on the State Department roundup as pro-Axis will lose all American motion picture advertising it was indicated by several spokesmen for distributors. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer some time ago, it was said, instructed its theatre managers and branch supervisors in South America to withdraw all advertising from certain pro-German and Italian papers. Other companies have advised their representatives and exchange managers to withdraw advertising from the black-listed publications and to ask theatre operators with whom they deal to do likewise. In many cases the ban on axis papers antedates the presidential list, it was said. It is understood that the office of the Coordinator of Commercial and Cultural Relations between the Latin American Republics had privately advised industry members several months ago to sever connections with certain suspected commercial agents and publications.

Restrict Axis Outlets

Publication of the blacklist was expected to hit such direct agencies of axis film propaganda producers as Ufa, and Italfilm by restricting their outlets. It is understood that certain American distributors will ask Latin American exhibitors to boycott the Axis picture companies, and where they persist in showing the propaganda pictures will refuse to license American product for the same screens. At present more than 90 per cent of the film imported by South America is Hollywood-made.

Activity of Axis "fronts" in the Spanish language film industry is also due for sharp curtailment, observers in Mexico and Havana said. At the top of the blacklist for Cuba was Cifesa, Havana branch of the Fascist Spanish film industry controlled by General Franco, and it is said, by the German propaganda ministry.

Norberto Solino, wealthy Havana dry-goods merchant who entered the film trade several years ago, founded the Havana branch of Cifesa. He also was active in organizing its Mexican subsidiary. During the Spanish Civil War he was an active Franco spokesman and a leader of the Cuban Falangist party. Among the pictures which he imported to the United States and South America were "Morena Clara," "Nobleza Batura" and "Carmen"

The latter picture, starring Imperio Argentina, leading Spanish Fascist actress, was booed off the screen when it opened in New York two years ago and was later withdrawn from circulation after Spanish-American groups protested her appearance. At the time it was widely reported that Ufa, the official German film trust, had contributed largely in money and technical assistance to the making of the film. Other Spanish language pictures were reported to have been made in Berlin for Cifesa release.

Several years ago Senor Solino visited Spain to manufacture pictures for the South American trade under the Axis blessing. Subsequently he was taken on a tour of German and Italian studios and returned to Cuba praising Axis film technique and announcing his intention to return to Spain and apply their methods to production for the South American market. War has restricted Cifesa production plans, although several pictures have already been sent to South America for distribution through its American subsidiaries and the agencies of Ufa and Italfilm.

General Aniline and Film Corporation which for many years supplied Agfa raw film to Hollywood producing companies but which was "boycotted" a few years ago by a large majority of film firms, is one of the business organizations charged by the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League in New York as having "corporate or other connections with Latin American firms" named in the governmental blacklist announced last week. In a telegram sent last Saturday to President Roosevelt, Professor James H. Sheldon, the League's chairman of the board of directors, urged the Government to follow preparation of its South American blacklist by taking action against Nazi-affiliated American firms.

At the League's New York office, Leo Spanglet, an official of the organization, reported that Senator Josh Lee of Oklahoma, recently introduced a resolution to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee calling for an investigation of the existing lobby and of "certain foreign subversive activities."

Mr. Spanglet described the history of the General Aniline and Film Corporation as follows: "Agfa Ansco which manufactures Agfa film for motion picture producing companies, is a division of the General Aniline company and formerly was known as Agfa Ansco of Binghamton, New York. It later became a subsidiary of the American I. G. Chemical Company which changed its name recently to the General Aniline and Film Corporation. Agfa then was absorbed as a division of the corporation and no longer was a subsidiary.

"The German tie-up," Mr. Spanglet said, "comes about in this way. General Aniline is controlled by a Swiss company known as I. G. Chemie, of Basle, Switzerland which, in turn, is controlled by the I. G. Farbenindustrie, A. G., the German dye trust. The Swiss company does not manufacture anything, but virtually constitutes a holding company for the General Aniline firm and the German I. G. The Swiss Government has not recognized I. G. Chemie as a 'bona fide' Swiss corporation. The German I. G. also directly owns a part of the stock of the General Aniline corporation and continues to guarantee the principal and interest of more than $25,000,000 debentures at five and one-half per cent of General Aniline."

NO COMMENT ON ARGENTINE PACT

State department officials in Washington, D. C., over the weekend refused to discuss the question of concessions on motion pictures sought by the industry for inclusion in the reciprocal trade agreement now being negotiated with Argentina, and said no details would be revealed until the treaty had been perfected.

Industry representatives in the nation's capital have expressed the hope that the department will press for the reforms in Argentine law which they suggested at the hearings, which are still being continued, particularly as there is every reason to believe that the United States finally is to give to Argentina what she has ardently wished for many years—permission to export her beef to this country.

MACGOWAN SEES NEED TO EDUCATE U. S. RATHER THAN SOUTH AMERICA

Head of Rockefeller Committee Film Department Reports 65 Shorts, Documentaries Ready to Send to Latin America

Latin-America knows more about us than we do about Latin America, says Kenneth MacGowan.

Mr. MacGowan, one time newspaper picture critic in Philadelphia and for years a Hollywood producer, is head of the documentary film department of the John Hay Whitney picture division of the official Rockefeller campaign of coordination and cultural relations with the lands to the south.

"We need to educate our own public and we are trying to fit films together which show the life of the Americas to each other," he said.

According to Mr. MacGowan and John McJennett, a staff member of the Rockefeller committee's Public Information Division, "There seems to be a growing demand for more educational pictures, not the conventional travelogues, but for films which show the real life of people in South American countries and provide adequate background of political as well as sociological and cultural activities of our neighbors below the Rio Grande."

Short Subject Unit Named

Mr. MacGowan reported that a committee was appointed last week to serve under Mr. Whitney, consisting of Joseph Hazen, vice president, Warner Brothers; W. C. Michel, executive vice president, Twentieth Century-Fox, and William Kelly of MGM, which will help in coordinating the work of his department. "These men have assured us," he said, "that we can use any short subject material, old or new, for re-editing and cutting if necessary, which their companies have on hand."

Confining discussion only pertaining to his department's work, Mr. MacGowan was reluctant to report on whatever accomplishments have been achieved to date by Mr. Whitney and his West Coast assistant, Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary of the Screen Actors Guild, who is executive director of the Motion Picture Society of the Americas. The Society was organized to operate in an advisory and liaison capacity for the industry with Mr. Whitney. Its members include: Edward Arnold, Samuel J. Briskin, Frank Capra, Y. Frank Freeman, Sheridan Gibney, Samuel Goldwyn, Louis B. Mayer, George J. Schaefer, David O. Selznick, Walter Wanger, Harry M. Warner and Clifford Work. Francis Alstock, assistant to Mr. Whitney, has made frequent trips to Hollywood to confer with members of the Society in carrying out committee plans. It is reported that Mr. Whitney's division may cooperate with Hollywood producers to the extent of financing certain films, if necessary, one of which is said to be "Rurales."

Mr. MacGowan reported that he and his committee assistants have seen "500 to 600 short subjects, about 800 reels of film" in seeking suitable material for educational, industrial and documentary pictures. "About 60 reels look good to us," he said, for their purpose. These pictures include subject matter concerning medicine, public health, industrial production, hemisphere defense and other material, and the films are being re-edited, cut and prepared for Spanish and Portuguese sound tracks. Originally the committee planned to release about 65 such films, but Mr. MacGowan revealed that the number would be much more before the end of the year. Those shorts already completed will be sent to South America in about four weeks.

There is sufficient subject material about the United States, Mr. MacGowan reported, but a lack of motion pictures about Latin American countries for distribution in the United States. He said "The March of Time" had sent its cameraman, Victor Jurgens, to Brazil, Argentina and Chile on a six-months' assignment to shoot various aspects of the life of the people in those countries. A short called "Youth Builds a New World," made by Julien Bryan, has been completed, and Norman Alley, former cameraman for "News of the Day," is now in Brazil, shooting a series of analytical shorts. The National Geographic Society, Mr. MacGowan said, has offered his division use of their four reeler called "South American Medley," which depicts American archeological expeditions in Latin America.

Demand for Civic Films

Mr. MacGowan said there was a great demand in South America for pictures dealing with public health and scientific research, in which fields our hemisphere neighbors believe Americans excel, he said. About 20 reels of medical subject motion pictures have been sent to medical schools and colleges in a number of Latin American countries, showing how surgery and dentistry can be taught through visual education, supplemental to academic training. Public health films designed for concrete educational benefit of South Americans, also have been sent, following urgent request from many health officials in various countries for pictures of this kind.

In the industrial film classification, Mr. MacGowan said "Steelmakers," a technicolor short produced by the United States Steel Company, picturing the processes of steel production, was being prepared for distribution. The OPM film, "Aluminum" and other like it, also will be used for distribution to Latin America. A one-reeler showing airplane production, made by the Bell Aircraft Company which manufactures the "Aircobra" plane, also is being considered for distribution.

Mr. MacGowan stressed that absolutely no "advertising for big business" would be permitted in using industrial films. No blurbs will be inserted and the shorts will be used only as additional educational channels for South Americans so that they can get a better understanding of our technological progress.

The committee plans to distribute these documentary films, Pare Lorentz' "The City" and Joris Ivens "The Power and the Land," as an exchange media for both distribution here and in South America, via schools, colleges, clubs, churches, department stores and other organizational outlets. One difficulty in carrying out their project is the shortage of 16 mm projectors in the United States and in Latin American countries. Mr. MacGowan said 30 such projectors had been sent to 20 republics, to be housed in American consulates and embassies, awaiting booking of films to the proper channels. Provision will have to be made for 16 mm projector equipment which is not available in certain places in the United States where films dealing with South American subjects will be distributed.

According to Mr. McJennett, who described the activities of the Whitney division of the Rockefeller committee as "delayed, due to lack of precedence in a large-scale operation of this kind," the committee aims to encourage production "of such pictures as 'Blood and Sand' and not films like 'Down Argentine Way.' We also want to encourage producers to make Spanish and Portuguese sound tracks for some of their better films," he said.

"Bolivar" In Production

Mr. McJennett reported that "Bolivar" was now being produced by a Mexican film company headed by Miguel Contraras Torres and Jesus Grovas. Many of the scenes depicting the exploits of the great Colombian liberator, he said, are being taken in Southern Mexico, and the film will be completed in about three months. It will be remembered that both Warner Brothers and MGM announced at one time that "Simon Bolivar" was on their production schedules, but later the film was dropped by both companies.

The Rockefeller committee plans to spend $900,000 for its motion picture fund, $200,000 of which was appropriated by Congress last February. The entire budget for the project which calls for extensive newspaper, magazine, radio and literature "hemisphere defense propaganda," will be $10,331,639 for next year. No figures could be obtained from either Mr. MacGowan or Mr. McJennett as to how much the Whitney division has spent thus far, but Mr. MacGowan intimated that the appropriated $200,000 appropriated fund "has not yet been exhausted.

If Congress appropriates additional funds, reported to be in the neighborhood of $1,000,000, it is quite likely that a sizeable sum will be expended not only for the educational and documentary film division, but also for financing certain feature productions dealing with South American subjects in which the committee is said to be interesting Hollywood producers.

Another important phase of the Rockefeller committee, according to Mr. McJennett, has been the detailed survey made during the past few months which resulted in the committee's establishing a "blacklist" of 2,000 Latin American companies with Axis-power connections.

FIGHT FOR FREEDOM HAS STAGE UNIT

Formation of a Broadway committee, comprising screen, stage and newspaper personalities, has been announced by Fight for Freedom, Inc., the interventionist group headed by Carter Glass, whose aims are similar to those of the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies. F. H. Peter Cusick, executive secretary, said the committee had not yet been named, but he reported that Burgess Meredith, screen and stage star, had been appointed temporary chairman.

Joining with Douglas Fairbanks in appealing to the nation for support of Secretary Knox' proposal that the Navy clear the Atlantic of Nazi raiders, Fight for Freedom issued a statement last Monday endorsing the Administration's move in occupying Iceland.

'Reform' Seen in Mexican Unions

by LUIS BECERRA CELIS
in Mexico City

The expulsion from the National Cinematographic Studios Workers Union of Armando Lombardo Toledano, a brother of Lic. Vicente Lombardo Toledano, who up to last March was the chief of the powerful Confederation of Mexican Workers, is interpreted by industry observers as signifying the advent of reform in labor ranks. Vicente is now the head of the Federation of Latin American Workers. He has already been frowned upon by certain American labor leaders who consider that he is a stumbling block in harmony between Nordic and Latin American labor.

Convicted of "irresponsibility in his work," Armando was expelled after a stormy session of the union. The dismissal resulted from numerous complaints by the owners of the Azteca Studios, of which Lombardo Toledano was the chief of the laboratories. The studio operators charged he was insubordinate and either did not know his job or deliberately delayed work. Producers who used the studios complained that he was systematically obstructing laboratory service.

Lombardo Toledano's expulsion from the Union, it was said, is definite and irrevocable. With him were suspended from membership in the Union for an indefinite period his two assistants at the Azteca Studios, A. Arbeu and Señora Mario Villegas, one of the several women Mexican studios laboratories workers.

Operators of the Cine Montes in Guadalajara, Mexico's second largest city, capital of Jalisco state, were exonerated by the Guadalajara authorities of all responsibilitiy for the disaster on July 6th which cost 90 lives, including 40 women and 21 children, and injured 200 others, 100 of them dangerously. The tragedy, the worst of the kind in Mexico, resulted from panic when lightning hit the theatre during a thunder storm, when it was crammed to capacity, and somewhat more, during a Sunday evening show. The theatre, a subsequent run house, seats 2,000.

The theatre was only slightly damaged. The investigation showed that there was not the least danger of the fire, dread of which prompted the deadly rush for doors and other outlets, for the bolt that ripped the roof poured in water. It was found that the exhibitor and his staff did all they could to pacify the audience. Three policemen received rewards from the municipal government for their heroism. They plunged into the hurling mob and dragged out 50 persons, most of them women and girls.

All Guadalajara exhibitors staged a benefit performance for relatives of the dead in the disaster and the seriously injured. All the victims were Mexicans and of the working and lower classes. The benefit attracted a record attendance.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

I MARRIED ADVENTURE: Osa Johnson—A good picture of its kind, that carried diversified opinions.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

First National

SANTA FE TRAIL: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Raymond Massey, Ronald Reagan—Good action drama. A glorified western, but spoiled for my patrons by badly scratched print. Would recommend this as good entertainment. An epic of the early West. Running time, 112 minutes. Played July 12.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

STRAWBERRY BLONDE: James Cagney, Olivia de Havilland, Rita Hayworth—A swell picture to extra good business. Running time, 97 minutes. Played June 29-30.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

MAN FROM DAKOTA, THE: Wallace Beery, John Howard, Dolores Del Rio—Not up to the Beery standard. Saturday night crowd seemed to enjoy same. Would not recommend this one. Too old. Running time, 90 minutes. Played July 5.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

WILD MAN OF BORNEO: Frank Morgan, Mary Howard, Billie Burke—Good picture to good business and plenty of good comments. Running time, 78 minutes. Played June 25-26.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

WOMAN'S FACE, A: Joan Crawford, Melvyn Douglas—Fair picture, fair business. Joan Crawford is all washed up and should be retired. She is no draw here. Running time, 135 minutes. Played July 1.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Monogram

HER FIRST ROMANCE: Edith Fellows, Wilbur Evans—See review on "Rangers of Fortune," Paramount.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

TRAILING DAILY TROUBLE: Ray "Crash" Corrigan, John "Dusty" King, Max "Alibi" Terhune and Elmer—This is the first one of this series I have run and it was not so bad. Doubled it with "Dr. Christian Meets the Women," RKO. Running time, 55 minutes. Played June 25.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Small town and rural patronage.

Paramount

LADY EVE, THE: Barbara Stanwyck, Henry Fonda—A very good picture that everybody enjoyed, except this exhibitor, who had poor business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theater, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

RANGERS OF FORTUNE: Fred MacMurray, Albert Dekker, Patricia Morison, Betty Brewer—Played with "Her First Romance," Monogram. This twosome did fairly well for this time of the year. "Her First Romance" is better than average comedy romance. "Rangers of Fortune" is good outdoor drama, but when will producers learn that killing a young girl in a picture who was the life of the picture, is not a very dainty dish to serve to the paying guests! Other ways could easly have been found to make the hero mad enough to exterminate the villain. Aside from that, it is a real good outdoor picture.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Republic

BOWERY BOY: Dennis O'Keefe, Louise Campbell, Jimmy Lydon—See review on "The Invisible Woman," Universal.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

RIDIN' ON A RAINBOW: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Mary Lee, Carol Adams—See review on "Adventures of Captain Marvel," Republic.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

SADDLEMATES: Three Mesquiteers—Average western picture which pleased week-end business. Running time, 56 minutes. Played July 4-5.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SIS HOPKINS: Judy Canova, Bob Crosby, Charles Butterworth—Best week-end business in some time. Everybody raved about this. Play it; it will pay dividends.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

WAGONS WESTWARD: Chester Morris, Anita Louise, Buck Jones, Ona Munson—Good show from Republic. Did average on one day and below second day. This was a good western, though. Running time, 70 minutes. Played June 14-15.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Small town and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

DR. CHRISTIAN MEETS THE WOMEN: Jean Hersholt, Edgar Kennedy, Rod La Rocque—This was the best of the series. Doubled it with a Range Busters western, "Trailing Double Trouble," Monogram, which made a good combination, but they liked the "Dr. Christian" picture the best. Running time, 66 minutes. Played June 25.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Small town and rural patronage.

DREAMING OUT LOUD: Lum 'n' Abner, Frances Langford—Here is one that I thought would bring them in for sure, as it was made to order for small towns that listen to the program on the air, but my business was about average, so can't complain, but it was a pretty fair show, all in all. Running time, 80 minutes. Played July 2.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Small town and rural patronage.

LUCKY PARTNERS: Ronald Colman, Ginger Rogers—A very good show and everybody commented on it, and that's what we want from pictures and people is to please. Running time, 100 minutes. Played June 18.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Small town and rural patronage.

VIVACIOUS LADY (RE-ISSUE): Ginger Rogers, James Stewart—Played on Foto Nite to above normal business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

WISE GIRL: Miriam Hopkins, Ray Milland, Walter Abel—A very good program picture.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BLOOD AND SAND: Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell, Rita Hayworth, Nazimova—Good picture and good business. Color is beautiful. I have quite a few Mexican families here and they enjoyed the bull fighting scenes immensely. Running time, 125 minutes. Played July 2-3.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GREAT AMERICAN BROADCAST, THE: Alice Faye, Jack Oakie, John Payne, Cesar Romero—Business good. Best musical in some time. Give us more, Fox.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

United Artists

BLACKOUT: Conrad Veidt, Valerie Hobson—We laid it on heavy for this picture two weeks in advance, but still did below average business. United Artists pictures to date have never made me any money, with the exception of "Rebecca," and who didn't make some on that one? Running time, 81 minutes. Played June 21-22.—H. D. Furnace, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Small town and rural patronage.

CHEERS FOR MISS BISHOP: Martha Scott, William Gargan, Edmund Gwenn—This was a good enough show, but not for a small town; they could not get the meaning of it. Did below average business, which made me blue, too. Running time, 95 minutes. Played June 28-29.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Small town and rural patronage.

GREAT DICTATOR, THE: Charles Chaplin, Jack Oakie, Paulette Goddard—This picture is far from being tops. I paid a big guarantee against a percentage and I had more walk-outs than I have had in eight years, and the walkouts were not pro-Germans. This picture is neither funny nor silly, but ridiculous. They did not even do a good job of insulting Hitler and that should be easy. This thing may look more funny after Hitler gets slapped in the face with a spade.—A. C. Myrick, State Theatre, Lake Park, Iowa. Small town and rural patronage.

GREAT DICTATOR, THE: Charles Chaplin, Jack Oakie, Paulette Goddard—Much has been said and written about this picture, no doubt, but my opinion about "The Great Dictator" might be colored somewhat by the excellent business we did on this. Exhibitors are inclined to look with rose-colored glasses at a picture when the cash register jingles merrily after a prolonged lean spell. But I was sold on the fine qualities of this so I really got behind it. I, personally, class this as an outstanding masterpiece. Chaplin had the nerve to show the world what Nazism means so, to that extent, it is an out-and-out Anti-Nazi picture, but he also gave us a great deal of the Chaplin humor, which was Chaplin as his funniest.

Regarding the much discussed speech at the end, we have a good percentage of roughnecks and what may be termed lower classes, and often it is hard to maintain strict order and quiet, but this mixed audience, and it was a good-sized crowd, were so quiet during the speech that you could almost hear a pin drop, and a burst of applause at the end that would have done Chaplin's heart good to hear.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neigborhood patronage.

Universal

INVISIBLE WOMAN, THE: Virginia Bruce, John Barrymore, John Howard, Charlie Ruggles—Played with "Bowery Boy," Republic, and the last chapter of "Captain Marvel," Republic. This program gave us a better than average Sunday for a summer Sunday, and also an extra good Monday. Some credit must go to this last chapter; the eagerness to see who the mysterious "Scorpion" was; but the pictures also were better than average program pictures.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Warner Brothers

DEVIL DOGS OF THE AIR (RE-ISSUE): James Cagney, Pat O'Brien—This re-issue did more business than 50 per cent of Warner Bros. product has done this season. Play it and it will help you pay up some of those losses you have been taking on the many Bank Night pictures Warners have been making you play this season. Running time, 86 minutes. Played July 6-7.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FOOTSTEPS IN THE DARK: Errol Flynn, Ralph Bellamy, Brenda Marshall—Fairly good picture but did not do very well here. Running time, 96 minutes. Played June 22-23.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre,

Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

SEA WOLF, THE: Edward G. Robinson, John Garfield, Ida Lupino—Very good. A bit rough, but our folk liked it. Running time, 100 minutes. Played June 27-28.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

Short Features

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

DANCE OF THE WEED: Technicolor Cartoons—Very good cartoon in color. Running time, 7 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GOIN' FISHIN': Our Gang Comedies—Comedy enjoyed by the kids. Running time, 11 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

LIONS ON THE LOOSE: Pete Smith Specialty—Very interesting subject showing two lion cubs who get into trouble when they escape from their cage. An encounter with a large snake is plenty thrilling. Will please all. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Paramount

LASSO WIZARDS: Sportlight—Very good reel showing some of the greatest trick ropers in the world. I played it while a rodeo was in progress here and they liked it very much. Several who appeared in this reel were also appearing at the local rodeo, including Chet Byers and others. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WAITING FOR BABY: Robert Benchley Comedies—Not as good as usual.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

RKO Radio

ARROW POINTS: RKO Pathe Sportscope—Good reel on archery. Running time, 9 minutes.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Small town and rural patronage.

TROUBLE SHOOTERS: RKO Pathe Sportscopes—Just the right thing for this time of the year with all the golfers trying to get a low score. Shows proper stance, etc., in golf. Running time, 9 minutes.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Small town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ANZACS IN ACTION: The World Today—Entertaining war subject. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MOVIETONE NEWS: As good as any nowadays. They all have to use about 700 feet of stale war news. Our people like the sport section best.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

Serial

Republic

ADVENTURES OF CAPTAIN MARVEL: Tom Tyler—See review on "The Invisible Woman," Universal. We started this serial with an advance trailer for the week previous, and we also had Gene Autry in "Ridin' on a Rainbow," Republic, to start this chapter, and before we knew it, we had a packed house. So, between this chapter play and the Gene Autry picture, let each one select the credit they think is due them. As the weather got warm, attendance dropped off, but I believe it held some children followers even during some of the hot Sundays. This serial is well done, and followers of the "Superman" and "Captain Marvel" cartoons should find this much to their liking. Others may find this on the impossible-couldn't happen kind. But, on the whole, I am satisfied to have run it and would gladly do so if I had to do it over again.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

So far, so good, then, but where from there?

Last week, speaking before the progressive Staten Island Advertising Club, your Chairman took the opportunity of dwelling upon the industry's part in speeding up the national defense program. Emphasized was the industry's contribution to public morale, in England as on this side, through the steady flow of vital "escape" product turned out by the studios. We detailed the accomplishments of the Motion Picture Committee Cooperating for National Defense in the numerous pieces of colorful trailer copy, the special short subjects for theatre showings, the non-theatrical reels such as those made with the cooperation of the U. S. Signal Corps having to do with every aspect of training.

In the open forum that followed, one of the club members asked if the government had exerted pressure upon the industry to do all of these things. When we replied that this participation was entirely voluntary, and that the industry was prepared to do more, the member was duly impressed. He said that this information had given him a new respect for the institution of the motion picture to offset previous impressions he had gathered not as favorable to the industry.

There is a vast audience from which the motion picture can win a "new respect." It remains only for the theatreman to place before his public the factors that are the motion picture and, to be emphasized, of which support of the national defense is but a part.

Here, then, is an answer to "where from there." The ground gained by the theatre in the above mentioned institutional promotion is not only to be held but to be added to by a definite program for the future. Now that the national campaign is turning the wheel, the momentum is to be increased by the individual showman in his theatre advertising. Institutionally, he has much to present to win his share of this "new respect," a respect that must mean more at the box office.

Aimed somewhat in that direction were ads shown in the newspaper layout of last week's issue. In every instance, the institutional copy did a distinct job of selling theatre at no expense of selling the attraction. The institutional appeal was intended, and did add, to the boxoffice appeal of the entire presentation.

The "how much" and the "when" of institutional copy is variable, its use obviously depending upon the judgment of the theatreman. That "use" must be consistent and persistent, a definite part of the advertising budget. Institutional copy cannot be subject to now-and-then enthusiasms if it is to do the job that results prove it can do in winning the "new respect" the theatre rates.

THE AUDACIOUS SHOWMAN

Recently, the Sunday rotogravure section of the Pittsburgh Press carried a full page of photos given over to the scenic wonders of Pennsylvania's "Grand Canyon", nearby to the now bustling town of Wellsboro. That would be just another of the many similar layouts planted in newspapers over the country by Round Tabler Larry Woodin, responsible for the "Canyon" and present prosperity enjoyed by his community. It all started with Woodin's ambition to build theatre grosses. It wound up by converting an economically depressed town into a nationally famed scenic resort.

The history of this audaciously conceived and amazingly accomplished project is told by Larry on a following page. No finer tribute to the curative powers of showmanship has long been paid. No fuller, truer "reason-why" for showmanship has long been had.

Round Table In Pictures

Through tieup effected with Station WJOB of Hammond, Ind., Round Tabler Al Blasko at the Parthenon Theatre on "Great American Broadcast," promoted transmitter tubes, button mikes, amplifier and other equipment for lobby display. Explanatory tiein cards were featured.

What proved to be a traffic stopper for sure was Sam Gilman's street bally for "The Big Store" at Loew's Theatre, in Harrisburg. Ushers dressed as the Marx Brothers carried old fashioned bannered bath tub around town and as crowd gathered, one of the lads seated himself in the tub performing ablutions.

Colorful front was constructed for the Schine Glove Theatre, in Gloversville by district manager Harold Sliter for date on "They Met In Bombay." Blowup of scene still featuring Gable and Russell was planted at side of box office, while action copy was used in color under marquee.

(Below) For opening of "The Shepherd of the Hills" at the Paramount, in New Haven, Lou Schaefer had one of his ushers dressed as shepherd graze a couple of sheep in the city park. With an ordinance against sheep grazing, lad was duly "arrested" which was good for breaks in local dailies.

(Below) Particularly effective for his date on "Wings" at Loew's Park, Cleveland, was Arnold Gates' bally of girl dressed in silver metallic outfit wearing propeller headgear, shoulder wing-pieces, etc. Back banner carried appropriate tiein copy and girl distributed heralds in downtown area.

As suggested in the Paramount "Caught in the Draft" pressbook, L. & J. city manager Frank Bickerstaff held kid matinee at the Palace, in Athens, Ga. to which youngsters each bringing five magazines were admitted free. Magazines were turned over to boys in nearby camps and publicity was promoted through newspapers and radio. Some several thousand magazines were reported to have been collected.

Animated lobby setpiece constructed for "Lady Eve" at the Jeffery, Chicago, by Robert Busch had small motor in back of display moving apple up and down. When the apple reached the top, stills of Fonda and Stanwyck were concealed and when it went down again, the stills were revealed. Busch reports constant motion of apple brought much attention.

For opening of "Jungle Cavalcade" at the New York RKO Palace, entire lobby was dressed in jungle atmosphere. Below may be seen Frank Buck talking to usherettes dressed in bush costume standing in front of 10-foot papier mache elephant. In addition, giant map was featured with tiny flags showing Buck's various safaris.

Following the sequence in "Road To Zanzibar," Ben Cohn at the Frolic, in Chicago, for his lobby placed cutout of Hope in cannon, giving impression that he was being shot out. Red lamp inside flashed on and off for animation. Directly next to cannon were also cutouts of Crosby and Lamour with appropriate tiein card.

Greeting patrons immediately entering the Warner Theatre, in Erie, Pa. was H. T. Ratstetter's display for "The Devil and Miss Jones." Planted on mezzanine overlooking main foyer were cutouts of Jean Arthur and devil with pitchfork.

SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAFFS

Another incident in the tumultuous career of the fabulous Marquee Mike, as depicted here by his creator, Glenn Franke of Cheviot, Ohio.

Penny Ideas Click On "Penny Serenade"

Hooking his date on "Penny Serenade" to a war fund drive sponsored by local daily, Manager Vern Hudson at the Royal, in Guelph, Ont., Canada, placed a card in the lobby week ahead of the date inviting patrons to deposit pennies received in change at the box-office in boxes placed in the lobby for the purpose. In return, the paper explained the picture tiein.

On the same attraction, Art Abelson at the Lake, in Devils Lake, N. D., sent out imprinted postcards reading: "I am a penny postcard. I have come to let you know all about Penny Serenade." Abelson extended the idea by running additional copy on the card reading: "Present this card at the box-office and save a penny on your admission."

Newspaper Tieins Feature Toledo "Kiss" Campaign

Among the pre-release drives on "Kiss the Boys Goodbye" in nine situations, each handled differently according to Paramount's test campaign, the campaign at the Paramount, in Toledo, featured newspaper advertising. Reported by J. Maxwell Joice, district advertising manager, was a four-day newspaper contest asking "Who Kissed the Boys Goodbye," wherein readers were asked to identify stars through photos of lips only. At the end of four days, contestants submitted their entries along with 50-word statement on "Should a girl kiss the boys goodbye when she goes on a date?" Cash prizes and guest tickets were given. Extra breaks were obtained with publication of photos of the stars and winners' names.

Individual candy kisses affixed to calling cards reading "A kiss to you from Mary Martin," etc., were distributed to newspaper men and radio program directors, via Western Union messengers. The "kiss" thing was carried out further with a Kresge store tiein for a "Kiss" sundae and further hookup with "kiss" lipstick for extensive exploitation.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Salt Lake Greets Stars On "Panamint" Premiere

Preceded by a terrific newspaper barrage, the world premiere of Harry Sherman's "The Parson of Panamint" opened at the Utah, in Salt Lake City, accompanied by highly colorful exploitations reported here by Charlie Pincus. Featured were web banners arched across the main street announcing the event and welcoming the stars, reception at the station by famed Mayor Ab Jenkins for the Hollywood party and greetings by the Queen of Salt Lake's "Covered Wagon Days" celebration and her court. Theatre band of sixty pieces was also on hand to greet the visitors and to head the parade to the theatre.

Also noteworthy was the theatre front, which recreated old western atmosphere, box-office covered to resemble log cabin and title in shadowbox across front. Radio promotions included spot announcements on KSL and KDYL, interviews at the Union Pacific Station on arrival of stars and further broadcasts in which participated Harry Sherman, members of the cast and Peter B. Kyne, author on hand for the celebration.

Louie Ties Safety To Traffic Short

The hooking of "One, Two, Three—Go," MGM traffic safety film for children, one of the Our Gang Comedies, was made an occasion for an extensive civic tieup by Louie Charninsky and M. O. Rike, Jr., publicist, for the date at the Capitol, in Dallas, Tex., featured being a contest for the juveniles inviting essays on traffic safety rules for children. Defense Savings Stamps were given as prizes, which were awarded from the stage of the theatre.

Charninsky pursued the campaign vigorously by holding special screenings for civic heads and leading citizens, preceded by a luncheon at a downtown hotel for the Citizen's Traffic Commission. In addition, student traffic patrols from all the Dallas schools were invited to attend the showings as guests of the theatre, where safety talks were made from the stage by members of the police department.

Membership badges were distributed to all youngsters attending, Louie also distributing imprinted punching bag balloons to his guests. Ushers and cashiers wore the membership badges and for extra newspaper attentions, the Round Tabler was shown presenting badge to the chief of police.

Kids Vote Club Officers

Started some five weeks ago at the Bonham, in Fairbury, Neb., a kiddie club guided by Manager J. T. Kempkes and Jimmy Redmond, publicity director, was given a different twist with an election of officers put on with the same attention to details as given the usual political election. Nominees for the various offices were duly made and election ballots distributed to all members of the club. Redmond notes that the youngsters put on all kinds of devices to call attention to their fitness for office, such as handmade election cards planted in windows and telephone poles. Vigorous telephone campaign was also waged by the nominees and, of course, the papers paid due attention to what was going on.

On the Saturday of the election, club membership was doubled by interested juvenile voters. The problem of what to do with the winning candidates was solved by putting them in charge of programs, handling of membership cards and other chores.

Street Stunts Sell Barry's "Laff Week"

Combining "Road to Zanzibar" and "Girl, Guy and Gob" as "Laff Week" at the Warner Capitol, in Chicago, Manager R. T. Barry used a street bally of stretcher with two ushers dressed in white coats and uniform caps carrying a third usher banner reading "This fellow laughed himself sick," etc. Aimed for traffic stopping, according to Barry, the police broke in from time to time to disperse the crowds.

For another street hookup, the Warnerman used five boys each carrying stick cards, each with copy bearing on the laff week in the manner of the Burma Shave signs. For instance, first card read: "Are you feeling awfully blue?" Second card read: "Really, there is no need to," etc.

Showmanship Sells Scenery, and Theatre Plays to SRO

Round Tabler Turns Town Into National Resort Center to Build Grosses

by LARRY WOODIN

Manager, Arcadia, Wellsboro, Pa.

In 1926 I came to Wellsboro to manage the Arcadia Theatre, whih had just been acquired by my father, William L. Woodin, then managing the Keystone at Towanda, Pa. I found a community ready for burial. Its major industry, a branch of Corning Glass, had just closed to install automatic machinery and it looked like Wellsboro was in for an early depression. In a few months the factory reopened and the community took on a new lease on life as a real old-fashioned natural gas boom hit this section at the same time that the stock market went hay-wire in '29. This, combined wih the advent of "talkies," resulted in high prices at the box office and SRO business constantly.

Soon, however, the talkie novelty wore off and people were interested in the screen attractions again as well as the fact that the picture talked. The gas wells began to dwindle in volume, the boom was over, and Wellsboro was settling back into the life of a typical rural county seat of 3,600 people in a country bogged down in a nation-wide depression.

Encouraged by Quigley Awards

In the boom years just over, Wellsboro had built a modern 101-room community hotel next door to my theatre. I stood by and saw that hotel drop to the point where one night it had three overnight guests and two customers for breakfast. These figures will give you a hint as to where my business was also heading.

About that time I entered a Quigley Award endeavor and walked off with one of the plaques. The same campaign was good for a cash award in another contest. Then I wrote the late Carl Laemmle and offered a few suggestions to improve Universal's trade-mark. I got a nice check for that and I was beginning to think that maybe I had some good ideas if I would only put them to work.

Sells Chamber of Commerce

For years I had secretly marveled at an "undiscovered" gorge some 1,000 feet deep and 50 miles long located just ten miles from the theatre. I had almost 1,000 seats and in order to fill them I had to play to one-third of my town's population at one showing, which just can't be done very often, if ever. The idea struck me that if this gorge were publicized, people would come to see it. If people came to see it, they would spend money while here and some of them would stay overnight. The money they spent would help local people find extra money for theatre tickets and those that stayed overnight would probably attend the theatre as well as patronize the hotel, restaurants and other businesses catering to the travelling public.

I met with the directors of the local Chamber of Commerce and told them my story. I walked out of that meeting with authority to spend the "staggering" sum of $600 in advertising the gorge. This year I'm spending $12,000 and it all comes right out of the tourists. The town doesn't have to raise any now.

If you want a job, try to sell 90,000 acres of scenery including a canyon, thirteen state parks, hundreds of waterfalls, scores of miles of trout streams, and several hundred miles of "switchback" forestry drives to the world on a $600 appropriation. It's like selling "Gone With the Wind" with a classified advertisement.

Theatre Exploitation Applied

I decided to go at it just the same way that I would sell motion pictures. I'd use all the tricks of showmanship I could think of, hoping that every move I made would create publicity that would result in people coming to the town and eventually getting into my theatre. I gave the spot a name—Pennsylvania's Grand Canyon—and started. I had 15,000 window cards printed and 25,000 handbills. I had one picture of the gorge and of this I had 500 mats made. These, with copy, were sent to weekly newspapers.

I talked the two largest bus lines in the country into providing me with free transportation for four girls, my ushers and cashiers, over all their main routes between Chicago and Boston. They were arrayed in typical drum major outfits and rode buses for days as my bill posters and bill peddlers. I painted an old T-Model a brilliant red and placed two boys in it with the car loaded with paper. They were gone almost two weeks and covered about half the State.

Immediate Results Obtained

In two weeks' time the road to the Canyon was blocked with traffic on week-ends. "Tourist-Home" signs started to spring up all over the community. What used to be a dead 4th of July in this town turned into a week-end of capacity business. The State had to widen and pave the roads to the Canyon. CCC camps sprung up throughout the area and at one time six camps were in operation trying to make improvements fast enough to keep ahead of the ever-increasing number of visitors. The hotel records were all smashed and I might add that some of mine were slightly warped. In one season Wellsboro changed from a sleepy county seat to a live tourist-minded community.

I can't tell you all the things that I did to accomplish this; it would take a book. I can say that everything I did do was just plain old-fashioned showmanship. I've been successful in getting the Canyon in all the major newspapers of the country time and time again as well as many of the better radio stations. I've made the Post, Collier's, and scores of other magazines. I have in my files clippings that represent a combined circulation of over 4,000,000 readers and not a line of the material has cost me one cent other than the time to prepare it and the postage to maneuver it into the pages of the publications. In 1926 there was only one picture of the Canyon available for publicity. Today, I have over 300 pictures to offer and last season alone saw nearly 300,000 postcards sold here. The business volume at the Park on the rim of the Canyon became so bulky that the State invited our Chamber of Commerce to operate and maintain it. This we now do.

Each year I had to dig up new angles and leads and out of these came the annual State Laurel Festival which has now become the Interstate Laurel Festival. This is a gag to open our Laurel Season that steals miles of columns in scores of publications. It's the "Queen" angle that does the trick. By instituting a "Flaming Foliage Season" in October, I have been able to make that our best month, where other resort areas have folded for the season.

Thousands of Tourists Attracted

Last year saw 72,000 people from 46 States here, and this season is making last year's look like an off-night. I'm writing this on the eve of the 4th of July weekend. Tomorrow, thousands of people will get in their cars and hit the open road. Five years ago that meant that nearly all of the people in my community were away someplace over the holiday and I used to wonder what I was in business for. How different now. The large majority of the local people will still go out of town tomorrow for the 4th, but for every one that leaves, at least 10 will come here from other towns and cities and I'll enjoy a nice box office over the weekend. I won't recognize a half dozen people that enter my theatre, but I'll gamble that in my files is a letter to most of them that I have written in answer to an inquiry which came in as a result of "Yours truly" having sold them on seeing the Canyon.

Invites Round Tablers to Visit

Theatre business is off at the city box-office in the summer. I'm one of the reasons. Which all goes to prove that there are more ways than one to get them into your theatre and probably my way is one of the most far fetched of all . . . selling scenery ten miles from the box-office to fill the seats in my theatre. Anyway it works and as the old adage goes . . . It's the B. O. that counts.

Incidentally, when are YOU going to visit Pennsylvania Grand Canyon? Would you like some pictorial literature on this scenic masterpiece? It yours for the asking. . . . Just drop me a card and I'll see that my Touring Bureau sends you all the dope on the grandest scenic spot in the Eastern United States. Incidentally, while you're in Wellsboro, visit Tioga County's Finest Theatre—The Arcadia.

Started on July 4, audiences of the Ambassador, Fox, Missouri and St. Louis theatres, in St. Louis were invited to sing "The Star Spangled Banner" via a special trailer prepared by Fanchon & Marco under the supervision of Harry C. Arthur, Jr., general manager.

Tiein copy read: "What is the secret hidden behind the veil on a A Woman's Face?" When veil was lifted, theatre credits were noted.

As is usual with Stoltz, cost was covered by tying in cosmetic department of local five-and-ten, which was credited on card.

As part of the campaign put on for "In the Navy" at Warner's Hippodrome, in Cleveland, Dave Bachner arranged for distribution of cards by music store dealers selling recordings of hit tunes. Radio Amateurs Click for Sklar

Put forward as highly successful and representative radio tieup in the smaller situation, the amateur program, put on weekly on the stage of the Roxy, Clearfield, Pa., and sponsored by a local music store, is broken-down for costs and procedure by Manager Wilford N. Sklar. Running for eight Saturday afternoons over WCED, preliminaries were held for the first seven sessions, winners in the preliminaries competing in the finals for the $75 in cash prizes, plus added prizes of sheet music from the sponsor and guest tickets by the theatre. Winners were selected by popular vote in the theatre, via phone and mail. To stimulate attendance, ballots cast at the theatre counted double. Telephone votes were allowed no later than five o'clock on the broadcast day, and mail votes were good if received no later than midnight of the Wednesday following.

Theatre Cost Found Nominal

To build up the widest interest, Sklar publicized the contest vigorously with window displays at the sponsor's store, imprinted menus for the duration in the leading restaurants and imprinted paper bags in five-and-tens, drug stores, markets. Post cards went to the mailing list and other names, and trailers sold the show and invited auditions. The station gave the promotion a number of courtesy announcements and the newspaper campaign followed through, as did posting in the lobby with full explanatory copy.

Costs reported by the Round Tabler ran about $280 for the sponsor, who paid for the radio time, most of the prize money, voting ballots, application blanks and audition cards. In addition, the store furnished records and recordings of the contestants' numbers, music instruments for the stage presentations. The theatre's share ran around $100 and returns have encouraged the sponsor and theatreman to renew the deal. To insure a smooth and entertaining program, Sklar acts as the M. C. with the commercials handled by the station announcer. Weekly winners are announced on the following week's program for further attention.

Abelson Questionnaire Sells "Woman's Face"

Selling "A Woman's Face" away from the heaviness of the theme, Art Abelson at the Lake, in Devils Lake, N. D., put out a folder labeled "New Draft Questionnaire," copy noting the questionnaire was to be filled out by all men who wished to join Joan Crawford's "M. E. F."—Matrimonial Expeditionary Forces. After the forms were completed, they were supposed to be sent to the sweethearts of those who filled them out.

Questionnaires on inside pages illustrated by cut of the star reading: "Fill out the features you like best in A Woman's Face." Then followed such items as color of hair, color of eyes, shape of nose, shape of mouth, etc. Under the head "Information Wanted Regarding Your Sweetheart," following page carries questions regarding the characteristics of the applicants' girl friends. Space was left for names and addresses.

SHOWMEN TAKE WING FOR "WINGS" DATES

Round Tablers Promote Local Service and Amateur Flying Facilities in Their Campaigns

The romance and glamour of aviation through the agency of "I Wanted Wings" continues to be sold as campaigns on various dates pour into Round Table headquarters. Little has been left undone in calling attention to the picture, as herein noted, with theatremen availing themselves of the promotional possibilities to be had in service tie-ins, official Cadet Flying Week proclamations, parades, lobbies and other devices.

In Dayton, Ohio, for instance, RKO theatres ad head, Nathan Wise, built the date at Keith's with the cooperation of Major Fite, one of the technical advisors on the picture, and stationed at the adjoining government air fields. This led to a detachment of uniformed men driving a fleet of army trucks and the new motorized "Jeeps," lately featured in national magazines and newsreels, the procession parading the downtown streets and finishing up in front of the theatre, where maneuvers were performed. Here, the soldiers made up an honor guard for the army top officers on hand as the theatre's guests for the premiere.

Cleveland Features Plane Contest

Wise also made much of the national Piper Cub pressbook tie-in, the prize plane plane exhibited with theatre posters at the nearby Centennial Fair. Display set-pieces were a part of the exhibit and entry blanks distributed at the Fair and the theatre on the national contest. Co-op heralds were distributed by the local army recruiting units via a crew of Boy Scouts and Nathan featured the lobby with a showing of model planes exhibited with the assistance of the Newhio Club, a plane building group sponsored by the Daily News.

In Cleveland, the date at Loew's State was emphasized also with the inclusion of a model plane building tieup, made with the New Air Cadets association sponsored by the local News. Prizes of over $500 in cash were offered in a flying contest of rubber-powered model planes, in all some 200 prizes given to winners. The paper spread the contest over a series of front-page stories and photos. In the spacious lobby of the theatre, much of the space was given over to a showing of entrants in the competition. Radio coverage was ample and the daily aided the cause further by tack cards on delivery trucks and news stands in all parts of the city.

Lynn Mayor Proclaims "Week"

M&P circuit managers are also in the fore with "I Wanted Wings" promotions, at the Paramount, in Lynn, Mass., Manager J. J. Dempsey having the mayor proclaim Cadet Week in conjunction with the date. This was pictured and publicized in the press, and tied in with the local army drive for enlistments in the flying services. Front-page publicity was also stressed in this situation, the dailies going for special attendance by local Cadets and other page-one items tying in with the attraction. Dempsey was able to obtain the services of a streamlined army recruiting trailer which adequately bannered, made all parts of the city plugging the date.

In Waterville, Me., M&P's J. K. O'Donnell, tied the local flying outfit to the Piper Cub contest, the leading daily also coming in by running the rules and entry blanks. The flying service took a series of large ads to spread the news. For street attentions, the Round Tabler promoted a plane from the airport which heavily bannered was towed down the main street and lodged in the display rooms of an auto distributor for a week in advance. Flying accessories, properly captioned, were promoted and shown in window displays through the city.

Canadian Stores Cooperate

The Canadian theatremen were also aware of the picture's possibilities with Manager Bert Brown, hooking the date at the Capitol, in Hamilton, Ontario, to a model plane contest sponsored by the Good Deed Radio Club of the leading department store. Three of the main windows were given to the buildup, one of the windows supporting a full-24-sheet, with 40 by 60, and 30 by 40 posters also utilized. Model planes and parts made up the center of the displays with the prizes featured. For added interest, the club members distributed thousands of the special cutouts throughout the city.

At the Fox Gillioz, Springfield, Mo., Joe Ruddick had wide support from the army recruiting station with heralds, A-boards and other tiein accessories. The theatreman also obtained one of the army sound trucks for three days ahead, with uniformed squad placed at his disposal to plug the date. Colorfully bannered, the truck was used to tour the entire trade area. Lobby display promoted from the local Civilian Pilots Training School included mounted aeroplane motor, opened parachute, aviator gear, instrument panel, etc. The highlight reported by Ruddick was a mass formation flight at six o'clock of the opening day, well heralded in advance and dedicated to the picture.

Mason Animates Display

Also elaborate was the campaign put together by Manager E. M. Dowling, at the Capitol, Pittsfield, Mass., the mayor here cooperating with a Flying Cadet Week proclamation, given extensive handling by the press. For the opening, Dowling arranged a broadcast to interview army officers who were guests, and for lighting promoted a fire truck to floodlight the front. As an added feature, army planes were brought up from Mitchel Field to stunt over theatre.

Lobby animation with an actual propeller at the Palace was utilized by E. J. "Shine" Mason, Interstate-Texas Consolidated City Manager in McAllen, Texas. The prop, from a Piper Cub, was mounted on a two-inch wood shaft, revolving at 20 RPM for patron safety. To slow down the prop, Mason used a 1,150 RPM, one-eighth horsepower motor, belted to a jack shaft with a 12-inch pulley, and the jack shaft belted to a 22-inch pulley on the prop shaft.

Mr. Fields, born Lewis Maurice Fields, began his theatrical career with Mr. Weber at the age of nine in small variety theatres in New York. In 1896 they became proprietors of the famous Weber and Fields Music Hall in New York, which for years was one of the gay spots on Broadway. Their specialty was satires on various Broadway hit productions and throughout the following years produced and starred in almost a show a year until 1930.

Their burlesques included "The Geezer," "Under the Red Globe," "Zazu," "Fiddle-Dee-Dee," "Hoity Toity," "Cyranose," "Whoa Vass Is?" and others.

Some of the biggest hits Mr. Fields produced during the late '20s included "Hit the Deck," "A Connecticut Yankee," "Present Arms," and "Hello Daddy," in which he appeared.

George Browne Denied Indictment Dismissal

Judge Louis Strum of the Federal court in New York on Tuesday, July 22nd, denied decision on an application of George E. Browne, president of the IATSE, to quash the indictment which charges him and Willie Bioff with allegedly extorting $550,000 from four film companies. Bioff did not join in the application.

Martin E. Conboy, attorney for Browne, argued that the indictment was too indefinite to be sustained, that the facts as alleged in the indictment were insufficient to constitute a crime, and that the anti-racketeering statute upon which the case is brought is an unconstitutional exercise by Congress of its powers under the interstate commerce clause. Trial is scheduled for August 17th.

Phonovision Sued

The Phonovision Corp. of America, Frank P. Orsatti and Samuel Sax were named defendants on Friday, July 19th, in a suit for $20,545 damages filed in the New York supreme court by Harry W. Bank. The action was revealed when Mr. Bank asked the court for permission to add Phono-Films Distributing Co. as a defendant. The plaintiff charges breach of contract made in May, 1940, under which he claims he became general manager of Phonovision at a salary of $500 weekly and a bonus of $10,000.

Three ticket brokers on Monday pleaded guilty before Judge Louie Strum in the Federal court in New York to the charge of failing to stamp the regular sales price upon theatre tickets sold at a discount. The brokers and fines were as follows:

Joseph Goldhart of the Joey Gold Theatre Ticket Service, $250; Louis Cohn's Theatre Ticket Office, $500; and Michael Atlas and Walter Friedman, trading as Acme Theatre Ticket Office, $1,200.

IN COURTS

Judge Davis Trial Begins Monday

Retired U. S. Circuit Judge J. Warren Davis and attorney Morgan S. Kaufman, charged with having conspired with William Fox, bankrupt former millionaire motion picture producer, to obstruct justice and to defraud the United States, will be tried for a second time in Philadelphia next Monday, July 28. Mr. Fox pleaded guilty four months ago. The new trial, necessitated when the jury at the first trial were hopelessly deadlocked on reaching a decision, will be presided over by Federal District Judge Hugh D. McClellan, of Boston.

A special panel of 100 veniremen already has been directed to be drawn, as the case was specially listed for the present term of court.

Two persons described as "very important witnesses" in the forthcoming re-trial, were subpoenaed for a surprise appearance last week before Walter H. Gahagan, Jr., Special Assistant to the U. S. Attorney General, who will seek conviction of the two defendants for a second time. The first witness was described merely as "a bank official," and the second was Joseph A. Donaghue, a mercantile appraiser and well-known figure in Democratic circles in Philadelphia.

Bank records played a prominent part in the first trial, but Mr. Donaghue's name had never appeared before in connection with the case. There were unconfirmed reports in Philadelphia courthouse circles that the Government, since the last trial, has opened up an entirely new aspect of the case, which agents of the F. B. I. have been digging into for the past month, but Government attorneys wouldn't make any comments.

Schine Wins Tax Appeal

The United States circuit court of appeals in New York on Monday affirmed a decision of the Board of Tax Appeals in favor of Schine Chain Theatres, Inc., and denied the application of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to impose additional taxes in the sum of $78,157 for the year 1933.

The court held that the commissioner had failed to levy the tax during 1929 when Mr. Schine received the sum of $629,805 on the leasing by it of a number of theatres to Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, Inc., and that the commissioner could not subsequently seek collection of the sum.

Bankruptcy Appeal Filed

An appeal from the final decree of District Judge Ernest A. O'Brien, Detroit, entered March 24th, terminating the bankruptcy reorganization proceedings under 77-B, in which the Grand Rivera Theatre Co., Detroit, was debtor has been filed in the sixth district court of appeals, in Cincinnati, by Arnold F. Zelezmik, Detroit, holder of common and preference shares of the theatre company. Appeal is based on complaint that Judge O'Brien erred in restraining plaintiff from prosecuting a suit pending in the Wayne County, Michigan, courts, in approving sale of 4,743 common shares of the Improved Realty Co. to the debtor corporation, and in discharging the debtor from its obligations.

Fox Sues on Name

Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp., on Wednesday, July 16th, filed a suit in the United States district court for an injunction and accounting of profits against Twenty First Century Film Corp., Arpad Zsemere, Juliette Brill and Emery I. Stern, officers of the company. The complaint charges the defendant with violating the exclusive right of the plaintiff to the name Twentieth Century by selecting one similar.

LIFE BEGINS FOR ANDY HARDY (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Family Drama

Directed by George B. Seitz. Based upon the characters created by Aurania Rouverol.

SYNOPSIS

Andy Hardy (Mickey Rooney), now graduated from high school, must choose between college and life in the outside world. Judge Hardy (Lewis Stone) and Mrs. Hardy (Fay Holden) have hopes that he'll choose a law course at Wainwright College, alma mater to the judge. Andy has one month to decide and chooses to spend the time in New York strictly on his own.

After Andy bids goodbye "Forever" to Polly Benedict (Ann Rutherford), with whom he has quarreled, he and Betsy Booth (Judy Garland), his New York friend visiting her aunt in Carvel, arrive at New York, where he takes a room in City House, a young men's boarding house. He meets Jimmy Frobisher (Ray McDonald). Learning that Jimmy has just lost his job as office boy at Consolidated Stocks and Bonds Company, Andy, with Betsy still along, drives there.

Andy waits two hours only to learn that the job has already been filled, but, meanwhile, he meets Jennitt Hicks (Patricia Dane), the switchboard operator. She accompanies Andy out of the office and into a drug store, where Andy is subtly worked into buying the girl a fifteen-dollar bottle of perfume.

Andy's money dwindles and the day he meets Betsy in a park, he is down to his last few cents. Nevertheless, when he finds Jimmy Frobisher half-starved, he smuggles Jimmy into his room at City House. Then Jennitt sends word that the Consolidated job is open again. He takes the job. Jimmy dies from a weakened heart and Andy borrows money on his car, already in hock, to meet the funeral expenses.

Judge Hardy arrives from Carvel and, at Betsy's suggestion, calls on Jennitt. To his surprise, he learns that Jennitt has been sharing the expense of her dates with Andy. But Betsy is not satisfied to leave matters as they are. She discovers that Jennitt has been married previously. Betsy arranges a meeting of the divorced husband with Andy and Jennitt when they return from a dance. The disillusioned Andy decides to return to Carvel.

THREE SONS O'GUNS (Warners-First National)

Comedy

Directed by Ben Stoloff.

SYNOPSIS

Margaret Patterson (Irene Rich) is the mother of three zestful young fellows, Charley (Wayne Morris); Eddie (Tom Brown), and Kenneth (William T. Orr). Eddie is the youngest of the boys, spoiled, self-centered. Then comes Kenneth, who fancies himself an actor and surrounds himself with a phoney theatrical troupe. The third son is Charley, the family's only employed member, who keeps losing his jobs because of his practicing the trombone in washrooms. None of the trio has ever had a responsible moment.

When their conscription questionnaires arrives things start to happen in the family. Charley takes a job he'd turned down so that he could "support his mother" for the benefit of the draft board. Kenneth proposes to Mary (Susan Peters), who loves him, but insists on waiting for a church wedding. Rather than wait Kenneth elopes with one of his show girls. Eddie develops a list of ailments.

Again Charley loses his job for trombone-playing just before the boys are to appear at the draft board. At the board, the three start elaborating their exemption claims when their Aunt Lottie (Marjorie Rambeau) appears and denounces them as ripe material for the army. Even Kenneth's marriage is proven illegal.

The boys go to camp and the army makes men of them as Mrs. Patterson discovers when she visits them. Camp discipline has accomplished what Aunt Lottie thought it would and the three irresponsible brothers have become responsible soldiers in the draftee army.

YOU'LL NEVER GET RICH (Columbia)

Comedy, Dancing

Produced by Sam Bischoff. Directed by Sidney Lanfield.

SYNOPSIS

Martin Cortland (Robert Benchley), stage producer, buys Sheila Winthrop (Rita Hayworth), a new chorine in his show, a diamond bracelet. Mrs. Cortland (Frieda Inescourt) accidentally gets the bracelet, which is inscribed "My Dear Sweet Sheila." Martin, in a predicament, says he bought it for Bob Curtis (Fred Astaire), his dance director, and that it is Bob who is dippy about Sheila. Actually, Bob has eyes for none of the girls he directs.

To make Martin's story stand up, Bob pretends, before Mrs. Cortland, to be in love with Sheila. A photographer snaps their picture together. When the picture appears in the newspapers it is with Martin's glib comment that the two are engaged. Both Bob and Sheila are furious. Bob calls on Sheila to protest. Sheila's childhood chum, Tom Barton (John Hubbard), is there for the same reason. Tom pretends to be Sheila's brother, and, putting on an act, chases Bob out of the apartment while flourishing a revolver.

Bob's number comes up in the draft and he is glad to get away from all girls and Martin. At Camp Weston, Bob finds Tom Barton is his captain. In a bad dream he sees Tom taking Sheila away. Bob wakes up fighting and socks a sergeant, for which he is put in the guardhouse. Bob, aided by two other draftees, Swivel Tongue (Cliff Nazzaro) and Kewpie (Quinn Williams), goes A. W. O. L. and calls on Sheila, wearing a captain's uniform. Tom and four other captains walk in on Bob, but Tom protects his rival and he is glad to return to the guardhouse.

Martin conceives a plan to take his stage company to the camp and get Bob to put on the show there. Bob hatches a plan of his own. When he and Sheila have a rift, because of Sonia (Osa Massen), a dancer Martin is courting, Bob devises an elaborate wedding ceremony for the show and gets Sheila to be the bride with himself as the groom. At the climax of the dance number, he and Sheila are married. An instant later, he is returned to the guardhouse.

HERE COMES MR. JORDAN (Columbia)

Drama

Produced by Everett Riskin. Directed by Alexander Hall. From the play "Heaven Can Wait" by Harry Siegel.

SYNOPSIS

Joe Pendleton (Robert Montgomery) is piloting a rented plane for relaxation while in training for a bout with the leading contender for the light-heavyweight championship. The controls go haywire and the ship plummets toward the ground. The scene shifts to the headquarters of the "Heavenly Express," the limited "which takes folks across the great divide to their just rewards." As it is presented, it is a realistic place of dispatching business—nothing eerie or supernatural about it.

Joe, very much alive and protesting, is being brought forth by Messenger No. 7013 (Edward Everett Horton). This man is new on the job and isn't very sure of himself. Joe tells Jordan (Claude Rains), the chief dispatcher, that his number isn't up yet. He accuses No. 7013 of being too hasty. Jordan looks at the records and finds Joe is right. He still has fifty years more of life, according to the books.

Jordan can't restore Joe to earth in his own form, since Joe's fight manager, Max Corkle (James Gleason), has cremated the body found in the plane after the crash. Jordan has many suggestions, but Joe is a hard one to please and Jordan is at his wits' end. Their quest takes them to the home of millionaire Bruce Farnsworth, who is at the moment being murdered by his wife, Julia (Rita Johnson), and his secretary, Tony Abbott (John Emery). Joe wants no part of that set-up until he sees Bette Logan (Evelyn Keyes), whose father is in danger of imprisonment as a result of Farnsworth's double-dealings.

In order to help the girl, Joe agrees to impersonate Farnsworth. The sight of the supposedly murdered man is almost too much for Julia and Tony. Joe starts rectifying the wrongs done by Farnsworth, incurring the wrath of some, but winning the love of Bette. He sends for Max, the fight manager, and tells him to arrange a bout with the champion.

Joe and Jordan are present at the fight between Murdock and Gilbert—Farnsworth meanwhile having been shot by Tony—when Murdock is shot to prevent him from winning. Jordan persuades Joe that he has just enough time to take over for Murdock and win the fight before the crowd is aware of his death.

He wins the bout and becomes Murdock—the world's champion. Joe, with his knowledge, is able to convict Murdock's manager for conniving with the gamblers and to let the police know where Farnsworth's body is. After the fight, Joe meets Bette. She does not recognize him, but is strongly attracted to the new champion.

SYNOPSIS

Tillie Jones (Kay Harris) is the most popular but not the smartest student in the Modern Secretarial School. When she arrives at the office building in the swanky car of one of her many boy friends, she rams the rambling wreck belonging to Clarence MacDougall (William Tracy). Mac is so smitten by Tillie that he walks away from his wrecked car and follows her, goofy-eyed.

Mac is the head clerk for Simpkins & Company, a dress house in the same building. When Simpkins (George Watts) fires his secretary, Mac rushes up to the school and gets Tillie. Simpkins hires her. Wally Whipple (Jack Arnold) vies with Mac for Tillie. Tillie's shorthand is deficient and she almost loses her job when she includes Simpkin's personal comments in a letter. Simpkins goes to Chicago leaving Mac and Whipple in charge. He tells Mac to send the designs to the workroom as soon as they arrive.

When Ted Williams (Stanley Brown), who has been trying unsuccessfully to sell Simpkins some designs, comes in, Tillie takes the designs and sends them to the workroom. Then Tillie sells Mac on the idea of showing their models—with Tillie acting as a model—at a style show. Simpkins on his return goes into a rage when he sees the bills for the show, but his rage turns to elation when his models win all the laurels. He makes Mac general manager and gives Tillie a raise. SYNOPSIS

Herr General Franz von Bushmaster (Sig Rumann) receives instructions from Field Marshal Muller (Fritz Feld) that a dangerous propaganda film being produced by Bengal Pictures, Inc., in America, must be destroyed. In another country's office, Scaletti (Luis Alberni), secret operative, receives his instructions to go to America for the same purpose.

At the Bengal studio, the final shot of the great expose, "The Earth's on Fire," is being taken. The picture stars Mark Saunders (Ricardo Cortez), Kitty Carr (Frances Farmer), and Lee Morrison (Virginia Dale). Kitty and Saunders quarrel when Kitty gets the idea that Saunders plays a love scene a little too realistically with Lee. On to the set strides Duncan DeGrasse (John Barrymore), producer extraordinary—a screwball with a phobia for firing somebody every 15 minutes. With DeGrasse is Martin (Eugene Pallette), his financial backer.

Back in his office, DeGrasse yells for Joe Bemus (Don Castle), studio press agent. He tells Bemus to hire a couple of extras to impersonate foreign spies, put them on the train going to the premiere.

Things begin to happen. Saunders gets a note threatening him with death and when a lamp barely misses his head, Saunders faints. DeGrasse sends for Bemus to tell him that he is going too far, but before he can get an answer a fire breaks out in the film vaults. Then the railroad washes its hands of responsibility when it receives a warning note, so DeGrasse gets Martin to buy the train and the special moves out with everyone aboard.

Saunders takes Lee to the observation platform, quarreling en route with Skinkley (William Wright), a columnist, who hates Saunders. Kitty, drawn to the platform by a message from Skinkley, fights with Saunders. Kitty goes into the baggage room and faints at the sight of a loose tiger. The others see Kitty and think Saunders has killed her. DeGrasse goes to the baggage car, finds Kitty reviving, and takes her to the observation car to appear before a home town delegation.

Muller, infuriated at the failure of Bushmaster and Scaletti to accomplish anything, takes over, gets the film from the cage and substitutes a propaganda film. At the premiere the film cans get mixed and after a reel of the propaganda film. DeGrasse's masterpiece comes on. Outside, Bemus and the cops are fighting with the spies.

SMILIN' THROUGH (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Romantic Drama

Produced by Victor Saville. Directed by Frank Borrage. Based on the play by Jane Cowl and Jane Murfin.

SYNOPSIS

Cries of "God bless the Queen" break the quiet of the Kent countryside as the villagers celebrate Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee, the golden years from 1837 to 1897. Only Sir John Carteret (Brian Aherne) is somber. He is remembering the Irish girl he was to wed almost thirty years before, the lovely Moonyean Clare, who was taken from him by the frenzied jealousy of a disappointed suitor.

At home, the Rev. Owen Harding (Ian Hunter) and Ellen (Frances Robinson), the housekeeper, have sent for Kathleen, Moonyean's five-year-old orphan niece. At first Sir John resents the child, but the tiny Kathleen (Jackie Horner) soon wins his heart. She grows into young womanhood beloved by him and Owen as well as the village beau. Willie (Patrick O'Moore) is a favorite, and before leaving for the front in the first World War, visits Kathleen (Jeanette MacDonald).

During their hike, Kathleen and Willie are trapped by a sudden storm and seek refuge in the old Wayne house. They are startled at the appearance of Kenneth Wayne (Gene Raymond), newly arrived from America to join the British Army. It is love at first sight for Kathleen and Kenneth. Sir John tells Kathleen that it was Jeremy Wayne (also Gene Raymond), Kenneth's father, who, half-crazed, rushed to the wedding to kill his rival. Moonyean, protecting John, was herself killed. Kathleen begs Sir John to forget the old tragedy. He is adamant, however.

Kenneth returns from the war, but it is a changed Kenneth. He declares he no longer loves Kathleen, that he has done his bit, and is returning to America. Owen learns that Kenneth, wounded, doesn't want to be a burden to Kathleen. He tells Kathleen. It is then that Sir John realizes that through his hate he has lost both Kathleen and Moonyean. He sends Kathleen to Kenneth.

Owen and Sir John are together over their chessboard. In the midst of their game, Sir John, who has cherished Moonyean in his heart for fifty years, falls into an eternal sleep. SYNOPSIS

John Murdock (Henry Fonda), a young and carefree lumberjack, always feels the call to move on when he sees the wild geese winging overhead. For him the geese are symbolic of freedom. Almost broke, he finds his way to Seattle—the Seattle of 1895—in search of another vagabond, Blackie Bedford (Warren William).

Then Blackie proposes that they all go to Alaska to take over the "hotel" he'd won from Pirate Kelly. John and Sally find the "hotel" to be a disreputable honky tonk and refuse to have anything to do with it. John gets a job and they set up home in a crude log cabin.

In town, Sally again runs into Kelly, who is still looking for Blackie. She hastens to warn Blackie and as she is leaving, Blackie grabs her and kisses her. John enters. He leaves Sally. Weeks later John, returning from work at the lumber camp, finds Sally in the throes of childbirth.

In quest for help, John enters the gambling place operated by Kelly. Believing John a partner of Blackie's, Kelly fires at him but his aim is wild for at that moment, Blackie shoots Kelly from a window. Jabez cries out that it's enough to make a man want to sell his soul to the devil.

A moment later he meets the devil in the barn. The devil parades as a Mr. Scratch (Walter Huston) and he offers to make Jabez a wealthy man with everything that money can buy. He kicks up a board in the barn floor and uncovers a pot of gold coins. All Jabez has to do is sign a contract and he'll have seven years of wealth, but at the end of that time he has to give up his soul to Mr. Scratch. Jabez signs.

He pays off Stevens. Stevens recognizes those coins. He, too, had sold his soul. Daniel Webster (Edward Arnold), the farmers' friend, comes to Cross Corners on a visit and Jabez makes a hit by speaking for him. The local farmers, prodded by Mr. Scratch, make Jabez the new Selectman. Now everything that Jabez does turns out right, but he changes. He becomes hard and arrogant as he becomes wealthy.

He loves his son, born soon after his deal with the devil, but quarrels with Mary. A girl named Belle (Simone Simon), friend of the devil, makes trouble. But as the time approaches when he is to lose his soul, he broods. Mary appeals to Webster to help her, but Jabez orders her to leave the house.

Jabez doesn't want to give up his soul. The devil offers to give him an extension if he'll sign away his son's soul. Jabez refuses, and calls on Webster to help him. Webster faces Mr. Scratch and demands a jury trial. He is allowed to face a jury of notorious American traitors and, by the force of his oratory, bests Mr. Scratch and saves Jabez.

SNOW DOGS (Par.)

Sportlight (RO-12)

The first stopping-off point in this dog subject is at the Chinook Kennels in Wonalancet, N. H., where a group of Husky pups—just six months old—are already in training. Some will become work dogs and others racing dogs, for sled-dog racing is a rapidly growing sport in New England. There is a sequence showing the fastest sled-dogs in the east racing at Cannon Mountain. Basically, snow dogs are work dogs, however, and out in Ketchum, Idaho, they comprise a fast freight line for hauling supplies into the Saw Tooth Mountain National Forest. A final sequence provides a touch of comedy—a visit with one of the European breeds—a mother St. Bernard and her five pups.

WAR IN THE DESERT (20th-Fox)

World Today (1702)

This is the story in pictures of a dream of empire that became a nightmare. It is the story of the Italian conquest in North Africa, conquest that was later to turn into disaster for the Italians. General Italo Balbo, who had become a national hero because of the mass flight from Rome to Chicago, was banished to Libya by Mussolini and told to build an empire. He did a good job and eventually Italian colonists followed and cities sprang up overnight on the Libyan sands. The British, meanwhile, had established their Middle East army in Egypt with General Sir Archibald Wavell in command. War came and Wavell's army travelled from Sidi Barrani to Tobruk, routing the Italian army and laying waste the towns. The Italian empire had vanished. The narrator is Quentin Reynolds.

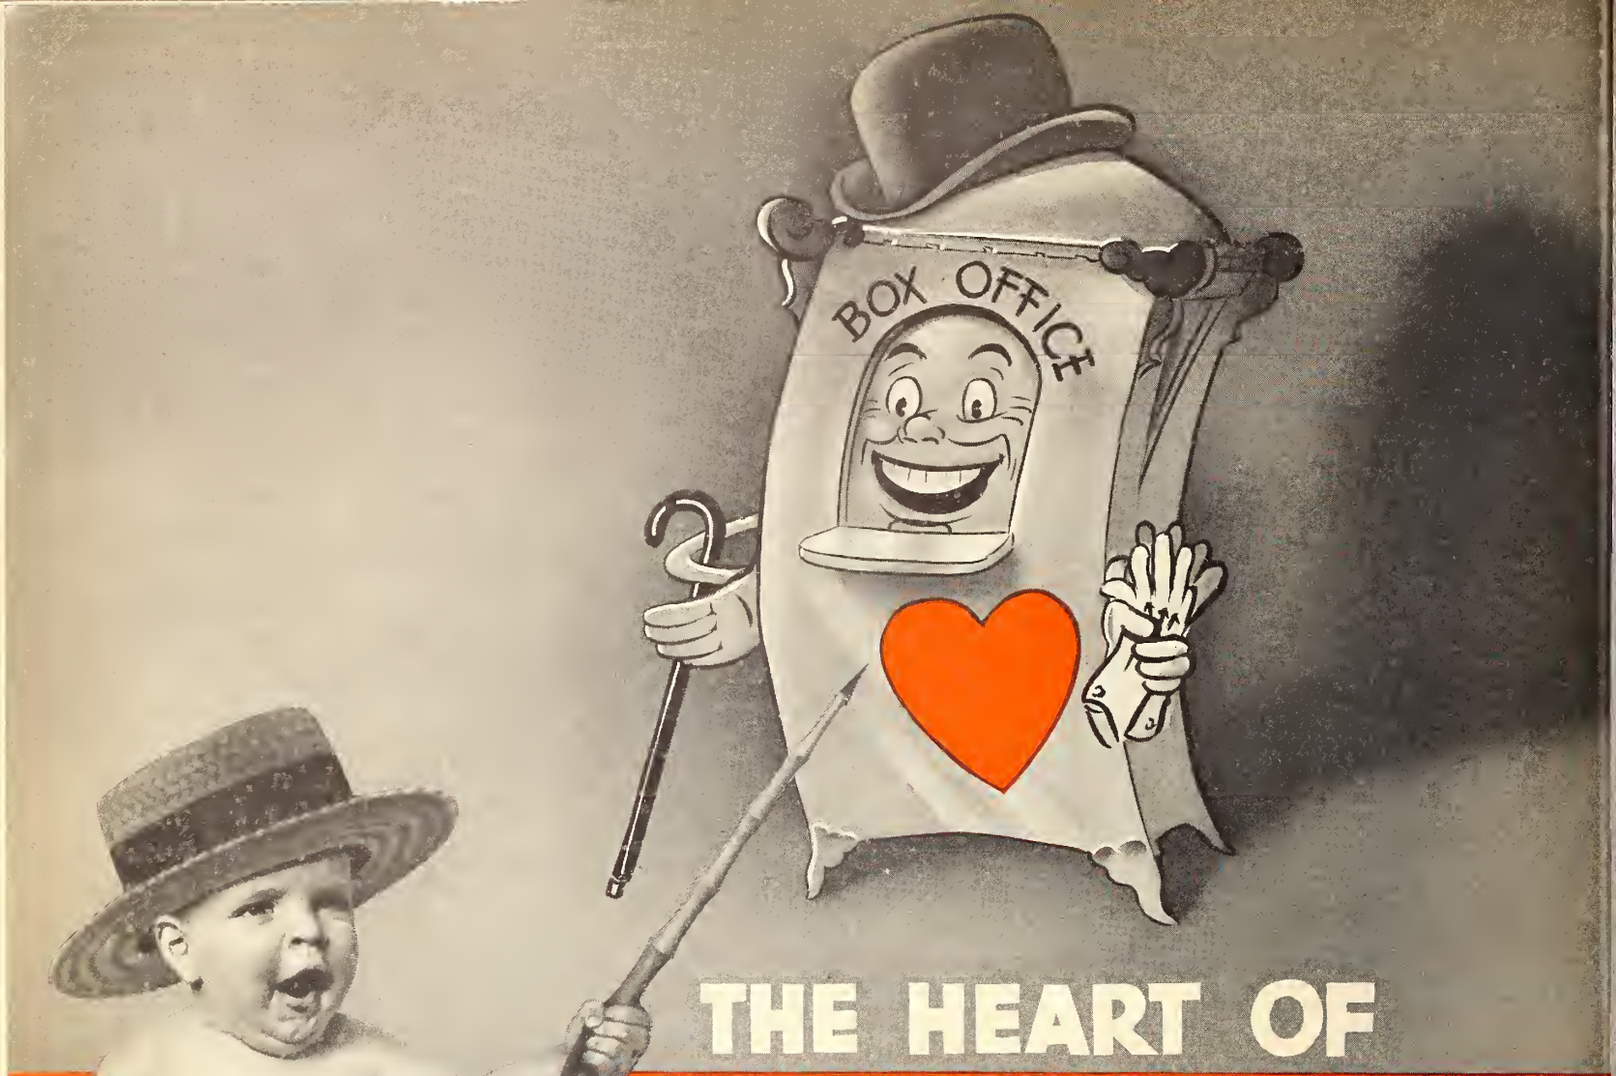
USE IT!

On the opposite page appears the master index to Product Digest, a cumulative catalogue of all information available to date on 1940-41 product and which has been published in preceding issues of Motion Picture Herald.

Check the title of any feature that you want to look up, turn to the designated page or pages of your file, and you will find all buying and booking information available up to this very minute — synopses, casts, credits, release dates, production numbers, running time, review references, Round Table references and Legion of Decency ratings.



Product Digest is published every other week alternately with the regular Release Chart.

The Release Chart carries, as always, an alphabetical index of titles, a breakdown by companies, star information, release dates, running time and review references. The Release Chart, published every other week, is a compact compilation of certain important booking information.

Product Digest, on alternate weeks, is cumulative, a more extensive compilation of similar information. The Release Chart is complete in itself. Product Digest carries only current information, but if you maintain a complete file of Product Digest, you will have, at your instant service, synopses, casts and other detailed data which could not conceivably be compressed into one issue. The cumulative alphabetical index of Product Digest, however, is a reference to all information that has been printed to date in all the issues of Product Digest.

If you misplaced or have not saved any issue of Product Digest, write for duplicates.

THE HEART OF THE BOX OFFICE IS Advertising!

- No matter how big your picture is . . . no matter how well publicized before it reaches your screen, you've got to advertise . . . exploit . . . publicize if you're going to bring in the "hard-to-get."
- For profits come from mass selling not from the grape-vine.
- That's been demonstrated time and time again with big pictures and ordinary pictures . . . in big houses and small houses.
- It's the "hard-to-get" who put your box office on velvet.
- All right! So what?
- So that's why we say advertising is the heart of the box office. And the Prize Baby's Three Best Seat Sellers are the heart of any theatre advertising campaign . . . Don't Let the Picture Die.

NEW PROJECTORS AID DENHAM FILM

The new Brenkert "80" projection equipment recently installed in the Denham theater is proving to be highly successful, judging from audience reaction, the management of that theater revealed Monday.

The new projectors, which were initiated last Friday with the opening of the new technicolor picture, "Shepherd of the Hills," have brought lavish praise from patrons who particularly have pointed out that the color of "Shepherd" is the most beautiful and most natural they have ever seen, the management said.

With the intense light thrown by the Brenkert projector, both screen characters and landscapes are seen in their greatest detail, it was explained. The veins in a leaf, the wrinkles on a face, the twinkle in an eye—all of the small details formerly lost to the eye of the film patron—now are clearly perceptible and there is a complete absence of eye strain.

The Denham management also announced that 20,220 persons have seen "Shepherd of the Hills" since its Friday opening.

FORMICA DOORS are an invitation to the public to enter your theater. Their deep, sparkling colors, in striking combinations, smooth plastic surface and modern appearance are to the last degree—pleasing!

They are very durable too. Hard, so that they will take wear. Non-porous, so that they never stain. Stable, so that light will not fade them. And easily cleaned with soap and water so that laborious and frequent polishing are not necessary.

No wonder hundreds of theaters from coast to coast have made use of them. They are equally in place for the luxurious new theater or for modernizing jobs on older houses. They are made complete by Formica and shipped ready for installation except for glass and hardware.

Air-Conditioners Boom Sales

CITING a number of theatre installations made or contracted for early this summer, the United States Air-Conditioning Corporation, Minneapolis, reports steadily increasing business importantly attributable to interest in unit air-conditioners in sizes adapted to theatres. The company brought out its first unit with mechanical refrigeration, in sizes up to 25 years, last spring.

These conditioners, singly or in unified groups, have been installed in the Westmount theatre, Westmount, Ill., in two Long-Griffith houses in Texas, in Floyd's theatre, El Campo, Tex., and in the Lisbon in Dallas. Refrigeration plants have also been installed in theatres in Sebring, Ft. Lauderdale, Leesburg and Miami, Fla., and in Wilby-Kinsey's Clover theatre at Montgomery, Ala. Equipment for well water cooling was recently installed in the new Norshor, Duluth; the new Hopkins, Hopkins, Minn., and the Colonial in Kokomo, Ind. None of these installations, it is pointed out, include the company's evaporative cooling equipment.

Save in Maintenance and Operation of Your Marquee Display!

Adler Exclusive "Remova-Panel" Units permit you to simply swing out on a hinge or remove entirely, a small lightweight glass panel instead of lifting out a large heavy frame unit. It allows fast, easy access to any part of the sign. Photos show St. Johns Theatre, Jacksonville, Florida, equipped with Adler "Remova-Panel" frames and "Third Dimension" letters, illuminated with Fluorescent tubing. At top, tubing being lifted out through "Remova-Panel" for quick and easy repairs or replacements. You can reach in and put a jumper across if a tube burns out, and thus keep the sign operating. The interior is easily cleaned, inspected and checked by simply lifting up the "Remova-Panels".

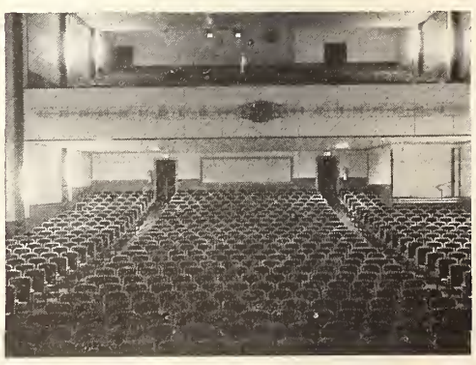
Elaborate Folder on Seating

A NEW folder on its Cameo auditorium chair, picturing various styles in color, and also reproducing photographs of actual installations, has been issued by Heywood-Wakefield. Features of the chair are described in detail.

Room Type Air-Conditioners

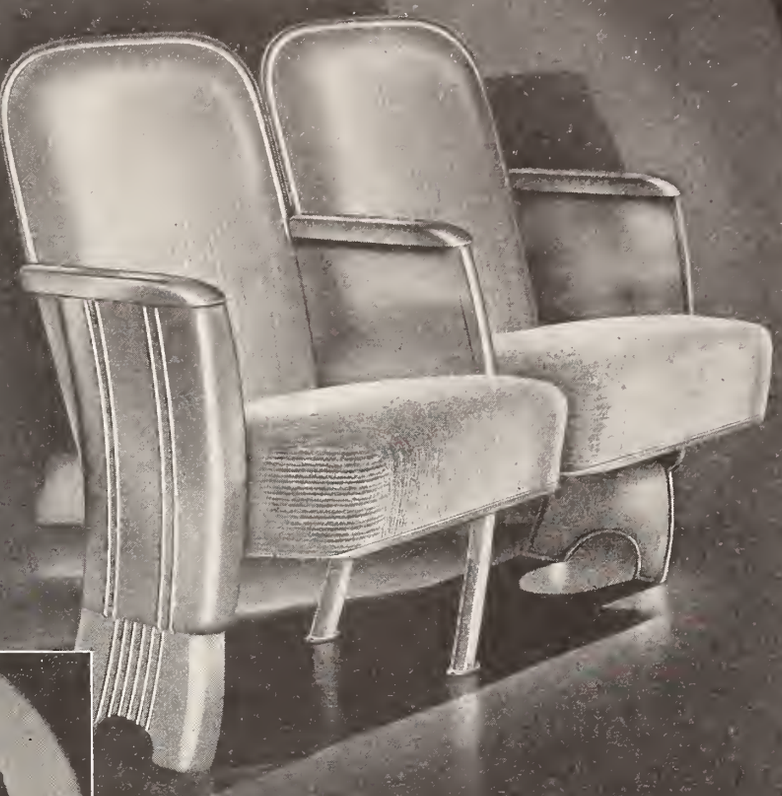


A BULLETIN has been issued by the Carbondale Division of the Worthington Pump & Machinery Corporation, Harrison, N. J., on two models of unit air-conditioners, one 3-h.p., the other 5-h.p. The casing is decoratively finished in two-tone brown in pebble lacquer, satin finish. Each of the units is 36 inches wide, and about 21 inches deep, while the smaller one is 84 inches high, the larger 95.

Light-Weight Motor Saw

A NEW motor-driven saw adapted to small workshops such as some theatres have for the making up of promotional materials, stage props, etc., has been brought out by the Porter-Cable Machine Company, Syracuse, N. Y. It carries a 6½-inch blade, which has cutting capacity for 2-inch material, and it weighs 15½ pounds. The motor is ⅝-h.p., of universal type.

Named Assistant Manager



EDMUND R. WALKER has been appointed assistant general manager of the Fedders Manufacturing Company, Buffalo, N. Y., manufacturers of heat transfer equipment. He was formerly manager of the air-conditioning division.

The CAMEO

more style ... more comfort .... more wear per dollar!

THAT'S the success story of the new Heywood Cameo in a nutshell. The Cameo gives you swanky style . . . decorative flash and sparkle. The Cameo gives you more comfort . . . genuine, spring edge comfort over the full area of the seat. And the Cameo gives you more wear per dollar, too. It can do this because of its all-steel back panels; bottom boards; center standards; hinges; and its cold-rolled steel back edge. Best of all, the Cameo is reasonably priced because of the tremendous volume in which this new chair is being produced. May we furnish details?

Better Theatres

ISSUE OF JULY 26, 1941. VOLUME 144, NUMBER 4

The Parking Lot in The Theatre Scheme

THE NUMBER of motor vehicles and the number of families in the United States are pretty much the same. Some of these vehicles are trucks and busses, but only 25%, still leaving enough pleasure cars to carry every American to the theatre—or to Perdition—according to one's point of view—in just a few trips. We don't believe these observations will startle any of our readers; even the newest refugee from Hitlerania doesn't have to write a government bureau of statistics to find out that we are a nation on wheels, while a native of these shores long ago remarked that in the United States an automobile is like a navel—everybody has one.

The realization of this by motion picture theatre operators first took a curious turn. Back in the Teetotalitarian Twenties, when a drink and prosperity were personal matters, the idea was to put the theatre in an urban center and draw patronage from the rim and beyond, with the small town folk going to the nearest good-sized city for their movies, at least the latest ones. This would require bigger, but permit fewer exhibition units. But city traffic makes unpleasant exhibition units. The automobile made all this seem feasible. But city traffic makes unpleasant motoring, and parking is ever a problem. For these and other reasons the "centralization" idea was tossed out, and the modern exhibition plant began to grow into the suburbs and small towns, taking the movies back to the people.

This has not lessened the significance of the automobile as a conveyor of custom to the motion picture theatre. Outlying districts are not compact. The automobile has carried residential developments farther and farther away from town centers. Additionally, the motor car provides private means of transportation highly preferable in most instances to public lines—indeed, the latter are being modified, established and routed in recognition of this fact. To get to the point—and it's about time we did!—the average theatre today needs to be able to assure its patronage of a reasonably safe place to park a car.

It is of course in the neighborhoods and the suburbs of cities that the parking lot has become a necessity. Commercial parking lots are frequently available near a theatre, but it represents an addition to the cost of attending the theatre. We can't see it any other way than that an important part of the process of projecting a motion picture theatre today is to juggle land and traffic values, with shrewd appraisal of drawing area and the direction of community growth, so that the theatre can provide free, safe and attractive parking facilities for its patrons.

We wouldn't know exactly how far into the country the automobile is taking us, but in England (and, by Jove, she's still England!) a lot of grand theatres were built smack-dab among the corn, or whatever they grow, or grew, over there. And in England the rural theatre has to depend pretty much on the bicycle trade. In America we have already begun to put food stores along the highways. And what do you make, Watson, of these drive-in whadyuhcallems? . . . Perhaps an article in BETTER THEATRES of July, 1952, will be a-telling how to keep the chickens from tracking up the lobby!

Theatre Building

Reflecting inroads upon the labor and materials market by the national defense program, reports of new theatre projects in the United States received by BETTER THEATRES Projects Bulletin Service during the first half of 1941, indicate that the year will close with a substantial decrease from the 1940 total. Reports received up to July 1st numbered 143. Last year reports during the same period amounted to 298, and the year closed with a total of 492.

These reports represent plans for new construction or such comprehensive remodeling that substantially a new theatre is contemplated. Experience has shown that approximately 80% of the projects announced are carried through to completion. Uncertainties produced by the defense program, however, advise putting all past guides on the shelf for the duration.

The number of projects thus submitted is to be regarded as somewhat less than the actual number of plans for new theatre construction developed during the first half of the year. Projects in the more remote towns are not always available, while correspondents and building report services miss a few of the theatres contemplated in the cities, particularly when a theatre is part of a project reported merely as a commercial building. On the basis of checks made in previous years, the total of 143 probably represents at least 85% of the plans announced since December 31st, 1940.

Preserving the historic and adopting the modern in other lands. At the left is pictured foyer area of the Magerit theatre, recently built in Mexico City by Rafael Gonzalez Laffarga on the site of the famous Palace Hagembert from plans by Jose Bertran Cussine. The front is that of the Times in Manila, P. I., with its new colored and flashed fluorescent neon sign and marquee border and Adler attraction panel and silhouette letters.

Of the 143 reports, the South maintained its leadership of recent years, with a total of 43 projects. The Middle West (east of the Mississippi) was next with 29, and the Pacific Coast (almost entirely California) third with 27. The other sections followed in this order: Middle Atlantic, Middle West west of the Mississippi, New England and the Mountain States.

Saving Juice for Defense

The need for more electrical power in the defense industries, which has already doused the lights of theatres in the South, where aluminum manufacture is centered, has aroused E. C. Smally, inventor and manufacturer of lighting gadgets for many years, to the timely significance of those interesting glass-roundel reflectors which he brought out a few years ago and more recently has improved. He writes to the editor:

"Dear Sir: There has been considerable comment during the past few weeks about the conservation of electricity. As theatres are some of the largest users of electrical current, there should be some concern among exhibitors as to how to reduce consumption without cutting normal operation more than necessary—especially without sacrificing sign and advertising effects and safety.

"You may judge otherwise, but it seems to me that you would be doing your readers a service in describing ways in which current consumption can be reduced, and as you know from data you have had from theatre operators using them, Climax reflectors can accomplish such reduction, simply by using lamps of smaller wattage, but getting just as much illumination.

"Aside from the saving in money that reduction of current consumption means, it certainly is advised by the conditions brought about by the defense program. Some theatre have already been affected, others may be soon. There are a number of ways in which the theatre can co-operate with the Government in this matter. Some old-type equipment uses more juice than modern equipment does. This might be a good time for the exhibitor to go over his entire electrical setup. Many could find changes to make that would not only help to meet the defense situation, but would save operating costs later on."

Ways to save in electrical costs have been cited, one way and another, in these pages since long before Herr Hitler got in our hair. Economy is not exactly a war measure, or shouldn't be. As for Mr. Smally's reflectors, they have been described in these pages also. It is curious that although some important theatre operators have been using them for years, continually adding to their installations in what must be a practical demonstration of their happy experience with the gadgets, relatively few theatres yet have begun to use them.

These reflectors fit into a variety of lighting schemes—marquee borders and soffit, interior coves, ticket booth trim, exit signs, stair wells and corridors, vertical sign trim and also the letters where lamps instead of neon are used. In a number of installations these reflectors (the roundels come in colors as well as white) have replaced 6- and 10-watt lamps with 3-watt lamps, 25-watt lamps with sevens, and 40's with tens. We have data on Balaban & Katz installations in Chicago and elsewhere which we hope to find space for soon; the saving in power cost per year runs into a fancy figure. And for exposed applications, the reflectors provide color without dipping and attendant light loss, and for looks they're miniature fixtures.

Paragraphs—

An advertisement of General Electric in this issue makes an interesting suggestion for the creation of an impression of coolness in a lobby or foyer by substituting fluorescent lamps in a cool color, notably green, for regular filament lamps and lumilines. This implies that green fluorescents, for example, would supply sufficient illumination for display cases or room lighting.

For substitution in display cases, standard showcase units are available with separate ballasts from various manufacturers. The lamp space would of course have to be big enough to take the fluorescents. The ballast, which is connected to the reflector unit by a long, shielded cord, could be placed in the base, or even on the back of the display in some cases. In coves the substitution can be readily made with standard channels, preferably with reflectors.

A restaurant in Miami has been enjoined from using the name "Esquire," by the U. S. District Court for the Southern District of Florida, in a suit brought by the magazine, Esquire. And a letter from the publication states: "There have been several instances of the use of our name by businesses in your field . . . and it will be necessary for us to continue to protect our name from piracy and transgression." . . . A man of standing has long been referred to in our language as "Esquire." It is the designation of a certain rank in England. Webster says it also identifies "a gentleman escorting a lady," which fails to suggest an Esquire cartoon. Of course, one might have supposed that the name in neon on hundreds of restaurants and theatres would have helped to keep the nation Esquire-conscious. This, it would seem, cannot be so, for which the Law must be blamed or thanked. —G. S.

EMBASSY THEATRE
Atlantic City, N. J.
ARMAND CARROLL, Architect

■ Glass, for doors and luminous forms and functional elements, dominates the front design of the new Embassy theatre in Atlantic City, operated by Wielland Theatres, headed by George F. Wielland, with Warren F. Wielland vice-president and P. Mortimer Lewis treasurer. The theatre is described and further pictured on the following page.

FOYER OF EMBASSY THEATRE: Note broadening effect of the mirror panels.

LOBBY, looking toward street.

AUDITORIUM: Velour wall panels are ornamented with lighted plaster figures.

STANDEE MURALS, with panels divided by Flexglass columns.

■ From front to seating area, the Embassy theatre exhibits a variety of applications of architectural, structural and mirror glass (largely by Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company). Glass blocks form a luminous window, front facing is Cararra glass, reeded glass forms the base of the ticket booth with plate glass above extending to a translucent glass ceiling member, lighted from behind by fluorescent lamps; and doors are Herculite which, with the continuous plate glass of the ticket booth, affords unobstructed vision of the interior. The marquee fascia is essentially a continuous Wagner silhouette attraction panel, while the soffit is illuminated by fluorescent lamps enclosed in reeded glass tubes with sections joined by metal bands for relamping. Fluorescent lamps also light attraction panel, and Fluorescent tubes (48-inch) form a modern chandelier by Voigt in the lobby. The lobby, 24 feet high, has walls with an 8-foot base of Italian marble, with pink tinted plaster above, and a plaster ceiling in pastel blue with dark blue cornice pointed with stars. The floor, like the vestibule floor, is terrazzo. . . . The Embassy plan is L-shaped, and the lobby leads into a long, narrow foyer continuous with the standee area. The foyer walls are alternate panels of flesh-colored mirror glass flanked by lighted glass columns, and of silver leaf. The carpeting here is slate blue broadloom with dubonnet borders, while in the standee it becomes alternate strips of these shades. Facing the seating, the standee wall, curving to exit doors, bears a group of murals, painted on canvas treated with gold leaf, with each pair of murals separated by a rounded column of Flexglass. . . . With a one-floor plan seating 1,000, the auditorium has side walls in a series of panels of slate-blue velour over rock wool. Centered in each panel is a plaster figure (supported by concealed channel iron bases), wired to effect a blue-light background. The ceiling, done in blue-tinted plaster, begins with a splayed stepped cornice, and the central panel is unornamented except for lateral pairs of coved electroliers suspending Anemostat air diffusers (flush-type Anemostats are used elsewhere in the theatre). Seating, consisting of American chairs with Bodiform type seats and end standards, but with spring backs, and spaced 36 inches back to-back, has backs covered in dubonnet mohair, seats in green Cavalon. The screen curtain is gold damask, the drapes in blue plush and gold corduroy. The Embassy is air-conditioned, with well water cooling.

APOLLO THEATRE
Buffalo, N. Y.

■ The interior of Basil Brothers' new Apollo theatre in a residential section of Buffalo, presents a number of uncommon features, both in design and facilities. Housed in a building also containing four stores, the theatre is entered from an enclosed vestibule with built-in ticket booth at one side, with both wall and ticket booth a continuous formation of black and white marble. The booth projects in a semi-circle, and above it the ceiling is coved in the same curvature, concealing flourescent lamps to illuminate this area. Entrance doors, as well as interior doors, are of wood veneer laid with the grain forming a herringbone pattern. Area immediately in front of the entrance doors is lighted by a translucent glass-covered light box flush in the ceiling. The vestibule floor is of travertine-colored marble slabs in a block pattern. The foyer extends from entrance doors and across the rear of the auditorium in a direction forming a graceful curvature, with the walls finished in red antique simulated leather flecked with silver, and applied in quilted style with gold rosettes at each intersecting corner. A semi-circular candy case, set against the wall in front of a draped recess, is finished in leather to match the walls, while a marble splash panel of a drinking fountain (not shown in accompanying photograph) blends with the walls in similar effect. The fountain is automatically operated, not by a photoelectric cell mechanism, but by a floor treadle under a rubber mat. Carpeting in the foyer, as in the auditorium aisles, is a modern circular pattern in tan and black on a buff ground. . . . The women's lounge of the Apollo, located on a mezzanine level, presents an interesting arrangement, incorporating a "nursery" section. Placed in the plan so that it overlooks the auditorium, this lounge area is also equipped with a plate glass window affording a view of the screen, and a sound system speaker. The nursery section is equipped with a variety of toys. . . . A novel feature of the auditorium treatment consists in a group of wall decorations symbolizing the legend of Apollo (patron of music); placed on either forward side, in plastered area ahead of a paneled section covered in velour. The murals are associated with groupings of bracket lights used for house lighting, and they are done in Stroblite luminous paint without ultraviolet actuation, so that when the house lights go out, they fade out as the picture begins.

MAKING CARPETING FIT THE INTERIOR

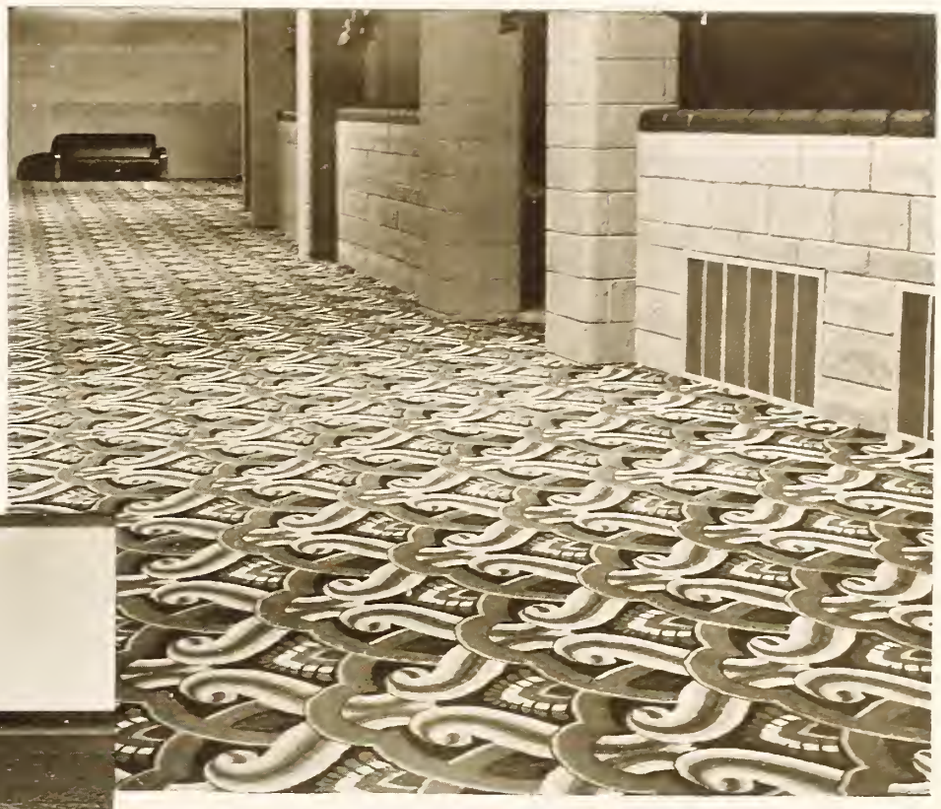
Examples of successful selections and the reasons therefor

SAENGER THEATRE, NEW ORLEANS

COLONIAL THEATRE, ELMIRA, N. Y.

IT IS true enough that successful selection of carpeting is a matter of good taste—but that doesn't get us anywhere. Some people have "good taste," others do not. We may assume that professional designers do have it, but a large percentage of carpeting is chosen, more or less necessarily, without the counsel of such specialists. The leading carpet manufacturers make comparable counsel available, but this service frequently fails to enter into the selection of theatre carpeting, for various reasons, including those of geography, price and immediate delivery. The process of selection therefore is somewhat simplified when the buyer himself has a pretty good idea of what would look well—at least of what wouldn't!

Carpeting is in good taste when it is in harmony with the room in style, coloration and scale (proportions of the pattern). This harmony is important, because carpeting, which represents a substantial investment, is also a dominant element of the carpeted area, and it can weaken or strengthen the entire interior treatment. If interior forms and carpet patterns were always definitely square or curvilinear, colors always standard shades, scale a matter of fixed physical relationships, and style susceptible to precise classifications, something of a formula might be evolved for rule-of-thumb guidance. In order to enjoy variation and some creative latitude, the factors cannot be greatly simplified.



"GOOD TASTE" APPLIED

They are not overly subtle, however. From among more recent carpet installations in theatres a half-dozen have been chosen to be pictured here as examples of successful selection. Probably most readers will agree that, by and large, each fits well into its particular scheme of things, and the group affords an interesting examination of the factors of selection that apply generally.

In the picture of the Saenger theatre in New Orleans we see a foyer, not too high for the heaviness of the architectural design, in an elaborate period style (reasonably to be identified as Italian Renaissance); nevertheless, the carpeting (a Bigelow-Sanford Saxony) is a modern abstract version of traditional motif. And while the area is of good dimensions, the carpet pattern is small in scale. The heavy and elaborate details of the general interior design, plus the relatively low height of the richly medallioned ceiling, suggests simplicity and contrast at the floor, to avoid optical confusion and an "overdone" effect. But while a small-scale design was chosen, it is of overall, self-patterning type in two tones of one subdued color, burgundy (a shade of purple), so that the effect of scale is not pronounced. And the general style expresses the quiet elegance of old-world refinement.

In the mezzanine of the Colonial theatre in Elmira, N. Y. (a new house operated by John R. Osborne of Wheeling, W. Va., Nikitas Dipson of Batavia, N. Y., and Frederick Schweppe of Elmira), the appropriateness of the leaf pattern of the Mohawk Velvet carpeting to the wall treatment and outdoor setting of the mural (symbolizing Elmira's growth from Colonial days) may be readily observed, while the figure repeat is in keeping with the broad dimensions. And there is contrast between ceiling, wall and floor, too, so that each asserts itself in the form of the room, the carpet being plain, the wall pale blue, and the carpet basically dark blue, with tan figures.

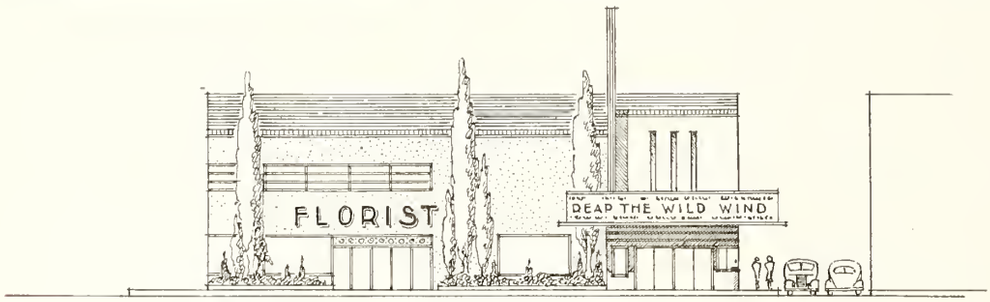
The vigorous, large-figured design on the floor of the Civic theatre in Detroit, with its interior of stone-like slag, provides, in an Alexander Smith Crestwood Velvet, pronounced embellishment to an interior otherwise tending toward a monotone, in a scale which proportionately supports the "weight" of the masonry effect. The Harper is another Detroit theatre exemplifying a happy choice of pattern, also in a Crestwood, with a curvilinear configuration, yet forming a strong straight-line effect overall, supplementing the delicate tracery of wall ornamentation spaced within generally square areas.

In the cosmetic room of the St. Johns theatre in Jacksonville, a color, in a Bigelow-Sanford broadloom, has been used instead of patterned Wilton laid elsewhere. Here dimensions are small, with furniture breaking up the area still further, and walls delicately decorated. The solid color, carried to the walls, gives the floor as much sweep as possible and sets off the decoration and furnishings with a strongly contrasting tone.

In general, the dominant architectural forms of a carpeted area suggest the basic figured forms of the carpet, while carpet colors are safely selected from the shades used elsewhere, perhaps "reversing the order"—that is to say, a color dominating the walls might be chosen for the carpeting figures, and a minor wall color, or a shade of the same "family," for the carpeting ground (avoiding, however, a ground color that is too light).



Determining whether a certain pattern is in a scale of good proportion to the space to be carpeted does not always lend itself to such simplification. A foyer may have much area in square footage, yet be small in effect, due to narrowness or to being "cut up" considerably. The aim, in considering scale, is to prevent an appearance of being too big here, too large there; to avoid confusion to the eye; in short, to unify the room, if a lounge, or the immediately confined area if a foyer or standee section.

CONSTRUCTION AND PLAN LAYOUTS FOR THEATRE PARKING LOTS

CHARLES C. BURTON
Architect & Engineer, Paramount Theatres Service Corporation

THEATRE FROM STREET

PARKING LOT APPROX. 26,000 SQ. FT. FOR 100 CARS OR 260 SQ. FT. PER CAR.
ENTRANCE & EXIT BESIDE THEATRE ENTRANCE SO PASSENGERS MAY BE LANDED & PICKED UP UNDER PROTECTION OF SIDE MARQUEE. AN INSIDE LOT OF THIS TYPE IS THE SIMPLEST TO CONTROL.

The development in recent years of the neighborhood shopping center, which may include theatre, shops, library, etc., creates forces in the business center which work against each other and require balancing. The theatre operator tends to locate his theatre where there are a lot of people passing. If many people pass in automobiles, the congestion may become acute. And the theatre operator who plans a parking lot in conjunction with his theatre immediately balances one important situation.

No two parking lots are the same in size, topography or construction requirements; soil conditions, drainage needs, street layouts, etc., vary. Therefore, only principles of design and planning can be cited here.

Four main principles in designing the parking lot are to be noted:

First, the entrances and exits for cars must be carefully studied in relation to both vehicular and pedestrian traffic. Blind corners are apt to cause a serious traffic hazard.

Second, provision of convenient footpaths for pedestrians.

Third, the appearance of the parking lot. If the parking lot creates a forbidding look, or offers a poor visual entrance, women patrons sometimes hesitate to enter. The best bet is landscaping, if at all financially feasible.

Fourth, the parking lot should be well lighted. Also, experience tends to show that parking area should be surrounded by a fence. The psychological effect on the patron of a well lighted enclosure surrounded by a fence is to give him the feeling his car is safe while he is in the theatre.

Considerable thought has been given to the relative merits of diagonal and perpendicular parking, and I have come to the conclusion that the advantage of the diagonal, in requiring narrower driving lanes, is balanced somewhat by the dead space at the end of the parking rows. Generally, no set preference of perpendicular parking over diagonal parking, or vice versa, can be made, as the size and shape of the lot and the number and location of entrances and exits will govern the advisability of either scheme or a combination of both.

A great many experiments over a period of years has established the belief in the mind of the author that "Colas", manufactured by the Shell Petroleum Products, Inc., is particularly well suited to the paving of parking lots. It is sold by the gallon in steel drums of 55 gallons capacity, at approximately 11¢ per gallon. One gallon covers one square yard 1 inch thick; the material is available in practically every city in the United States.

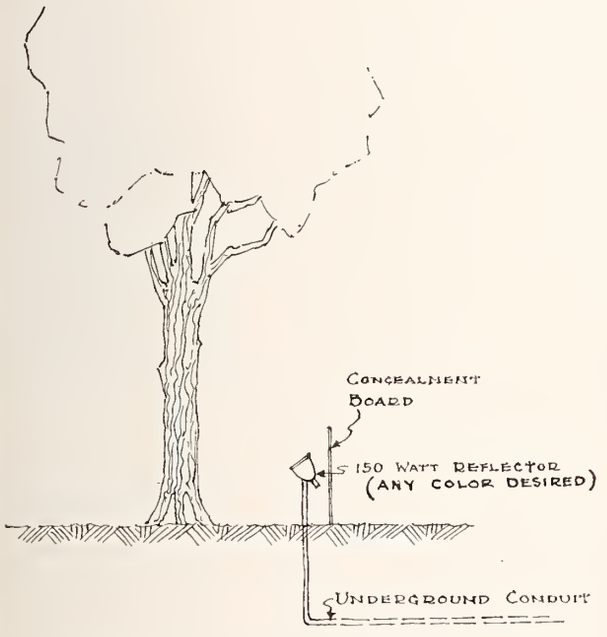
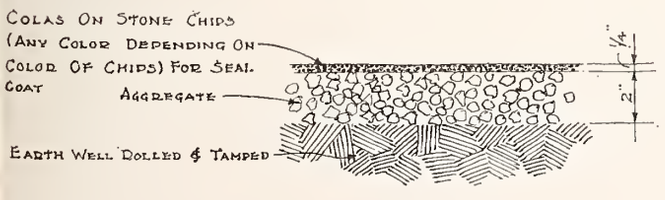
It must be remembered that no parking lot is better than its base—that is to say, a good surface course will be quickly ruined if laid on a faulty base or foundation. The foundation must be strong enough to withstand the loads and traffic to which the lot will be subjected, and it must be repaired when necessary before the surface course is laid. As each course is built up, the grade and contour must be carefully checked and maintained parallel to the requirements of the finished surface.



The fundamental requirements of the stone used are that it will not fracture under the roller and that it will be so crushed and graded as to compact with a minimum of voids and with good inherent stability due to mechanical interlocking of the angular fragments.

It is naturally of importance to have the new surface firmly adhere to an old surface or the base. Unless this base is exceptionally hard and smooth, the new stone will dig into it and provide the necessary key; then a tack coat is undesirable. There are conditions, however, which prevent this keying, as, for example, concrete or sheet asphalt bases, and under these circumstances a tack coat is required. The author's procedure is to apply approximately one-eighth of a gallon of "Colas" per square yard and cover immediately with ¼ inch of stone chips; the roughened surface so obtained will key into the voids in the base of the new surface course.



"Colas" will adhere to wet surfaces where other binders will not, but the final traces of water must be lost before the full degree of adherence or "set" is obtained. The speed at which this takes place is called the "rate of break" or "rate of set" and emulsions are divided into two main groups, known as "quick setting" and "slow setting". The former is used for penetration and simple surface treatment, while the latter is manufactured with delayed "set" or "break" to enable the mixing of the emulsion with the stone either before or after it is applied to the lot.

Very little can be indicated in these pages concerning drainage, in view of the fact that all parking lot areas are of different sizes. The lot should be scientifically laid-out and pitched to the necessary drains.

Sometimes, as with Class A theatres, where landscaping is incorporated in the lot, the author has run underground conduits and placed various colored lights in the base of shrubbery, which creates a very theatrical effect and has received favorable comment.

Theatre Parking Simplified with Light

• The well-planned parking lot is a carefully and intelligently illuminated one — lighted both to be and to look safe and convenient. Explained here is how you can determine the lighting facilities your parking lot needs.

By H. J. CHANON
and R. T. DORSEY

A lighted directional sign and plenty of extra light on the ground and building make it easy for the motorist to find the entrance of the theatre parking lot shown above. . . . Below is a "shining" example of good parking lot coverage from 1,000-watt open-type floodlights on 30-foot poles.

THE AUTOMOBILE of today has greatly changed our mode of living. The alert theatre operator is recognizing its influence in the habits of his patrons and is providing parking facilities. This is just one more consideration in his planning for comfort and convenience which may well be the deciding factor in one's choice of a particular theatre for an evening's entertainment.

H. J. CHANON

R. T. DORSEY

In urban communities, inasmuch as the patronage is in the evening it is obvious that the well lighted parking lot has the maximum appeal. Further, it has much to do with forming a lasting impression in the mind of the regular theatregoer. Of even greater importance is its influence on those who do not regularly attend because of parking difficulties. The well lighted theatre parking lot has the following advantages:

1. Provides easy and safe entrance and exit.
2. Minimizes accidents to the person and car.
3. Reveals available spaces.
4. Assures patrons' peace of mind while in theatre.
5. Permits ready identification.

All of these advantages are readily obtainable through a simple organized approach. Modern practice indicates that an average illumination of one foot-candle throughout the parking area is sufficient. At the entrance and exit, however, several times this value will unmistakably mark these important locations and help direct vehicular traffic. Lighted signs at these points will eliminate confusion.

Still more light, of the order of 25 foot-candles, is desirable to indicate the walk leading to the box office. In addition, a lighted sign assists in directing the patron to the front or rear lobby entrance. This will be welcomed by those not familiar with the area.

ESTIMATING SOURCES

In general, parking lots can be classified into two groups. Figure 1 illustrates the condition where the theatre is flanked by other establishments and an area at the rear, common to the block, is used for parking. Figure 2 shows the other arrangement where the parking lot is not adjacent to the theatre. Each of these illustrations include typical types of floodlights which can be employed for either case.

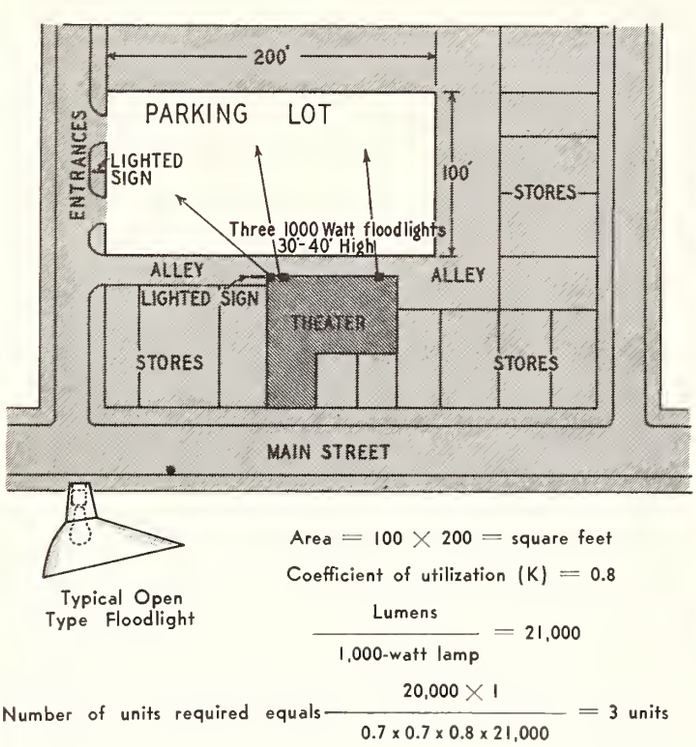

FIGURE 1.—Where the parking lot adjoins the theatre, the building itself often offers suitable locations for the floodlighting equipment.

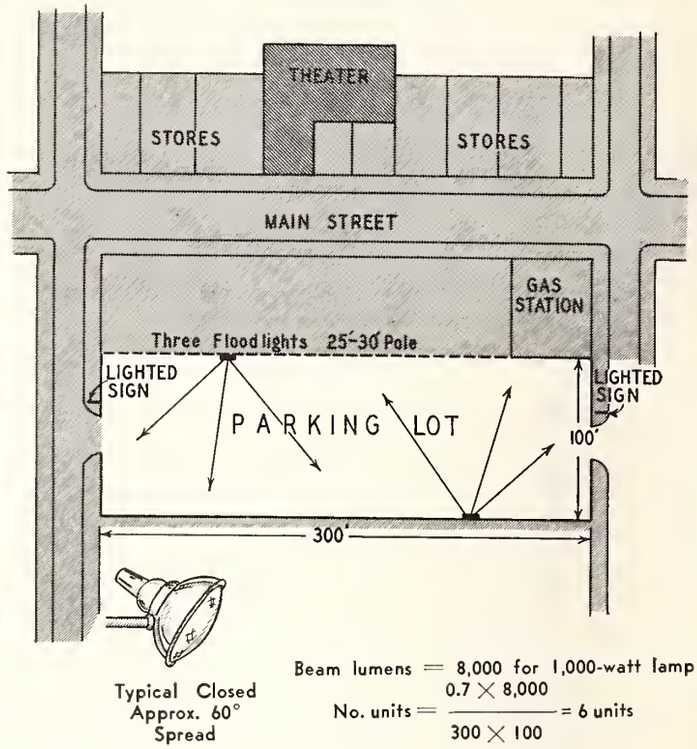

FIGURE 2.—To offer a complete service the theatre parking lot includes floodlighting as well as lighted directional signs.

If the theatre adjoins the parking lot, an opportunity often presents itself for locating at least some of the floodlighting units on the theatre building itself. For wider areas, others may be mounted on poles, or possibly on adjoining buildings.

A convenient way to estimate the number of floodlights required is as follows:

First, find the total wattage, by multiplying the area to be lighted (in sq. ft.), by the illumination desired in (foot-candles), times a factor of 0.15.

Second, determine the number of units to be installed by dividing the total wattage desired, by the wattage of each unit. The units would normally be 500- to 1,000-watt types to produce the amount of light indicated by this calculation.

Third, determine the locations of the units: make a scale drawing of the lot and select positions for the estimated number of units. This is to determine whether the locations selected will result in adequate coverage with minimum shadows from parked cars. Open type floodlights, such as indicated in Figure 1, have beam spreads of 90° or higher. Enclosed type floodlights, such as shown in Figure 2, have more concentrated beams of the order of 60° or less and provide higher illumination in the area of beam.

The actual number of open-type flood-

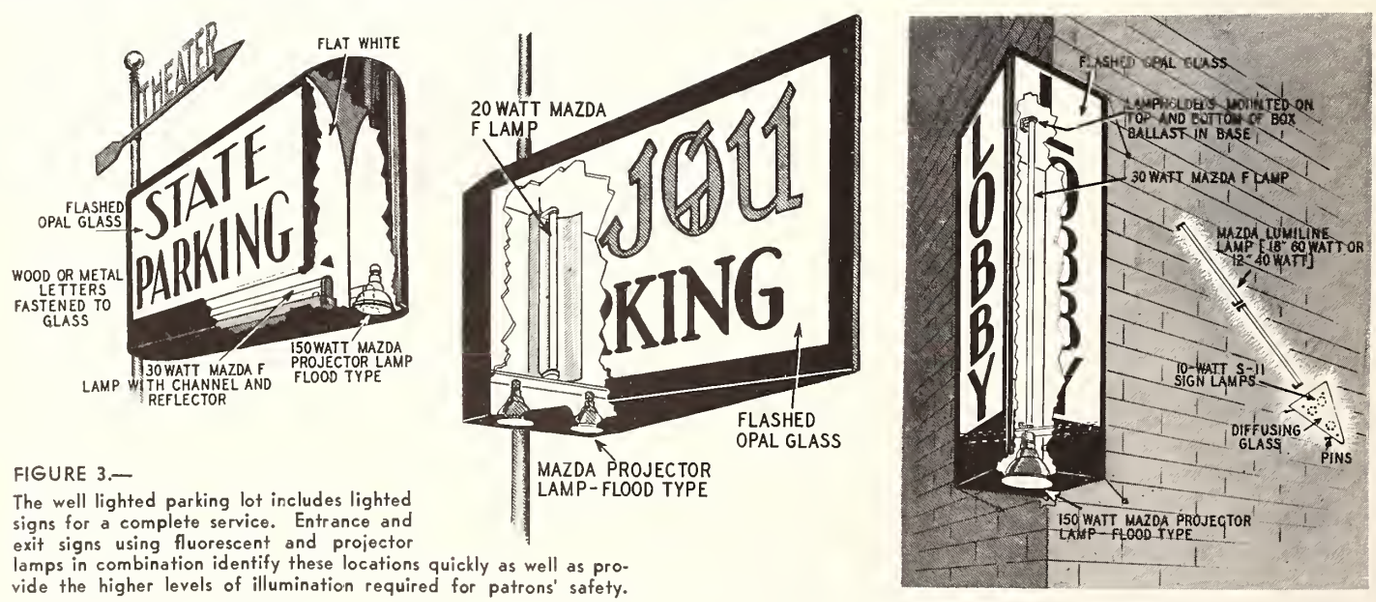

FIGURE 3.—
The well lighted parking lot includes lighted signs for a complete service. Entrance and exit signs using fluorescent and projector lamps in combination identify these locations quickly as well as provide the higher levels of illumination required for patrons' safety.

lights can be determined more accurately by applying the following formula:

$$\text{Number of units} = \frac{\text{Area to be lighted (sq. ft.)} \times \text{footcandles desired}}{0.5 \times K \times \text{light output of lamps in lumens}}$$

Here, K represents the portion of the light from the floodlight which actually falls on the lot. This value may range from 0.6 to 1.0. In the center of a large lot the higher value would apply, while on the edge of a small lot the lower value would be more applicable. In the example shown in Figure 1, a value of 0.8 was chosen as representative for the area to be lighted and the type of equipment illustrated.

In controlled beam type of floodlights (60° spread or under), such as the enclosed unit illustrated in Figure 2, the number of floodlights may readily be obtained by the following formula, which holds for all units of this type:

$$\text{Number of units} = \frac{\text{Area to be lighted (sq. ft.)} \times \text{footcandles desired}}{0.7 \times \text{beam lumens}}$$

The maintenance factor is 0.7, and the beam lumens represent the amount of light emitted in the beam of the projector. Beam lumens can quickly be obtained from the manufacturer's catalog for the particular unit under consideration.

Floodlights should be located so that glare is minimized. This can be accomplished by using mounting heights of the order of 25-35 feet, and by aiming the floodlights across the lot.

Where it is necessary to direct floodlights toward the entrance, they should be aimed downward sufficiently to keep the brightest part of the beam below the driver's eyes.

Several designs for lighted entrances and directional signs are suggested in Figure 3. Fluorescent lamps are particularly applicable because of their shape and high light output. Their availability in color makes possible pleasing signs that create an air of distinction and attract favorable attention to the name of the theatre. Projector lamps can be incorporated in the sign to supply the higher levels of ground illumination required at these points. In all of these suggestions the projector lamps are embodied as an integral part of the sign. This minimizes any reduction of light output of the fluorescent lamps during extremely cold weather conditions.

PARKING LOT PAVING MATERIALS

Describing various reliable methods of finishing the lot according to local conditions and budget

By SIDNEY MAYER
as told to
F. LANGDON MORGAN

FOR THOSE contemplating the construction of a parking lot, it is well to bear in mind that a good foundation carefully laid, though of low priced materials, can later be built up to a permanent investment.

PREPARED BASE

The first step in the construction of a parking lot is a base on bottom layer of cinders, local gravel or crushed stone spread about five inches thick and rolled with a power roller. The cost of this runs from 35c. to 50c. per square yard.

TOP TREATMENTS

Three methods of light top treatments can be used following the initial step—namely, road oil applied ½ to ¾ gallon per square yard, spread hot at 200° or more by a pressure distributor; a topping of cut back asphalt; or emulsified asphalt.

Cut back asphalt is mixed with naphtha, kerosene or fuel oil, which thins it out and makes it easier to apply, thereby cutting cost of labor. This is applied hot the same as the road oil.

Emulsified asphalt can be applied cold with ordinary pouring cans, the liquid spreading together smoothly on its own accord and covering the area automatically. It is available cold in barrels.

With the above three methods the area should be covered lightly with applications of coarse torpedo sand, pea gravel or stone chips, at the rate of 10 pounds per square yard. Costs of these top treatments will vary according to different sections of the country, but will run approximatly 5½c. per square yard (including labor, materials and cover coat) on the road oil; and the cut back asphalt; to 6½c. per square yard for the emulsified asphalt; these prices to be added to the original cost of the base.

PERMANENT DRESSING

The next step toward making a more permanent job of the previously described construction may be accomplished by one of two different methods.

The penetration method consists in laying 1½ inches of graded stone on top of any of the before mentioned completed jobs, bound and penetrated by the use of a bituminous cement, such as emulsified asphalt, paving asphalt or tarvia, made in two or three applications, keyed with stone chips, and finished with pea gravel or sand. Construction of the penetration method is as follows:

1. Spread crushed stone or broken gravel 1½ inches thick and roll.
2. Apply bituminous cement at the rate of one gallon per square yard.
3. Spread keystone chips, ¾-¼ inch at rate of 20 pounds per square yard and roll.
4. Make second application of bituminous cement at rate of ½ gallon per square yard.
5. Apply cover aggregate (pea gravel or chips) and roll.

This is a low priced method of penetration surfacing, applicable at an average cost of 40c to 65c. per square yard; according to local conditions.

A costlier but neater surface can be obtained by the application of a factory-mixed topping on the prepared base described in the beginning of this article. This consists of an aggregate prepared and coated in an asphalt plant, a mixture comparable to that used by various States and municipalities for highway and street paving. This material may be purchased by the ton from local asphalt plants or paving material distributors. Native rock asphalts may be obtained in certain sections, such as Kentucky rock asphalt, Alabama rock asphalt, and others. The construction method used consists in applying a 1½ inch loose mixture carefully raked to grade and rolled with a power roller. The cost of this method runs from 70c. up per square yard, including materials and labor. The advantage of this method is that it is easier to lay and can be done in sections, thereby not tying up the lot, and it is dustless, enabling the use of painted marking for lanes.

COMBINATION METHOD

Where the cost is too high to pave the entire lot, a combination method can be used, with applications of asphalt for the entrance surfaces and aisles, which bear the brunt of traffic; and with the car storage space done in treated cinders or crushed stone. Where a lot would ordinarily cost $3,000 to pave completely, this combination method can be accomplished for approximately one-third that amount.

[Mr. Mayer is the general manager of the Rock-Road Construction Company of Chicago, which concern has constructed parking lots in many sections of the United States, for theatres as well as other enterprises.]

Parking Lot Problems—

The material on parking lot planning and construction in this issue offers guidance adapted to most local situations; concerning special problems that may arise, Better Theatres will be glad to submit suggestions for their solution. Conditions should be fully described, and the questions be specific rather than general.

By CHARLES C. BURTON

IN ORDER to facilitate the handling of parking area construction, and to achieve standards that should hold substantially for any section of the country, I have developed a general method, the specifications of which are detailed in the paving contract. Elsewhere in this issue (Pages 16, 17 and 18), in connection with parling lot layouts, I have dealt with general provisions and considerations. Following are the major specifications I use for paving.

Initially, of course, the turf must be graded into a level, sound foundation, with all weak spots eliminated and any foreign materials removed, and also with provisions for thorough drainage.

BASE COURSE

For the base course, the aggregate consists of crushed limestone, or trap rock, granite, gravel, or blast furnace slag, free from elongated pieces and soft stone or clay. This course is 6 inches thick when rolled down so that it is compact.

The stone is spread on the foundation to a loose depth of 8 inches, with care taken to maintain uniform grading and prevent segregating similar sizes of fragments. The fine material used as filler is either slag or limestone screenings, graded from ¼-inch to dust. After the aggregate has been rolled, the fine dust filler is spread uniformly, not less than 130 pounds to the square yard, over the rolled aggregate, which is again rolled. During this latter rolling, spaces in the aggregate should be filled with the dust filler, and at the same time the whole course should be thoroughly wetted (about 50 gallons of water per ton of stone spread), with the water applied just in front of the roller.

While still wet, the aggregate is treated with asphaltic emulsion. About three-tenths of a gallon should be used per square yard, after which, before the binder has set, clean, coarse sand is spread, about 12 pounds of it to the square yard.

SURFACING

After the sand has been spread, another layer of aggregate is added and uniformly graded, being laid to a depth so that when rolled compact it will not be less than 2 inches thick. This, too, should be watered while being rolled. While this base is still wet, asphaltic emulsion is again applied, this time using ¾-gallon per square yard, and before it has tme to set it is covered with stone or slag chips (1½ to ¾-inch), laid smoothly and filling all interstices. This layer is then rolled thoroughly, with cross-rolling beginning at the edges and finishing at the crown of the pavement.

It is preferable to open the lot now to traffic for three or four days; the traffic will further pack down the pavement as it exists at this stage, revealing any soft or weak spots that need filling in.

The final surfacing consists in applying asphalt emulsion, or its equivalent. Before this is done, however, the pavement should be swept clean. About six-tenths of a gallon of the emulsion is used per square yard in this application, and it is immediately covered, as before, but now with stone almost entirely of sizes no smaller than ⅝-inch. This layer is rolled compact and another application of asphalt emulsion is made, now using about four-tenths of a gallon to the square yard, and this layer is immediately covered with sand—about 7 pounds per square yard. This covering should then be broomed and rolled

The lot is now ready for traffic. After ten or fifteen days, however, the surface should again be broomed and all excess sand and other loose material be removed. If suitable watering facilities are available, it is a good idea to flush the pavement.

For surfacing I have preferably used "Colas," a prepared material which is mixed with water and applied cold. In using "Colas" there are some variations in the surfacing procedure described above. The 2-inch wearing surface is constructed of an intimate mixture of coarse aggregate, fine aggregate and emulsified asphalt mixed in a concrete mixer or similar device. This aggregate may be made of the same materials named for the base course, or it may be of gravel to which 30% of crushed limestone, trap rock or slag of proper size has been added.

Before the binder course is laid, pure "Colas" is applied as a tack coat, using from two-tenths to three-tenths of a gallon per square yard, and allowed to cure.

The binder mixture should be dumped outside areas on which it is to be spread, and shoveled on to these areas, unless approved mechanical boxes are used for spreading. The mixture is raked, leveled off and smoothed out, then rolled compact, after which it should be cross-rolled. When it is set, the lot can be opened to traffic. This binder course requires at least 150 pounds of the mix per square yard.

After traffic has effected further packing, a top mix of the "Colas" is laid to a depth of about 1 inch. This mix should be hand-raked and cross-rolled so that it is thoroughly compact. After it is cured (about 24 hours), this layer is scaled with pure "Colas," using ¼-gallon per square yard, and after this has set, the lot is opened to traffic.

A period of from six to eight days is sufficient for this surface to be used before it is broomed clean.

Tuning Up the Refrigeration Plant for Last Half of Season

• Offering midseason suggestions for making sure that the air-conditioning system is in condition for trouble-free operation during remaining warm months

By CARL F. BOESTER

CARL F. BOESTER

NOW THAT many of the refrigeration plants in theatre air conditioning systems around the country have been operating for a while this season, there are undoubtedly some which have developed operating difficulties. The following suggestions are made with a thought of correcting them.

It must be remembered that the compressor of a refrigeration system gets more use and abuse in one season's operation than does the engine of an automobile in several years of use. It is only natural, then, that this equipment should be given maintenance consideration at least equal to that given an automobile. For example, it should have its valves cleaned and depending on the type, the valves should be replaced or relapped or reground, as the case may be; for with worn valves your compressor bypasses a certain amount of hot refrigerant gas, and in so doing seriously heats up the compressor, which in turn breaks down the lubricating oil and causes the formation of carbon, to say nothing of wear on the piston rings and piston walls as a result of poor lubrication from broken down lubricating oil. The result is that your compressor does not have the zip and capacity it had.

COMPRESSOR

We recommend that you have a service mechanic carefully check off the suction and discharge valves of your compressor. And while he has the compressor down it wouldn't hurt to have him examine the piston rings to see that refrigerant gas is not by-passed to the crankcase of the compressor during the upstroke of the pistons. Also, it would be a good time to examine the seal on the crankshaft of the compressor to make sure that it is perfectly smooth and well lapped, therefore in a tight position at all times, so that no refrigerant gas is lost from the system at this point.

With the development of the newer types of lubricating oils for compressors, it is quite safe now to operate compressors at a higher speed, and if you thoroughly wash out the compressor crankcase and all parts with carbon tetrachloride and replace it with the newer lubricating oil, you can speed up the compressor if the capacity of the system is not quite adequate. There are definite limitations, however, on the speed-up, and your service man should be consulted in this regard. The limiting factor is the capacity of the valves of your compressor to handle the volume of gas under the speeded-up conditions.

You will have to have your service man or electrician check to make sure that your motor isn't overloaded if you do speed up.

You must create and maintain an atmosphere in your theatre that is comfortable and healthful; otherwise you are bound to lose patrons. Objectionable odors . . . drafts . . . improper humidity and temperature—these are the bugaboos of any man's box office.

GENERAL ELECTRIC

Or, for example, if you have a 10-horsepower motor you could trade it in for one of 15-horsepower capacity. A reconditioned used 15-horsepower motor should certainly work pretty well if you can't afford a new one.

SYSTEM MOISTURE

If you are having some difficulty with moisture in your system, we would suggest the installation of a dryer containing Silica Gel as the drying agent (particularly if Freon is the refrigerant) for the absorbtion of any moisture that may be in the refrigerant. If dryers are used in the liquid line, they should very definitely be left in the line not more than two or three days, for they offer considerable resistance to the flow of refrigerant and can cut down on the capacity of the system. Further than that, the small particles of the drying agent can clog your strainers or expansion valves if left in the line too long.

The best place to quickly get moisture out of a system that has acquired moisture between the expansion valve and the suction inlet of the compressor, is to put a very large dryer charged with Silica Gel in the suction line. These dryers can be used over and over again by simply removing the Silica Gel drying agent from the shell of the tube and heating it up to 350° or 400° on a stove and immediately replacing it into the dryer while it is still hot, which makes sure that it doesn't absorb additional moisture from the air while cooling down, something it can very easily do.

VALVE CONDITIONS

For the benefit of those who have been complaining about their compressors being overloaded in hot weather, or their safety controls shutting them down, there has been recently placed on the market several good control valves known as hold-back valves, which are nothing more than pressure regulating valves that prevent more refrigerant vapor from getting to the compresor than the compressor can handle at the speed at which it is operating and for the horsepower of the motor. These are a very worthwhile investment, for on a hot day air blowing over the cooling coil vaporizes the refrigerant faster than the compresor can pump it out of the coil, causing overloading of the compressor.

If you are experiencing any trouble with expansion valves, we think one of the best investments you could possibly make would be the use of the new multi-outlet type of valves, which should forever correct your difficulty. We discussed such valves in these columns recently ["New in Equipment," May 31st issue]. We would also particularly urge that regardless of what type of expansion valve is used, the insert type of remote bulb be employed and so ordered when getting a new expansion valve, for this gives you far closer control than you can otherwise obtain, therefore much higher efficiency in the performance of your system. It prevents the "starving" and also the overloading of your coil, by metering the refrigerant under the varying load conditions that are imposed on the cooling coil.

Don't overlook simple things like the amount of dirt that may be on the filters ahead of your cooling coil if you feel that you are not getting the capacity you require. If of the throw-away type, the filters should be replaced, if of the cleanable type, they should be cleaned.

When was the last time you oiled the motor that operates the blower discharging air to your theatre? This should be done once a month.

CONTROL EFFICIENCY

If you are experiencing any difficulties with controls, a service man experienced in taking care of such devices should be called on at once to remedy the trouble, for there is nothing that will save you a greater amount of money than the efficient operation of controls. They were put there for the one purpose of regulating the amount of refrigerating effect, and if you have them rendered inoperative, or incapable of operating according to requirements by blocking them open or closed with a piece of wood, you are certainly taking money rapidly out of your own pocket. By using manual operation you certainly cannot have low operating costs. Controls were put there not to make it easy on you (which, of course, they do), but primarily to save you money in operating costs.

PRESSURE RELIEF VALVE

One of the most important things to do every year is to make sure that your refrigeration service engineer or maintenance man checks your pressure relief valve to see that it is not corroded and that it releases at the pressure for which it is set to release. It may be removed from the system while the system is pumped down and checked for pressure release with air pressure or CO_2 gas. If you ever had a fire in your theatre and your pressure relief valve didn't function and some portion of your refrigeration system, piping or otherwise, gave way, a deadly gas would be released as a result of the Freon coming in contact with an open flame. All pressure relief valves, regardless of the refrigerant, should be vented to the outside of the building, and if yours isn't have it made so before the insurance inspector makes you do so.

Gauges are an important part of your refrigeration plant; they are there for the purpose of indicating whether or not your system is operating up to par. It is well to have your service man check these occasionally to make sure that they are not corroded and thereby not registering properly, or that they are not stopped up with dirt.

Some States require that leak alarms be a part of refrigeration systems; these operate when the refrigerant charge gets below a predetermined amount. Be sure that this equipment is in working order.

VALUE OF SIGHT GLASS

One of the handiest little gadgets to have in any refrigeration system is a sight glass. A lot of refrigeration service men and installation mechanics, and particularly refrigeration contractors, do not like to use them because, if improperly installed, they may be just another source of refrigerant gas loss; however, the newer types now available are more or less leakproof, and by installing them in your liquid refrigerant line (if the latter is too large, install them in the liquid line ahead of the expansion valve) you will be able to determine whether or not you have liquid at all times going to your expansion valves, because if you have a mixture of refrigerant gas as well as liquid refrigerant, you are definitely not getting all the capacity out of your equipment that you should.

If you see gas bubbles passing through the sight glass, it means that you have too small a refrigerant charge, or that there is some restriction in the liquid line, such as a dirty strainer. An obstruction causes a pressure drop, thereby an expansion of part of your liquid refrigerant into gas. And if a hand shut off valve is not wide open, expansion is caused. Sometimes too long or two small a refrigerant line will cause the same pressure drop with the resulting expansion of the gas, which materially cuts down on the capacity of your system. A sight glass will always indicate when and if there is a drop and give you the opportunity to correct it.

Any time there is any refrigerant gas passing through the expansion valve, it displaces the amount of liquid refrigerant being handled through this valve, which impairs the capacity of your system. Such refrigerant gas also passes through the expansion valve orifice at tremendously excessive velocities, which tend to erode and eat away the seat of the expansion valve, which renders this control inoperative.

VALVE PACKING; STRAINERS

Don't fail, in the usual course of maintenance, to check the packing of the various valves of your refrigeration system, because after they have been opened and closed a few times the packing becomes loose and regfrigerant gas leaks out at these points. Frequently tightening up the packing gland nut will save money in lost refrigerant.

It is kind of silly to have to mention that strainers in refrigerant lines should be cleaned at least twice a year, but some people think they are put there for ornaments rather than for utility, and we must mention that these devices are put in the system to catch dirt and must be clean!

Some times vibration can work pipe joints loose, so it is not a bad idea to occasionally go over the pipe joints of your refrigeration system with leak detectors. If you don't have a leak detector yourself, make up a good mixture of soap suds and go over the various joints with these suds, brushing it on, and you will be able to detect any leaks. A thin film of heavy oil around such joints likewise will show up bubbles if there are any leaks. Be sure to wipe the oil or soap suds off after you get through.

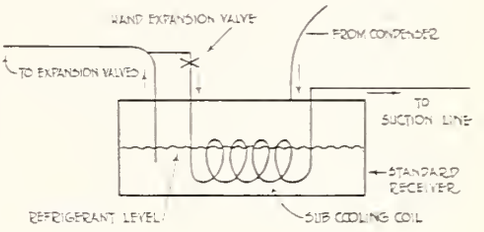
ADDING UNIT COOLER

Some of the older equipment using water for condensing, is probably beginning to give high operating costs because of the fact that the lime in the water is cutting down on the efficiency of the shell and tube condenser, or the coil and shell condenser. If you do not have a cleanable type condenser, one way to offset this loss of capacity is to use one of the various types of unit coolers in series with your condenser. A unit cooler is nothing more than a fin coil with a fan blowing over it, and they are most always used for cooling purposes in stores, cafes and the like that do not have central air conditioning equipment. These unit coolers are obtainable with proper headering so that they can be used as condensers. As air cooling condensers they materially add to the capacity of your system and have practically no operating or maintenance cost. As a matter of fact, the installation of such a unit makes big saving in your water costs.

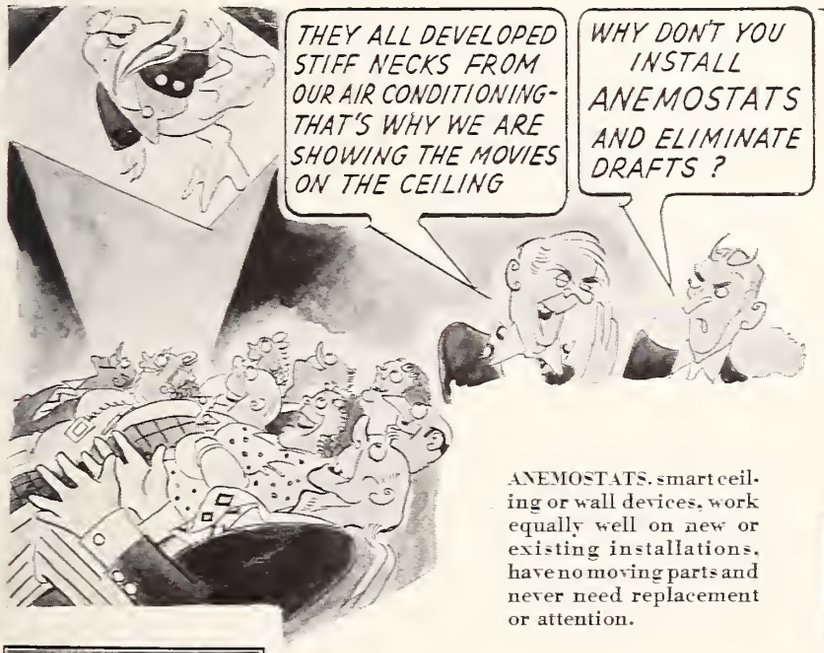
DEVELOPMENTS IN EQUIPMENT

Descriptive reports of air-conditioning, ventilating and heating products and comment on their application



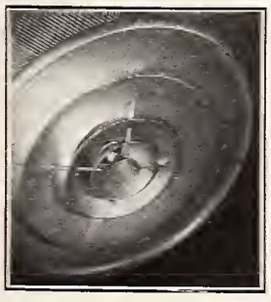
REFRIGERANT PUMPS

The Charles Lewis Pump Company of St. Louis, has recently announced the development of pumps for circulating various types of refrigerants. These materially increase the capacity of the shell and tube coolers, which in larger theatre installations are used for cooling the chilled water that is circulated to air washers. By circulating the refrigerant at high velocities through such shell and tube water coolers, greatly increased capacity can be secured at a nominal expense of power.



Another use for these pumps is in the case where the design engineer made a mistake and selected too small a liquid refrigerant line, which materially affects capacity. By installing these pumps and forcing the liquid refrigerant through the undersized lines, much of this difficulty can be overcome. As a matter of fact, in the early days of theatre installations there were no reliable data as to what size refrigerant lines should be, and many of the theatre systems have undersized lines.

REFRIGERANT SUB-COOLER



If you have an enterprising service man, he can make up a refrigerant sub-cooler according to the illustration here shown. This device is nothing more than a separate little receiver in which a reasonable amount of copper coil is placed. By expanding a small portion of refrigerant gas through this coil, the remaining liquid refrigerant going to the cooling coil is cooled sufficiently to help materially in increasing the capacity of the liquid lines. As shown, a hand expansion valve is used to control the amount of sub-cooling. —C. F. B.

. . . A DEPARTMENT DEVOTED TO CANDY AND POPCORN SALES AND VENDING OF ALL KINDS FOR EXTRA THEATRE INCOME

A Simplified Method of Keeping Vending Accounts

• Presenting a form covering sales and inventory of candy and miscellaneous merchandise, and popcorn, providing a convenient record for the bookkeeping needs of the average theatre

THE VENDING of candy, popcorn and other confections and refreshments in the theatre adds yet another operation to keep track enough in the exhibitor's bookkeeping system. While really a supplementary department of theatre operation, confectionary vending is a revenue-producing function; at the same time, it departs from regular functions sufficiently to introduce bookkeeping factors not covered in an accounting system normally set up. It is a separate classification in the theatre bookkeeping system, but of course should be ultimately integrated with it in order to have the books give a complete and accurate picture of operations.

In developing a bookkeeping method for vending operations, one is of course confronted with the wide divergence in the requirements of management, extending from a circuit of several hundred theatres to a single property. Circuits develop their own methods, each according to its own peculiar requirements. The method represented in the form on the opposite page is intended as a simplified system adapted to the needs of individual theatres. In some instances, however, it will serve groups of theatres, particularly small ones.

The main object in the development of the form presented has been to provide a means of keeping a complete record with the greatest convenience. The form is divided into two main classifications—one for candy, gum and similar packaged goods that may be dispensed by either an attendant or a machine; the other for popcorn, which is always dispensed by an attendant, may involve more than one price, and has an inventory covering a number of items. In either case, the function of each column is explained on the form, including transference of the figure (note asterisk) for total popcorn sales to the main body of the form to be added to the total sales of other kinds of merchandise.

PROVING OF TOTALS

At the bottom of the sheet is a section entitled "Reconciliation." This is very important. The proof total should exactly equal the grand total in Column G. At the end of some period (a number of weeks) it will be necessary to reconcile all net cash collected with the total sales because of the shortages or overages which will occasionally occur, and also to account for any slugs that may have been introduced into machines.

Incidentally, the Machine Number column provides for keeping track of the business done by an automatic vending machine, and in theatres having more than one machine, particularly to sell the same kind of merchandise, this identification on the books will show the good and the poor revenue-producers. If they are of different location in the theatre, one might change the location of a poor producer to see if this is not the cause of the deficiency; also, if the machines are of different designs, one may thus be advised to consider replacement, especially if the poor producer is an old model.

The form as printed on the opposite page is of a size comparable to that of similar forms used for reports and bookkeeping records—that is, it makes a sheet of convenient dimensions. It may be enlarged somewhat, however, particularly if space is desired for more items than have been provided for in the printed form. In reproducing the form a sufficient number of spaces could be added by cutting the form

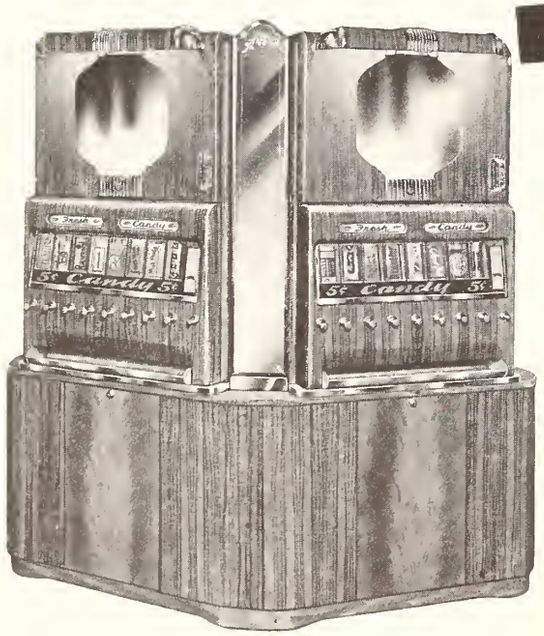
Of course, it would be entirely feasible, in situations to which such a simplified system is applicable, to use more than one sheet for a single week's report, carrying the totals through, and recording the final total and effecting the reconciliation on the last sheet, and stapling the sheets together.

REPRODUCING FOR USE

Reproduction of the form has been referred to. This may be conveniently and inexpensively accomplished by either the photographic-offset method, or that of photo-engraving. The former is likely to be the cheaper; however, it is not available in every city, and probably not at all in small towns. If this method is used, one should make sure that the reproduction is on paper that will take ink without blurring.

The photo-engraving method is that which newspapers employ for reproducing line drawings. Weekly papers and printing job plants in the smallest towns do not always have facilities for making photo-engravings, but they usually have such a service situated in a nearby city and can readily supply engravings to their customers. To set the headings and designations in type, and to put it together with rules according to the form incurs a substantial charge, and the result is not likely to be as good as the form here printed. By having a photo-engraving made, it is necessary only to turn it over to a printer for the printing of as many sheets as desired, and the composition charge is eliminated. The photo-engraving remains the property of the exhibitor for reuse when an additional order of blanks is needed.



In keeping continuous and accurate track of vending operations, a carefully made inventory record must be maintained. For inventory of candy and other items except popcorn, Column A provides for recording of the last inventory (brought forward from the sheet covering the previous week); Column B is for entry of purchases made during the week; and Column D records the inventory at the end of the week covered by the current sheet. In Column B record only actual receipt of merchandise, not orders which have not yet been delivered.

For keeping track of popcorn stocks, space is provided at the bottom of the sheet, with columns accommodating inventory on boxes, salt and seasoning as well as corn (use of which is in accordance with the method of ordering). The popcorn sales record is separate from the inventory, the total sales figure going into Column G, as indicated in the form.

Two interesting "refreshment booth" arrangements, combining candy display with floor-model Manley popcorn machines. The scheme above is in the Princess theatre, Milwaukee; that below, in the Linden Circle, Malco house in Memphis, Tenn.

Some suggestions—on responsibility—and on methods

By SAMUEL BRAVERMAN

I EXPECT that many an exhibitor, as he reads these lines, will have the thought pop into his head, "But not my theatre!" Yet it's an odds-on bet that his theatre will be as culpable as any. I get around among theatres constantly, and in the course of any such tour, which covers houses small and large, circuit and independent, I will run into conditions which would warrant the question, "Do you keep horses in here?"

SAMUEL BRAVERMAN

I recall a sorry adventure in such a theatre during a recent hot spill. The feature on the screen happened to be one which I had wanted to see, so I sat down in the auditorium to watch it. I was in my shirtsleeves, but soon began to perspire. Then I noted a couple of men fanning themselves with a newspaper. I became too uncomfortable to sit there longer, so went out into the foyer to get on with my business. I asked for the manager. He was not around. Yet this was 8 o'clock Saturday night!

Now a theatre, even a small one, represents a sizeable investment—on an average, $50,000, anyway. Why do we jeopardize such properties with managerial indifference? The pictures we present mean much, but not absolutely everything. You know, people can get their pleasure in many other places than theatres these days. By and large, the exhibitor has relatively little choice in the pictures he shows. There are only so many to choose from; but he can determine for himself, without limitation, what condition he will keep his theatre in. And the newest and fanciest of theatres cannot keep its public, at least to the extent of its full potentialities, if it does not have ventilation and a state of cleanliness which prevents odors, and the neatness which demonstrates responsible management eager to be a good host.

The person in immediate charge of operations, be he the owner or a manager, cannot afford to leave direction to subordinates in the majority of cases. He has got to be on the job during the important operating hours, seeing to it personally that operating policy and the tasks laid down by that policy are carried out. And reports from the staff are just that—reports from somebody else. To know whether there are odors, and to learn where they come from, he must walk around in the theatre, put himself in the patron's place, observe by eye and nose what the patrons of his theatre encounter.

The staff is as neat as the management insists that it be. Serving the public, with many hundreds of people coming into it daily (we hope), a theatre does not remain clean and neat long after the daily maintenance routine has been completed, therefore the staff cannot be allowed to think that, once the routine job is over, there is nothing more to do about it until after the last performance. The staff should have a sense of neatness, and this is best imparted to it by a boss who has it himself, and who they know is keeping a wary eye out for presence of odors, for pieces of paper and matches on the carpet, for sand urns dirty-looking with a heap of cigarette stubs, for sloppy toilet rooms, etc., etc.

Neatness covers a lot of the effects of use and time; cleanliness is a fundamental rule of showmanship.

Care of Brooms

RECENTLY an inquiry came in to the effect that the writer was having trouble finding a broom that stood up (this difficulty has in fact been implied in a number of inquiries on cleaning materials).

It should be borne in mind, when purchasing a corn broom, that there are cheap brooms more or less classified as being of corn, but actually are of other types, such as straw and rush. These latter types may be suitable for housework, but not for the heavy duty service of a theatre.

And even a genuine corn broom of good quality will not stand up if it is not taken care of. It should not be kept in a warm, dry atmosphere, which saps all the moisture out of it, making it brittle so that the tufts break off.

It is also advisable to put a band or stocking around the shoulder of the broom to keep it from spreading too much. The better brooms, of course, have five or six sews, or wire bands.

It is a good idea to dip the broom once or twice a week in water, for five minutes each time. After doing this, allow the broom to remain unused overnight to give it new life and flexibility.

Exterminating Mice

THE FOLLOWING is substantially the reply given in recent months to inquiries from exhibitors having trouble with either mice or rats. The last two came in within a few days of each other, so perhaps the suggestions given in our answers will prove of general interest.

There are a number of more or less effective methods of exterminating rats and mice, including traps and rat-pads; but we think a method best adapted to the situation is so-called rat- or mouse-seed (it is available under various trade names and consists in certain grains like canary seed treated with a poison.)

Sprinkle this seed along the walls throughout the theatre, including backstage, basement, storage rooms, etc. Two or three pounds should be enough in average cases. Both rats and mice are fond of this food; about a half-hour after eating, they get a burning sensation in the stomach and seek water, and of course the water places of rats and mice are usually around sewers, and experience shows that the pests die in such places rather than in or around the theatre. Keep this poisoned seed distributed in the theatre for a week or two, in which time, if the conditions are not too extraordinary, the nuisance should be well in hand.

It is of course important to determine what is bringing in the pests. They go where there is food; therefore, the theatre must be kept clean, with all candy, popcorn, crumbs from any workmen's lunches, etc., thoroughly removed every day. It also frequently happens that there is a grocery store, butcher shop or meat packer near by; if so, one must be vigilant, while it would be well to engage the co-operation of those who operate the food establishment.

Red squill is effective, but is relatively costly; moreover, it does not cause the rodents to seek air or water. Trapping can always be resorted to, but rats have been known to escape from traps, while for either mice or rats trapping in a building like a theatre makes quite a chore of the matter.

[Samuel Braverman, formerly a manager of theatres for both circuit and independent operators, now specializes in maintenance supplies for theatres and similar buildings.]

Due to unforeseen conditions calling Ben Schlanger away from his office for an extended period, the second article of his series on theatre layout and auditorium forms, scheduled for this issue, has had to be postponed because of inability to complete necessary drawings.

A LINE O' LAW OR TWO

Basic Rules of Contract

By RUDOLPH ALLEN
Member New York Bar

HOW often in daily business contact does one hear the expression, "It's a deal." This, of course, means that two persons have arrived at a definite understanding in relation to some business matter. Legally, however, the significance of the words, "It's a deal," carries with it the definite implication that a valid and binding contract had been arrived at.

It is as simple as all that—and yet no field of law is more confused and difficult than the one pertaining to the obligations of contracts. As a matter of fact, many lawyers otherwise relatively unlearned in the law, have established for themselves successful reputations because of their ability to seek out loopholes in supposedly strong contracts in order to save their clients from inordinate losses.

There are two kinds of contracts, oral and written. Both are binding in every respect, except that so far as oral contracts are concerned, the law has placed certain restrictions against them. Thus, for example, an agreement to sell land must be in writing. There are many more deterrents to the efficacy of oral contracts too numerous to mention here. Suffice it to say that the most obvious objection to an oral agreement is that it is most difficult of proof, since it is one man's word against another, with no tangible evidence to substantiate the spoken word.

Experience has proved that the most difficult contracts to break are the simple ones, providing, of course, that all the necessary requisites of a valid and binding contract are present. In the first place, a workable agreement must indicate a genuine meeting of the minds of the parties. The subject matter must be clearly defined, and the details of the execution of the agreement must be set forth with clarity.

Where an agreement omits the element of time, the law always presumes that a reasonable time was intended. The parties, however, may make time the essence of a contract by making a specific provision in that direction.

An agreement to be accepted as a contract must conform to certain very simple and ordinary rules. There must be what the law calls (a) an offer and (b) an acceptance. This so-called offer and acceptance may be accomplished by correspondence, by the commission of an overt act, orally, through an advertising medium, a telephone conversation, and many other ways.

There must be embodied in the agreement some definite consideration for the execution of a promise by one person for a promise by another. Thus, if "A" agrees to do something for "B", but "B" does nothing for "A", there is no consideration, therefore no contract. Most contracts start out by stating, "In consideration of $1.00 and other valuable considerations." These words have the effect of establishing a consideration on its face.

There are many forms of consideration accepted in law other than money considerations. For example, forbearance to sue or to contest a Will, or to foreclose a mortgage are accepted as valuable considerations to sustain a contract.

There is, of course, the absolute and necessary requisite that a contract, to be binding, must be entered into without threats or force or undue influence, and without misrepresentation or fraud, and a contract cannot be against public policy. When agreements are made under circumstances which prevent a true meeting of the minds, the law will set them aside and treat them as a nullity.

Although contracts as above indicated are voidable, the injured party may ratify the agreement by acting under the contract after it has been made. In such cases, the contract will be considered valid even though in its inception it may have been treated as an illegal agreement.

In conclusion, let it be said that in the absence of fraud or mistake, a contract, however burdensome in execution, must govern. The law will not excuse a party because he did not foresee a hardship, or that the carrying out of an agreement will cause him to sustain severe losses. It is not the function of the courts to make new agreements for parties, but to enforce contracts according to their true intent and meaning.

While Better Theatres cannot perform the service of legal counsel, inquiries from readers are invited and will be answered as fully as permissible.

SELECTING LAMPS

ADVANCES MADE in recent years in lighting devices give us a large variety of lamps to choose from in the lighting of a motion picture theatre. As a matter of fact, there are so many different types of lamps available now that there is likely to be a certain amount of confusion in the minds of exhibitors as to which types to use for the various requirements. The proper selection of the type of lamp should be made based on:

1. Efficiency of the lamp (power consumption in relation to lumen output).
2. The color characteristic of the light source.
3. The shape and design of the lamp in regard to fitting into the decorative scheme.

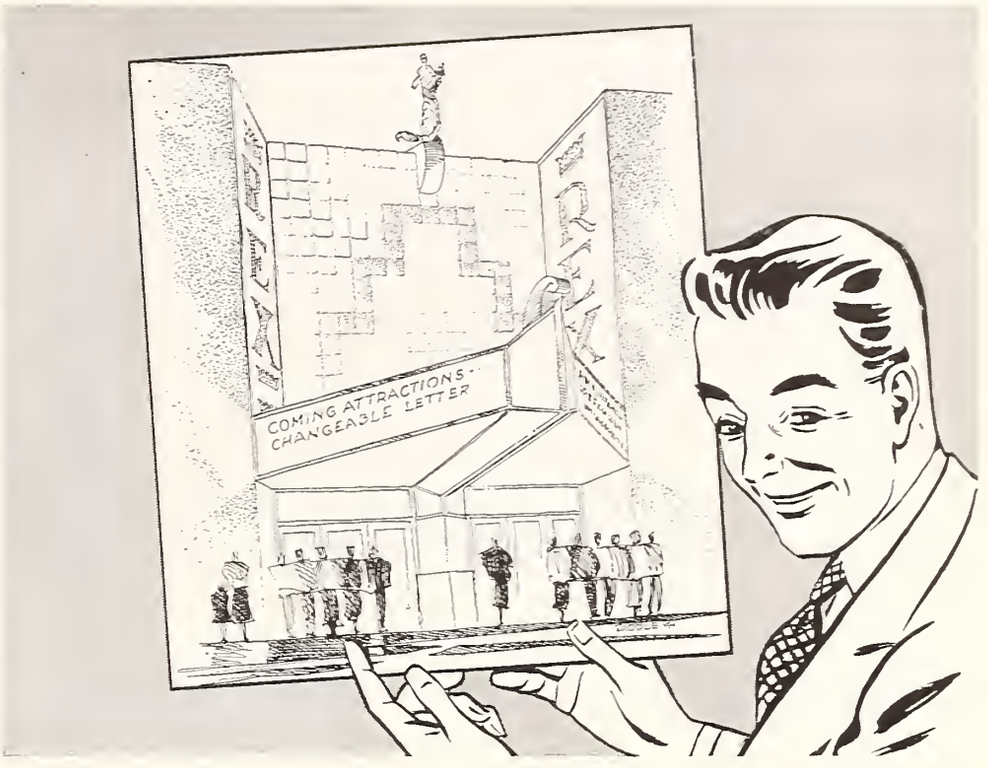
The most efficient lamp is not necessarily the most desirable lamp in every case. For example, fluorescent lamps are highly efficient and exceptionally well adapted to use behind changeable letters and for concealed lighting where a high output is the major requirement. However, where general room lighting is required, and colored light is not wanted, this type creates a cold feeling.

Combining Lamp Types



There have been successful installations, however, where the fluorescent lamps are used in combination with incandescent lamps to produce a certain color effect. Such combinations are desirable for the lighting of lobbies and foyers.

The filament tube lamp, an incandescent light source, shaped similarly to the fluorescent lamp, can be suitably adapted to a combination with fluorescent lighting due to the similarity of shape.

The lumiline lamp is an incandescent light source of narrow diameter and therefore is well adapted to limited space.

Color Illumination

All of the lamps which are specially coated for giving colored lights are highly inefficient due to the applied color coating. Where the effect of color is important, and the amount of actual light is not important, continuous neon tube lighting is efficient, but in this instance there is the disadvantage of not being able to put such lighting on a dimmer system. [This has been done; however, the method employed has not been generally approved.—ED.] Where colored light is desirable on a dimmer system, the most efficient type of lighting consists of incandescent lamps designed as flood or spotlights with the reflectors incorporated in the lamps.

NOW — MAKE YOUR THEATRE Look Cool
WITH G-E MAZDA F LAMPS!

HERE'S a new easy way to make your theatre look cooler and more inviting during the hot summer months:

Try substituting G-E MAZDA F (fluorescent) Daylight lamps in your recessed poster panels, both outside and in the lobby.

For general illumination, use either daylight or white G-E MAZDA F lamps.

For decorative purposes, use colored G-E MAZDA F lamps, particularly green or blue.

Remember, too, that striking luminous color changes are possible in your attraction letter panels with a combination of filament and fluorescent lamps at an operating cost no higher than the lighting with filament lamps alone. Cool, efficient G-E MAZDA F lamps give more light per foot than other tubular sources practical for theatre use.

PLANNING SERVICE

¶ Better Theatres is glad to answer the questions of exhibitors theatre planning.

¶ Better Theatres' Service Department annually deals with hundreds of inquiries from readers regarding planning problems, equipment and furnishings, operating methods and finance, maintenance, etc.

¶ This is strictly a service to readers for which there is no charge. Architects, however, sometimes make inquiry, or submit plans for criticism, without naming the client; and, when the architect is not a subscriber, it is requested that his client be named.

¶ In order that questions may be dealt with effectively, they should be specific, and all conditions bearing upon them should be clearly given. Often a rough sketch, with dimensions plainly indicated, is of help.

¶ It is of course to be understood that this service is in no way intended to supplant that of a theatre architect. Better Theatres cannot supply working plans, design sketches, etc., which must be procured from a licensed architect.

¶ Although Better Theatres' Service Department has leading specialists regularly available for consultation when and as an inquiry may advise this, all inquiries are answered by this department and should be addressed to it, as follows:

Another under negotiation, construction not yet started, will be for white patrons. Any existing theatres taken over will be entirely reconditioned, announced Mr. Benjamin, who will continue his duties as vice president and manager of the Monogram exchange in Kansas City.

A novel method was used by JOHN H. HERSKER of the Hersker theatre, Hazleton, Pa., to advise his patrons that the house would be closed for several weeks for alterations. On what appeared to be a letterhead of the theatre, he addressed a letter to "Mr. and Mrs. Theatre Fan, Everywhere, U. S. A.," and told them of the closing and what was in store for them following modernization.

The Montrose theatre, formerly the Ideal, at Montrose, Pa., has been reopened following renovation, which included refinishing the interior and installation of new seats, screen and sound equipment and a new marquee. CLIFFORD FLYNN manages the theatre.

Making Sure of Smooth Stage Curtain Operation

WHEN ELECTRICAL control equipment and tracks for the stage or screen platform curtain are arranged for, the architect or exhibitor does not always give this apparatus the needed attention. Innumerable times the curtain control is either too big or too small for the job it is to do, or it is of the wrong type, or is installed improperly, with the result that assured smooth operation is impossible, for which the equipment itself is likely to be blamed.

The first thing to do is to check the kind of electric service available at or near the stage—that is, if it is 220-volt single- or three-phase, 60-cycle a. c.; 110-volt single-phase 60-cycle a. c.; or 120-volt d. c.

It is surprising how many times a control is ordered for a certain voltage, and when it is delivered to the job, there are no electrical facilities for proper hook-up, which means running a new feeder from perhaps the front of the building to take care of that particular type of control.

CONTROL SIZE AND SPEED

The height of the proscenium opening, and especially the width and fulness of the curtain, will determine the size of the control. The exact width of the proscenium opening should be given with the order, together with other pertinent facts to make sure of curtain operation speed on the stage; if special speed is desired, the control can be adjusted at the factory before shipment. It should never be adjusted on the job. The operating curtain speeds of standard controls can be had in 90, 115, 226 and 230 feet per minute. The horsepower ratings of these controls are ¼, ⅓ and ¾, which can be successfully hooked-up to 1 h. p., or 110-volt single-phase lines.

A factor to consider in the selection of a curtain control mechanism is whether or not it is capable of stopping the curtain prior to complete closing and reversing its direction from that point. This feature should be considered in the light of the theatre's policy and stage facilities; if stage performances are regularly or rather frequently presented, the ability to reverse the curtain without having it travel to complete closing might prove preferable in presenting certain kinds of acts, particularly when only a certain section of the stage is used. Some types provide for such flexibility, others do not.

TRACK INSTALLATION

When installing the curtain control, care should be taken that the tracks are rigidly fastened or hung from the ceiling to prevent end or side sway, otherwise there will be a strain on the lines and the tracks will be knocked out of alignment with the control sheave. When the operating line runs down at an angle to the pitch in the groove on the sheave there will be expensive wear on the wire strands, and in a short time they will wear through, necessitating a new wire cable.

The curtain track overhead should also be at least 10 inches away from the inside of the finished proscenium opening and extend at least 48 inches on each side of the opening for proper "bunching" of the curtain when it is opened.

CONTROL PLACEMENT

When determining the permanent location of the control, make sure it is away from any exit passage so as to eliminate the chance of accidental injury to inquisitive patrons, especially youngsters. The control should always be installed in a place least used by anyone, but it should have sufficient space around it for inspection or servicing. In any case, a substantial removable metal guard should be placed around the control, not only to prevent accidental contact, but also to prevent failure of the control mechanism should some object fall or be thrown carelessly upon it.

Before the control is permanently fastened to the floor, it should be perfectly lined up in relation to the track overhead—that is, the operating line should fit the pitch of the groove exactly. A little more time spent on assuring correct alignment will save trouble and headaches later on when the control is in operation. It is true that there are control installations where the operating lines run at different angles, through several pulleys to the main drive sheave, but they are the exception rather than the rule. In most cases these "tricky" hook-ups could be avoided by planning the curtain control scheme beforehand, for at best they are not as trouble-free and smooth in action as a straight up-and-down operating line installation.

FASTENING THE CONTROL

After the curtain control is lined up with the track, it should be securely fastened to the stage floor. With a wood floor care should be taken that a bolt is not driven in a joint or a loose or rotted board; with a concrete floor tightly fitted lead expansion shield should be used. Where the wood floor is in bad condition, through-bolts with wide washers should be used, with nuts to make the control immovable. In many cases where the curtain had a jerky motion in operation, and the operating lines needed taking up quite frequently, it was found that the entire control had worked loose from the floor due to faulty fastening. A good thing to do, (not that it is absolutely necessary, however) before fastening the control permanently in place is to slip a piece of ½-inch thick Celotex, about the size of the base of the control, between the floor and the iron base to dampen any vibration if some should develop.

One reason for installing the control on the stage floor with sufficient clear working space around it is that it can be quickly converted to hand-operation by slipping the operating line off the control sheave. In some installations, like small preview rooms, the curtain control is fastened directly to the track at one end, but an installation of this sort must be done by very competent men, otherwise complications are likely to arise. When the control is fastened directly to the track, extreme care must be taken that the tie lines are strong enough to carry the "dead" and "live" loads of the control and tracks. The weight alone of a curtain control for an average theatre installation is approximately from 175 to 220 pounds, depending on the type. With the control in this location, servicing and inspection problems arise, as well as possible emergency breakdowns and noise isolation. However, in extreme cases where, due to space limitations, the control must be installed directly into the tracks, it can be made to operate all right, but the exhibitor should be sure that the installation is in good hands.

Special problems are also encountered where a new curtain control is installed with old operating lines. The pitch in the groove of the main drive sheave is machined precisely to fit a particular type of line, and if the old line does not fit properly excessive wear will result, accompanied by slippage. All new curtain controls should have, and the latest types do have, positive limit switches and overload protection on them which give long life and dependability.

The curtain control should be checked at least twice a month, the electrical contacts cleaned carefully if dirty, and any loose parts tightened. Should any major repairs be required, however, they should be done by the factory that manufactured the control, rather than to trust the complicated machinery to inexperienced hands.

WIRING AND SWITCHES

One should be sure that the electric control wires are at least No. 12 braided rubber-covered wires so as to prevent voltage drop, since the control mechanism is very sensitive to voltage fluctuations. Many times the electrician will attempt to run No. 14 wires, not knowing (or caring to know!) the particular needs of the control.

It's the little things that add up to make an otherwise good installation a bad one. For example, on the electric feed line to the control, proper fusing should be employed, if not a separate switch, in order to give protection to the circuit feeding the control. It is a very bad policy to just plug in the feed to the control to any convenient electric outlet. In any case a cut-out switch should be installed near the control for making the electric circuit "dead" when working on the control, also for convenient operation of the control at the stage, instead of making it necessary to go to the projection room, which may be locked at the moment.

To enable the projectionist to put on a smooth show, a curtain control switch should be installed at each projector. The cost of an extra curtain control switch is very little, and nothing makes a performance or a theatre more crude and "amateurish" than tardy closing of the curtain.

¶ Flexible and Efficient Wiring of Rectifiers

THERE STILL seems to be quite a bit of confusion and difficulty in methods of wiring for the installation of rectifiers for supplying d. c. to suprex carbon arcs in motion picture projection. Actually, the wiring system and hookup is quite simple when one thoroughly appreciates the purpose of the rectifier and the particular needs of the motion picture projector and spotlight arcs.

In most cases these rectifiers are installed by a local electrician who is not familiar with the exacting requirements of this type of arc for projection service. Many times after the installation is completed it is found that the projector arcs are so connected that there are no provisions for switching in case an emergency should arise.

One main difficulty that comes up is trying to tiein a d. c. arc spotlight for use on the rectifier output in conjunction with the motion picture projector arcs. The copper-oxide or magnesium copper sulphide rectifiers are so designed that they can very easily supply direct current of the proper type to modern projector arcs, and 70-80 volts d. c. to spotlight arcs. The proper method of "hookup" is very important, however. No attempt is made here to discuss the performance or operating efficiency of these types of rectifiers—just the best methods of wiring the installation. As a point of information, the output ratings and sizes of these types of rectifiers are: A 50 ampere unit suitable for use with either the 6-7 mm., or the 6.5-8mm. suprex trim, and also a 100 ampere unit. The above units can be had in either the single or twin type, except the 100 ampere, which comes only in a single unit.

In the copper-oxide type, a 20-30 ampere unit, 50-55 volt d. c., can also be had for low-intensity lamphouses. Standard models of these rectifiers are designed for operation on 210-240 volt, 60 cycle, 3 phase a. c. supply; however, other a. c. voltage and frequencies in 2 or 3 phase can be supplied on special order. The two-phase rectifiers are made with a special transformer which changes the 2 phase to 3 phase. In this discussion only the most popular and widely used types will be covered; that is the single 50-ampere unit, and the twin 50-50 ampere unit. For the other types and sizes the wiring methods will be the same except that the wire, switch and fuse sizes will have to be increased according to how much the equipment is over the 50 ampere unit requirements outlined.

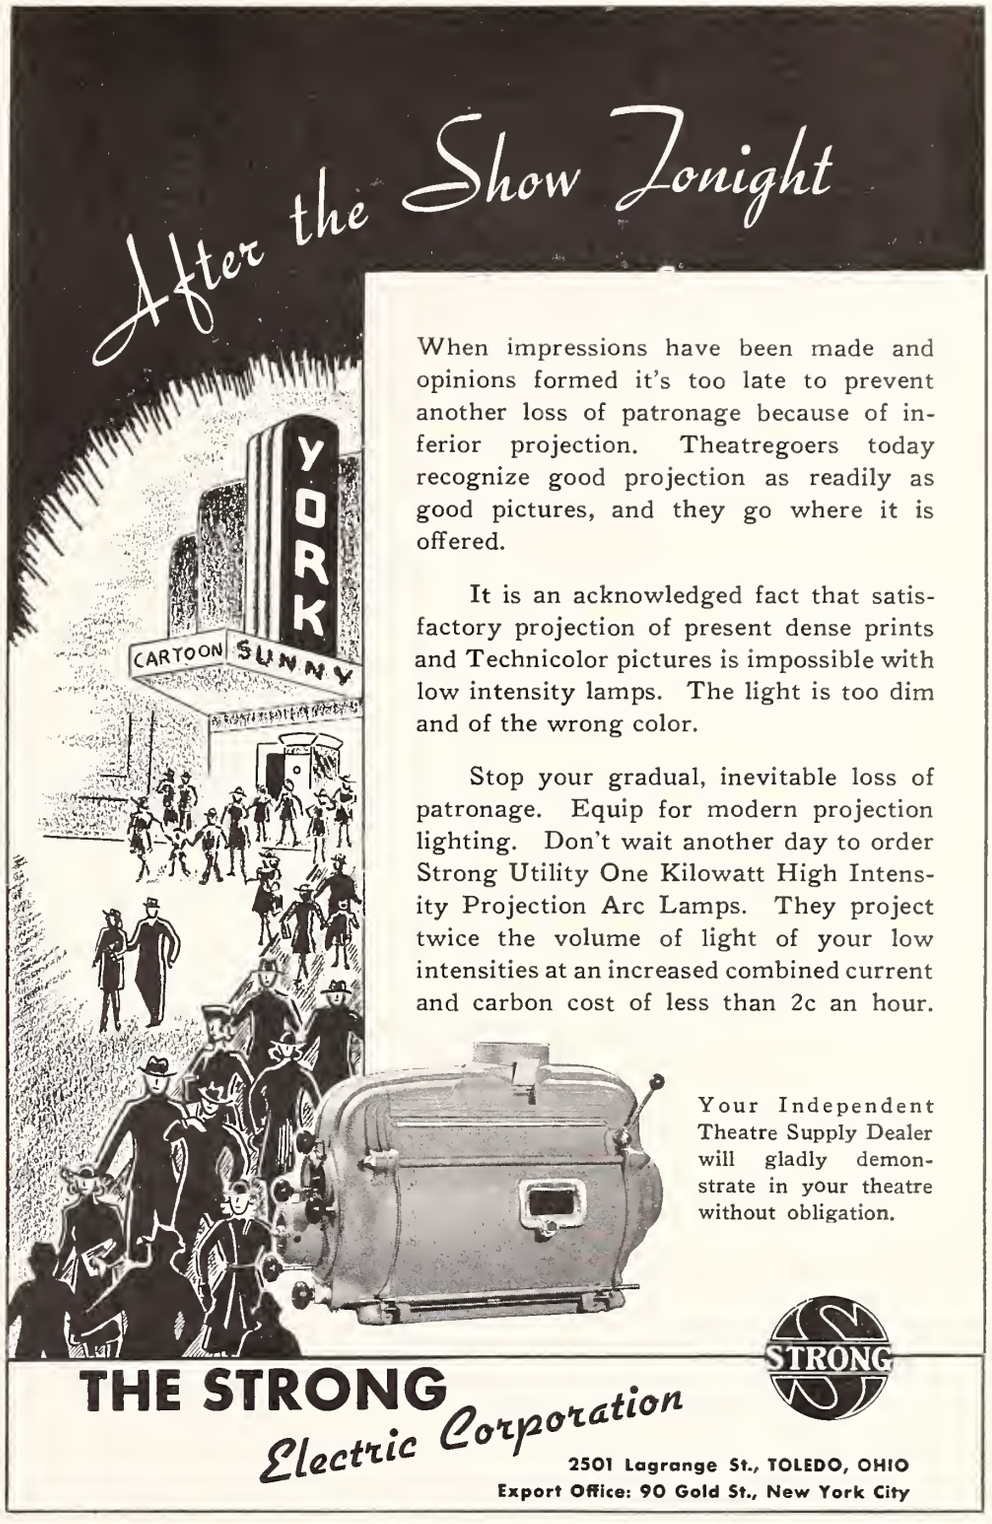
LOCATION OF RECTIFIERS

The rectifiers and spotlight ballast rheostat should be installed in a room adjacent to the projection room, rather than in the projection room proper, for better ventilation and more working space for the projectionist. It is essential, however, to install an efficient forced draft exhaust duct system directly over the rectifiers, using a fan for this purpose of at least 1,000 cubic feet per minute rating.

These rectifiers should never be installed in a poorly ventilated room as their efficiency will be considerably reduced and the useful life of the rectifying elements greatly affected. The rectifiers should be kept clear at all times, both on the bottom and top for intake and exhaust of air, and also as far as possible from the enclosing walk of the room. The front cover of the rectifier should never be removed while it is in operation, as the moving air will by-pass the elements and cause overheating.

The exhaust fan in the rectifier is factory-lubricated and should not be oiled, since drippings from the bearings can cause a short circuit in the elements.



CONTROL SWITCHES

A suitable 3 phase service, as well as a single phase line, should be run to the rectifiers, with assurance that the wires are heavy enough for the load of the rectifiers and an allowance made for the voltage drop in the service run. The 3 phase safety disconnect switch should be 3 pole, single throw, 60 ampere knife blade type, fused for 30 amperes only; if a larger fuse is used, a burn-out in the rectifier may result.

The single phase safety disconnect switch should be a 2 pole, single throw, 20 ampere knife blade type, fused for 10 amperes. This single phase line controls the rectifier by merely closing the safety switch, and opening or closing the single pole toggle switch at the projector. This in turn starts or stops the exhaust fan motor in the rectifier, and closes or opens the relays, automatically connecting or disconnecting the 3 phase line to the transformer. In case a rectifier is used so that the 3 phase circuit supplies current for the rectifying elements, the exhaust fan in the rectifier, and the remote control relay, care should be taken to observe if the fan is taking air into the rectifier and not exhausting air through the bottom. In other words, if air is drawn in at the top of the rectifier, the fan is running backwards and any pair of leads in the 3 phase circuit should be reversed. This condition happens quite frequently in a straight 3 phase supply circuit when the electrician is careless and reverses the phases.

GENERAL WIRING PLAN

The general scheme of wiring for a single rectifier unit should be to run from the 3 pole switch at least three No. 8 braided rubber covered wires, in rigid conduit, to an outlet box near the rectifier, and from this box, in flexible greenfield conduit, to the rectifier. In most rectifiers duplicate terminals will be found on both left and right sides of the terminal board so that connection for this 3 phase a. c. line may be made from whichever side the conduit is attached.

For the single phase line, two No. 12 braided rubber covered wires should be run in rigid conduit from the 2-pole cutout switch to an outlet box near the rectifier, and then in greenfield conduit to the connection in the rectifier.

However, one No. 12 BRC wire should be split at the rectifier, and the other run through in rigid conduit to a single pole, single throw toggle switch installed on the projector base. This toggle switch carries a load of about 95 watts. The knife switch that comes with the projector base should be closed and the handle reversed, so that the operation of the rectifier is entirely by the toggle switch. This insures that the rectifier is shut down when the lamp is not running, giving a saving in power.

From the d. c. side of the rectifier at least No. 4 BRC wires should be run in rigid conduit to the d. c. panel in the projection room, making sure that each wire is identified as to polarity—that is, plus or minus. The d. c. panel should be made up of one 4-pole double throw knife switch, 100 amperes; and two 2-pole double throw knife switches, 100 amperes; and one 2-pole single throw knife switch, 100 ampere, on the side of the 4-pole double throw switch, the two center jaws to have a jumper inserted for circuiting the output of the two rectifiers in series. This arrangement will give the necessary voltage for operating a spotlight, since the spot arc operates on about 55 volts after the 70 volt output of the two rectifiers in series is dropped through the ballast rheostat. In this d. c. panel proper fuse blocks and fuses should be installed if required by local ordinances.

To the lugs on the 4-pole knife blades, the two wires from one rectifier should be connected to the two upper blades, and the two wires from the other rectifier to the two lower blades of this switch. From the other side of the jaws—having no jumper—two wires should be run to the left of the projector arc cutout switches, and two wires to the right, interconnected so that by throwing the switches to the right or left either rectifier can feed the projector arcs. However, the 4-pole switch must be thrown to the proper side before current can flow to the projector arcs—that is, if thrown to the side without the jumper, the projector arcs will be fed; and if thrown to the side with the jumper, the spotlight arc only will be fed. With the above "hookup" the projector arcs will always have an arrangement for emergency feed from either rectifier, and the spotlight arc will have a proper and safe switching for trouble-free operation.

It must be remembered that whenever the spotlight only is operated, the two-toggle switches on the projector base must be thrown on so that the two rectifiers are in operation.

TWIN ARRANGEMENT

In the general wiring scheme for installing the two twin 50 ampere rectifiers, the hookup is about the same as for the two single 50-ampere rectifiers, except that from each twin rectifier four wires must be run to the d. c. panel. Also, the 4-pole switches have jumpers on both sides of the jaws—that is, a jumper on the two lower left jaws. With this twin rectifier hookup, the spot switch in the d. c. panel will be a 2-pole double throw, and the rectifier control toggle switches for spotlight operation will be a 2-pole single throw, which can be installed on or near the spotlight.

By using these wiring schemes, with perhaps slight modification, any rectifier installation should be simple and practical, and be a finished job that will pass strict electrical inspection.

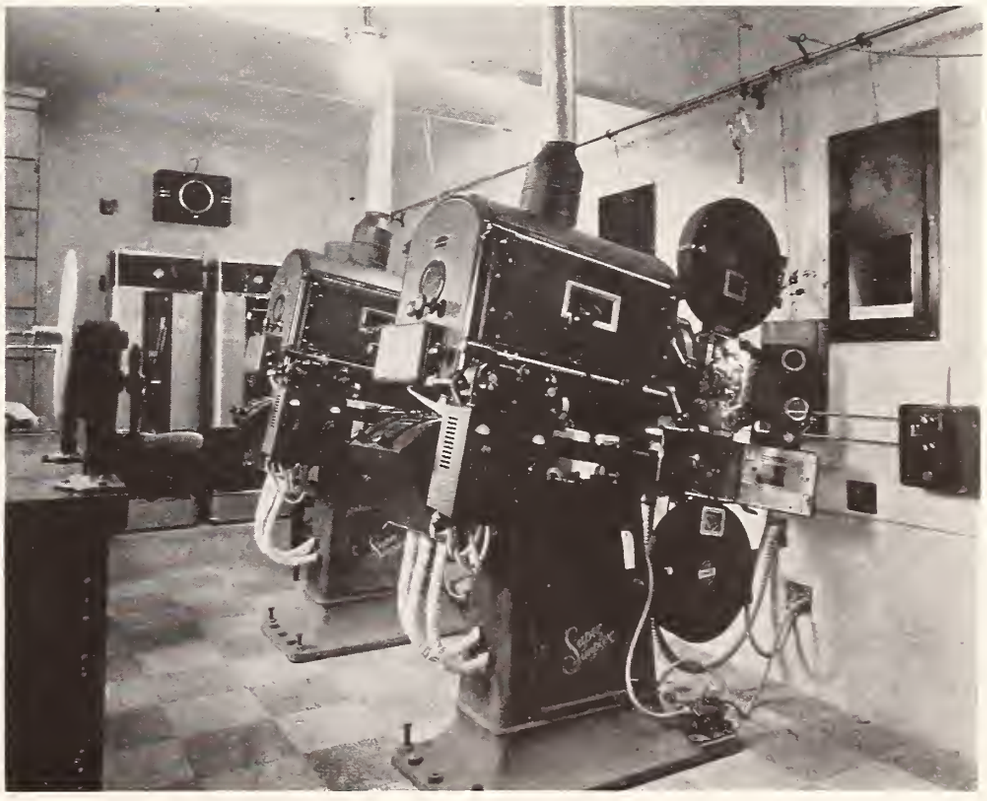
Planning for Projection Standards

Examining an actual projection system in the light of modern practice

EFFORTS to develop standards for the guidance of theatre operators and designers in the planning of the more critical provisions of the motion picture theatre find justification in the efforts made to apply them practically, for the greater satisfaction of the motion picture public. An interesting case of this is the theatre recently constructed in Mexico City by Manuel Angel Fernandez. Mr. Fernandez is an associate member of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers. A letter from him follows:

"I am enclosing photographs of the new Estrella theatre which I have built in Mexico City. Several houses here have seating capacities of over 5,000, with screen size up to 32 feet wide, illuminated with suprex arcs at 65 amperes and using projection lenses from 2¾ to 3¼ inches. All these large houses have the projection rooms placed under the front balcony to be near as possible to the screen. They all try to give a show with screen illumination of only 4 to 5 foot-candles, measured with the projector without film and the shutter running. The maximum viewing distance in these theatres is from 170 to 195 feet.

"The Estrella's viewing distance is 117 feet. The screen is 22½ feet wide, and we use 4¼-inch Super-Cinephor coated lenses. The light source is high-intensity operated at 135 amperes, 55 volts at the arc. We have a special condenser and mirror relay system with an optical aperture of f/1.9, fully covering the projection lens and giving the Estrella 15 to 18 foot-candles on the screen.



"The screen border is gray. Projectors are Simplex E-7's with double shutters. All walls and ceiling of the auditorium are acoustically corrected with Sabinite plaster and U. S. Gypsum Quietile and Blendtex tile. The sound system is an RCA Photophone, Type PG-41.

"An inspector from a distributing company told me that he found the projection of the houses having screens 32 feet wide to be perfect, that all auditoriums should be completely dark, that the screen illumination in my theatre was entirely too bright. I feel I am following the studies and recommendations of the Projection Practice Committee in design, construction and equipment. If I am wrong I will very much appreciate your comment."

The presentation of motion pictures in Mexico City is essentially no different in its requirements for quality performance from that elsewhere, and Mr. Fernandez' request for comment has suggested a symposium to which those familiar with good practice in theatre design generally, and with SMPE projection recommendations in particular, might contribute with benefit to many besides the owner of the Estrella. Ben Schlanger, New York theatre architect, comments:

"I find that the picture size and amount of light projected for the picture for the Estrella theatre is according to good practice and that such conditions offer more visual comfort to the viewer than if a larger picture of less illumination were to be used. However, the walls in the Estrella auditorium appear, from the photographs, to be rather light in color, therefore they probably reflect back to the eyes of the patrons an amount of light which may prove disturbing. It would be advisable to paint a darker color on the surfaces immediately adjoining the screen opening—that is, the area from the curtain to the beginning of the balcony facia against the side wall.

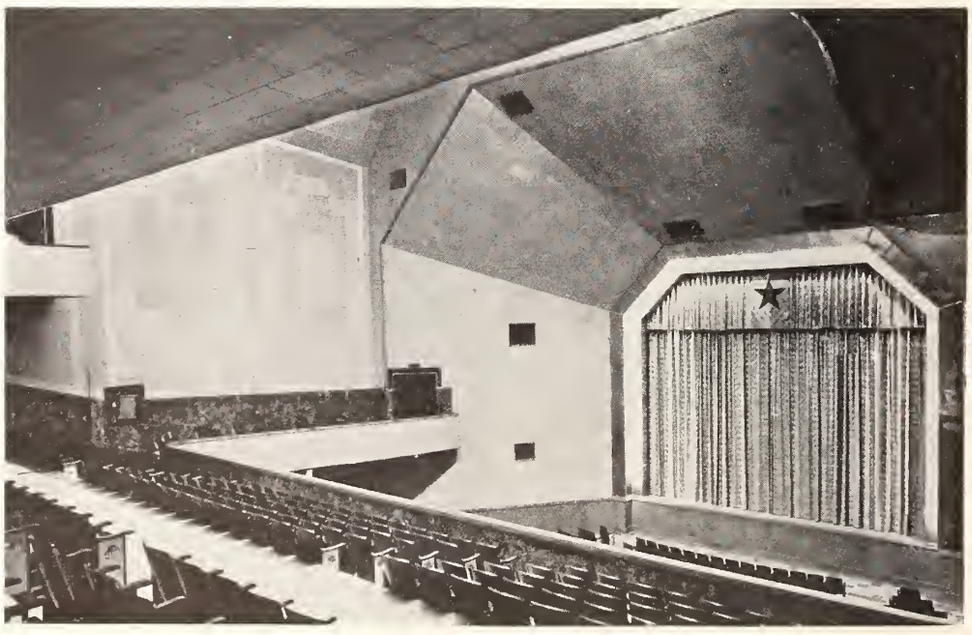
"Any need for darker paint here could have been avoided if these surfaces had been designed in such angularities, or corrugations, as would control or redirect screen light reflections.

"Dark auditoriums are not only unnecessary, but undesirable where sufficient light is given to the screen image. It is understandable that dark auditoriums would be resorted to where screen illumination is as low as 4 or 5 foot-candles. A dark auditorium does not create a comfortable condition. It merely avoids further washing out of a screen image which is too dim to begin with!"

John J. Sefing, who has been specifying projection provisions for many years, contributes:

"In determining the proper size of the screen for a theatre there are many things that should be carefully considered, and prominent among these are the sightlines and viewing distances. One theatre may have just as many seats as another, yet will require a different size of screen. The length of the throw has very little effect on screen brightness—it is really the area to be covered that matters.

"From experience and study we have found that the width of the screen should be equal to approximately one-sixth the distance from the screen to the rear row of seats, and that the screen should not be less than 0.87-foot for each foot of screen width.



"One may assume that the meter readings of foot-candle illumination at the screen that are referred to in Mr. Fernandez' letter are correct, although such readings are commonly inaccurate because of improper handling of the meter. We may be certain that a theatre having only from 4 to 5 foot-candles of screen illumination is falling far short of a satisfactory presentation of the picture. At least 12 foot-candles are required, especially for color pictures.

"A suprex arc operating at 65 amperes will produce approximately 7,200 lumens of light at the screen, whereas a high-intensity lamp at about 120 amperes, with 55 volts at the arc, will produce approximately 5,750 lumens.

"Finally, there cannot be too much light on the screen with any equipment yet available. Projection standards today, which have been largely brought about by the characteristics of present-day film product and the demands of a more discerning public, require all the light we can reasonably get for proper definition of the image."

And finally, the conditions that Mr. Fernandez cites, both in his own theatre and in the larger houses with 32-foot screens and 4 to 5 foot-candles screen illumination, were referred to Sylvan Harris, editor of the SMPE Journal, who agreeing in principle with Mr. Schlanger and Mr. Seting, points out, "The standard screen brightness that has been established by Society of Motion Picture Engineers ranges from 9 to 14 foot-lamberts, and if we assume that the screen has a reflection factor of 0.8, the illumination should not be less than 11 foot-candles. Calculating on the basis of the information given, it appears that the screen illumination in the Estrella is higher than recommended, being in the neighborhood of 19 to 22 foot-lamberts. However, we must remember that screens deteriorate rather rapidly, and that of the Estrella, at the time the measurements were made, was new."

It may also be added that the Estrella's available light provides a good margin to allow for screen deterioration without crowding the projection light equipment.

F. H. Richardson's COMMENT

The Other Side of the Film Mutilation Story

I AM DOING something now that is very seldom done in this department—namely, laying before you a rather long letter, exactly as it was received, without any change whatever. I am not telling you who wrote it, or where it is from, for obvious reasons. Here it is:

F. H. R.

"Dear Mr. Richardson: It is with great regret that I learned of your recent illness, and you have my sincere wish that your recovery will be complete. I operate in a small theatre. There are no doubt thousands of other theatres like this one, but when I get 'down in the dumps' I become obsessed with the idea that no other projectionist has to contend with the penny-pinching that happens here.

"My equipment has an excellent rating with the State Insurance Department, although to my own personal knowledge it has not been overhauled in over two years. Owing to the condition of the prints that come in, I absolutely have to re-cue. This is a statement that I am more than a little ashamed of, but it is true [And I have good reason to believe you.—F. H. R.].

"Upon first taking this job I used standard cues—or the vast number of suspicious looking marks that go with them, or are substituted for them. This was more or less uncertain of results. My boss was surprised to find I didn't take a grease pencil and practically write the history of the British Navy on seven or eight frames. I tried the grease pencil and I either was too modest to really use it, or too weak. When these marks showed up, they were messy in appearance even though I used a template for putting the 'cues' in place, and the last show at night was a smeary example of sloppy motion picture projection if there ever was one.

"I received a pamphlet describing a cue-marker. I felt this was not to be recommended for the very best projection practice; however, it had the advantage that it admits white light to the screen, making it unnecessary to cue more than one frame, even on the lightest scenes, where the diffusion of the slightly roughened celluloid will cause a darkened image.

"I do not in the least believe in any type of film mutilation, but for a while I am observing the matter from the standpoint that we buy prints which are supposedly in good condition, and when the cues are scattered for the last 100 feet of every reel and the show has to go on about five hours after we begin to inspect it, it is rather late to bawl out the exchange, either politely or in the way I really feel about it.

"You may ask why I have to cue every reel of my shows. Here are my excuses, which I sincerely consider to be answers. My equipment is Simplex with rear shutter attachments, Syncrofilm soundheads with tandem cloth fabric belt drives that seem to be larger than are usually used, though they fit the pulley and flywheel groove perfectly. This assortment is driven by a ¼-h.p. motor about twice the size of any others I have ever seen. The mechanisms are very free turning—so much so I can turn them by pulling down the take-up belt with no great effort. In fact, this is the means I use of setting the shutter for framing.

"This equipment does not pick up speed. It simply starts, and if I slacken the motor belts any, the machines won't get up to speed; so I have quick pick-up, and when I use standard cues it is necessary for me to thread on "start" and run in to exactly halfway between '10' and '9'. That gives me a perfect changeover. In fact, if I am three frames nearer '10' I run a back flash, so I must have approximately four frames leeway when I change over.

"Our prints do not have leaders that are complete, and very often I haven't quite enough leader to reach the take-up, consequently I decided to change my system. I now thread two frames before '3' and turn the film in by hand and stop on '3'. This seems to be enough to take up all gear and chain back lash as well to put tension between the last sprocket and the take-up. I cue my start correspondingly, allowing 3 feet, 6 inches from the very end of the reel and make as nearly a perfect changeover as I think I really will ever be able to make.

"Yes, it's mutilation, but—"

"Yes, this is film mutilation, and I consider it about the worst kind. I do not try to excuse myself by saying that I cue only one frame, because I fully realize that if this one frame is not what some other projectionist is accustomed to, who might have the same system (and there are such fellows), this is an open invitation to add anywhere from three to a dozen similar cues. But I do not see any other way unless exchanges do what they are paid for and keep the leaders, cues and splices in some kind of usable condition. It seems reasonable that if the exchanges do this much of their part, then bill the theatre or the responsible projectionist for every damaged or missing frame of film, perhaps no one will have to recue—and if one does, one is likely to be far less apt to repeat the process.

"In the meantime I am doing wrong, but under the circumstances I see no way to do differently, although if there is a way and I am told of it, you can bet that I will change my 'system' in a hurry."

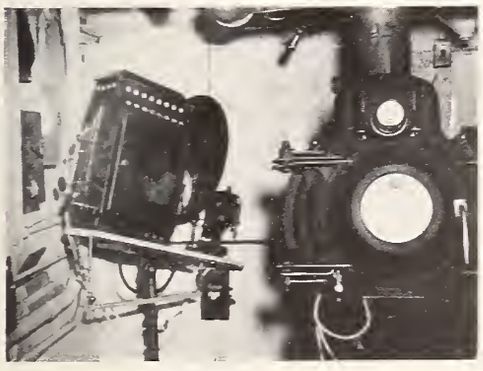
This letter should speak volumes to the manager of this and other theatres. It should also make the exchanges realize their part of the responsibility for print conditions. Obviously, this man wants to do what is right, but since it is a case of getting some sort of pictures on the screen, or losing his job, he chooses the lesser of two evils.



I'd like to hear from some of you other fellows regarding the procedure above set forth. We are trying to improve projection, and only when such conditions are placed before us by the men who are actually confronted with them in his work, can we best work toward improvement.

Presenting a "Workshop" and Pertinent Ideas

IT IS ALWAYS fine to meet new friends in this interesting field of ours, and many are the ones I have made in the past when someone has written in, making himself and his problems known. It is especially nice to keep these friends through the years, therefore any letter which arrives has interesting possibilities. For example, from Portland, Ind., comes a letter by one of the "boys" who is a friend of long standing, both of mine and of some of the rest of you who read this column regularly—R. W. Flanding of the Hines theatre in Portland, who closes his letter, "Yours for Better Projection and Projectionists." Says Brother Flanding:

"It has been a long, long time since I wrote you last, but never yet have I missed your articles in BETTER THEATRES—and I never will.

"So the boys are calling for pictures of 'work shops'? Here is one which I hope you can use. It is a snapshot of the Hines projection room, which is 11 feet square with a 7½-foot ceiling. Lamps are Peerless Magnarc, fed by Hertner 50-ampere generator. Sound is RCA, projectors Simplex E-7's. Our amplifiers, and a Golde automatic rewind and workbench are out of the picture (at the rear wall).

"The 'spotlight'? Well, you know the saying, "They laughed when I sat down to play"! Many laugh at me, but I get a kick out of trying to make something out of what I got. The lamp is an ordi-

Can you afford to be without

SIMPLEX HIGH PROJECTION ARC LAMPS?

Satisfactory Projection Dictates Their Use

There was a time, perhaps, when you couldn't afford high intensity projection, so you suffered along with the dim, yellow light of your low intensities.

But today you can afford modern projection with the Simplex High, a low cost lamp for theatres of up to 800 seats, using screens as large as 18 feet in width.

This one-kilowatt lamp projects twice as much light as your low intensities with only slightly higher overall operating costs. It projects the brilliant, snow-white light so necessary to the projection of colored pictures, a light of the same characteristics as that under which the pictures were produced in Hollywood.

See the Simplex High in your own theatre and see the difference.
